

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

3 1761 01449732 5

3

Early English Poets.

ROBERT HERRICK.

11/

PRINTED BY ROBERT ROBERTS,
BOSTON.

11 a

Robert Hearick.

Engraved by W. Collins after the original in Hesperides 1828. Enlarged.

Early English Poets. 11

THE
COMPLETE POEMS
OF
ROBERT HERRICK.

EDITED, WITH
Memorial-Introduction and Notes,
BY THE
REV. ALEXANDER B. GROSART.

IN THREE VOLUMES.—VOL. I.

London:
CHATTO AND WINDUS, PICCADILLY.
1876.

IV

1911

PR
3510
A5G76
1876
v. 1

15339
16/9/91

8

To ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE, Esq.

MY DEAR SIR,

It is a very great pleasure to be allowed to dedicate this first adequate edition of the Poetry of HERRICK—to you. I asked this, in order to express my sense of the privilege with which you honour me in your old-fashionedly long and full letters on literary matters; and also, of the rare combination in your person, of supreme original genius in many directions with the most painstaking and laborious research into our earlier literature, and a swift, almost prodigal recognition of others, whether dead or living.

No more than can any, will you admire everything in the Hesperides. But I shall be disappointed if you do not ratify my decision to reproduce the whole rather than excise.

I have worked prolongedly and thoroughly on these three volumes. I place them beneath penetrative but most human eyes in yours.

I am,

My dear Sir,

Ever faithfully,

ALEXANDER B. GROSART.

15)

Preface.

THERE have been EIGHT complete and distinct editions of the Poems of HERRICK, since he himself, in 1647-8, published his "Hesperides, or Works Both Humane and Divine of ROBERT HERRICK, Esq.,"—the 'Divine' moiety being dated 1647 (=1647-8), and separately paged and forming the closing and not the opening portion of the book. It seems clear that a very large impression must have been taken of the first edition; for it sufficed for the demands of the Cavaliers and of The Restoration and until well on in the 19th century. One curious typographical difference in copies of the same-dated volume suggests that the types may have been kept standing for awhile. In the Hesperides page 207, while the catchword "11. Where" is found in some—as in my own—the stanza to which it belongs is dropped out and page 208 commences with

"12. It is vain to sing or stay."

In most copies that I have examined and had reported on, the stanza appears as in our Vol. II. page 129.

To SYLVANUS URBAN, Esq., (NICHOLS)—clarum et venerabile nomen to every one who really loves our olden literature and to whom he is a genuine personality—belongs the honour of having been the first in later times to recall attention to the (then) long-neglected Poet. This was in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1796 and 1797. Following his "Letters" came in 1798 DR. NATHAN DRAKE'S still most pleasant Literary Hours (Vol. III., 1st edition: Nos. 42, 43, and 44, 3rd edition, 1804) on the Life, Writings and Genius of HERRICK, with well-put quotations, and genial if not always accurate criticism. Some years later (1810) Dr. NOTT, of Bristol, published the following:—"Select Poems from the Hesperides or Works both Human and Divine, of Robert Herrick, Esq, with Occasional Remarks by J. N. Accompanied also with the Head, Autographe [sic] and Seal of the Poet. Bristol, Printed and published by J. M. Gutch, 15 Small Street. Sold also by Messrs. Longman, Hurst, Rees, and Orme, Paternoster Row, and I. Miller, 72, Chancery Lane, London, n.d. (8^{vo} pp. viii and 253)." On this Selection the well-known friend of Coleridge and Lamb and other contemporary 'mighties'—Mr. BARRON FIELD (not SOUTHEY as frequently stated) wrote a chatty critique in the Quarterly Review (for August 1810).* Not until

* Peter Cunningham, Esq., in Notes and Queries, 1st s. x. 27, compared with Walford's edition of the Hesperides, p. iii., and 1846 edition. (infra) I. xviii.

1823 was a complete edition furnished. This was done with admirable carefulness and enthusiasm by the late accomplished THOMAS MAITLAND, Esq., of Dundrennan, Advocate, afterwards as a Judge of the Scottish Court of Session, named LORD DUNDRENNAN. It was in two volumes, post 8^{vo}, and a few copies in small 4^{to}: "Edinburgh Reprinted for W. and C. Tait. MDCCCXXIII." On the title-page is a woodcut of the bust of Herrick with his autograph. Prefixed is a Biographical Notice (pp. v.—xxx.): Vol. I. pp. 288: Vol. II., pp. 296, followed by pp. 38 Table of Contents to both volumes. In 1825 a limited number of "remainder" copies of Lord Dundrennan's edition having been purchased by the late WILLIAM PICKERING, he gave them fresh title-pages with his original motto "Perennis et Fragens," and a steel portrait by WORTHINGTON. Otherwise the books are identical.

In August 1822, in The Retrospective Review (Vol. V. p. 156) Lord Dundrennan's edition was examined in a delightful Paper—the Writer of which one would gladly know. In 1839 appeared "Selections from the Hesperides and Works of the Rev. Robert Herrick (Antient) Vicar of Dean-Prior, Devon. By the late CHARLES SHORT, Esq., F.R.S. and F.S.A. London: John Murray, Albemarle Street. MDCCCXXXIX. (pp.

xiv. and 216.) In 1844 was published in paper covers 2 vols. 16mo. an unpretentious but not at all an unworthy little edition intrinsically "edited by HENRY G. CLARKE" (London: H. G. Clarke & Co.). In 1846 came William Pickering's typographically beautiful and attractive edition: 2 vols., cr. 8^{vo}, and a few on large paper. The Editor was neither vigilant nor capable. The Writer of the Memoir disclaimed the editing.† He was the late SAMUEL WELLER SINGER. He might equally have relinquished any merit for his Memoir seeing that as Mr. Hazlitt not unjustly remarks, it is "but a lame paraphrase of that attached to the edition of 1823," and altogether is perfunctorily done.‡ In 1848 was published "Selections from Herrick for Translation into Latin Verse with a short Preface by the Rev. A. J. Maclean, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, Principal of Brighton College (London: George Bell; pp. 79, 16mo.) Other complete editions appeared in 1850 and 1852—each in 2 vols. That of 1852, two vols. 12mo., was published by Bohn (Vol. I. pp. 213: Vol. II., pp. 238). In 1856, Pickering's of 1846 was reprinted in the United States: "Boston: Little, Brown, & Co.: Vol. I., pp. 340: Vol. II., pp. 298)

† Notes and Queries, 1st s. Vol. I. p. 459.

‡ Vol. I. p. v.

In 1859 we have the following: "The Poetical Works of Robert Herrick, containing his "Hesperides" and "Noble Numbers." With a Biographical Memoir by E. Walford, M.A., Late Scholar of Baliol Coll., Oxford. London: Reeves and Turner, 238 Strand. 1859. (Post 8^{vo}, pp. xi. and 608); and finally in 1869, this:—"Hesperides the Poems and other Remains of Robert Herrick now First Collected. Edited by W. Carew Hazlitt. London: John Russell Smith, Soho Square, 1869. (2 vols., cr. 8^{vo}: Vol. I. pp. xxx. and 1—255: Vol. II., pp. 256—526: copies also on large paper). Mr. HAZLITT disavows responsibility for the text, which is virtually that of Pickering's of 1846; but in the Biographical Notice he has intercalated some additions and corrections within brackets, and in Appendices added Poems from MSS., etc. Of these and the different editions enumerated more will be found in the Memorial-Introduction (II. Critical).

For all these Eight editions the admirer of Herrick is grateful. None is without its own merits. Therefore none ought to be undervalued.

Now for the present edition. It is distinguished from preceding by these things:—

1. The text is for the first time reproduced in integrity
(a) from the Author's own edition of 1647-8—

Italics, capitals and punctuation being his own, save that his list of errata and a few others overlooked by him have been put right: (b) from other books and from MSS. with exact collation of the originals whether printed or MS.

2. For the first time an effort has been made to annotate and illustrate wherever there seemed a call for it. Hitherto except Dr. Nott's occasional Notes to his "Selections," nothing has been done worthwhile even to explain words and allusions, or to inform on names, &c. The Author's own few Notes bear his initial (H); a few from Dr. Nott bear his initial (N). For the rest, in Thomas Fuller's phrase "my meanness is responsible" (Abel Redivivus: Ep. ded. 1651).
3. For the first time the facts and circumstances of the Life are fully told. Hitherto the Memoirs have been meagre and fragmentary. On almost every point in the Biography new information is now given, previous errors corrected, and old data brought into their places.
4. For the first time an attempt at an adequate Estimate of these Poems and of the Man is made. This forms the second division of the Memorial-Introduction.

-
5. For the first time there is given a thorough Glossarial Index, Index of first lines, and other helpful apparatus.
 6. The Portrait (on steel) is for the first time true to the original of 1647-8. Of it I speak in relation to others elsewhere.

As I must fully concede, Herrick is one of those Poets of whom more than most of equal kind and quality of genius, a Selection rather than a Collection in entirety, might plausibly be deemed preferable and at this day sufficient. Dr. Nott's and Short's and Maclean's were very acceptable, as far as they went; and still more so I do not doubt will be Mr. FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE'S announced "Selections" for the "Golden Treasury" series of Messrs. Macmillan & Co. "Selections" such as the last, will carry Herrick whither we would scarcely choose to have the whole carried; for we would not choose to have our wives or children come on the sorrowful nastinesses of too many of the (so-called) Epigrams and occasional lines of the other Poems. But seeing that the existence of Nott's and Short's and Maclean's and now of Mr. Palgrave's "Selections" makes it unnecessary for such to possess Herrick completely, there remains consideration for others. For my part I am clear that in the interest of students of our Literature and of our national morals and progress, it is a thing of truthfulness that any book that is called for ought to be furnished honestly. Only so can genuine verdicts be arrived at ; only so can the History of our national Literature be written in the knowledge of its formative and informing elements ; and above all, only so is it possible to solve questions that are thickening on us, questions that take us to the very roots of our national life and activity. Personally, I frankly acknowledge that I should not elect to publish completely either Herrick or Donne or others ; but since they are imperatively and encreasingly demanded, it is, I must repeat, a thing of truth as against falsehood that the Works shall be made accessible in integrity of text—all save students of our Literature being warned off to “ Selections ” specially provided. It isn't a matter of casuistry but of indisputable honour if the thing is to be done at all—not to say that your compiler of “ Selections ” like your fine-nosed searcher after heresy, is too often extremely unpoetic, unsympathetic and narrow in his vision, and grubs up the Passion-flower or moth-wing-like Pansy because forsooth, a slug has trailed across it, sightless to the glory of bloom and tint as to the iridescence of even the slug's pathway.

I have right cordially to thank several literary friends for willing aid rendered me in these volumes. Foremost, as usual, is my very dear friend DR. BRINSLEY NICHOLSON with his ever-fecund resources and untiring painstaking, and next to him MR. FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE. When I had finished my annotation, the 'copy' was submitted to these two good friends, with the result of enriching my Notes considerably. The Rev. W. E. BUCKLEY, M.A., of Middleton Cheney, Banbury, the Rev. THOMAS ASHE, M.A. (now of Crewe), JOHN SHELLY, Esq., Plymouth, GEORGE H. WHITE, Esq., Glenthorn, Devon, have favoured me with their occasional notes and suggestions. For genealogical and other data I owe emphatic thanks to COLONEL CHESTER, of Bermondsey, the Rev. THOMAS PELHAM DALE, M.A., St. Vedast, London, the Rev. W. T. FREER, M.A., Houghton-on-the-Hill, Leicester, and Miss HERRICK MACAULAY, Leicester, the Rev. L. R. CARTER, M.A., Brantham, Suffolk, the late W. PERRY-HERRICK, Esq., Beaumanor, W. A. ABRAM, Esq., Blackburn, and W. H. CHAPPELL, Esq., London. In certain of the patristic references (all loose) I was helped by PROFESSOR LIGHTFOOT, of Cambridge; and FATHER PURBRICK, of Stonyhurst, as always, freely opened to me the noble Library of the College. I must add that, repeatedly, the Printer of these books (MR. ROBERT ROBERTS, of Boston), who is of the nearly defunct type of literary craftsmen, has laid me under pleasant obligation in various ways.

And so I commend ROBERT HERRICK to the present generation and coming generations :—

“Thou living voice from olden times,
 That like a spirit travellest on
 From lip to lip, from heart to heart
 Linking our own to those long gone :
 ’Tis with a throbbing heart I hear
 Thy well-known voice of harmonies,
 Float—like past boyhood,—on my ear,
 With old ancestral memories !
 Oh ! thou art as an unseen soul
 That communes with us, till we be Quite space-and-time free, blended all
 With thy deep essence lovingly :
 Thou art a stirring note, blown on Imagination’s magic horn,
 But out of date in these dull days,
 When Faith is of her visions shorn.”

(HENRY ELLISON.)

ALEXANDER B. GROSART.

St. George’s Vestry,
 June 19th, 1876.

POSTSCRIPT.

In my Essay I give reasons for rejecting poems ascribed to Herrick by Mr. W. C. Hazlitt in his edition of the Works; here it may be well to repeat that one of the Poems (I. Description of a Woman) that he imagined had not before been printed, appeared in "Wit's Recreations" (1640); and that one of the alleged new pieces (On Julia's Weeping) forms one of the couplets in Hesperides. More remarkable still, instead of the "six or eight" poems of the Hesperides that Mr. Hazlitt states had originally appeared in "Wit's Recreations," no fewer than 62 so appeared—all as noticed in the places.

Contents.

| | PAGE |
|---|----------|
| DEDICATION | v |
| PREFACE | vii |
| MEMORIAL-INTRODUCTION : I. Biographical | xxxii |
| " " II. Critical. | cxi |
| " " Appendix | cclxxvii |
| HESPERIDES | 7-182 |
| Title-page | 3 |
| Verse-Dedication. | 5 |
| The Argument of his Book | 7 |
| To his Muse | 8 |
| To his Booke | 10 |
| Another | 10 |
| Another | 10 |
| To the soure Reader | 11 |
| To his Booke | 11 |
| When he would have his verses read | 11 |
| Upon Julias Recovery | 12 |
| To Silvia to wed | 13 |
| The Parliament of Roses to Julia | 13 |
| No Bashfulnesse in begging | 14 |
| The Frozen Heart | 14 |
| To Perilla | 14 |
| A Song to the Maskers | 15 |
| To Perenna | 16 |
| Treason | 16 |
| Two Things Odious | 16 |
| To his Mistresses | 17 |
| The Wounded Heart | 17 |

| | PAGE |
|--|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| No Loathsomnesse in love | 18 |
| To Anthea | 19 |
| The Weeping Cherry | 19 |
| Soft Musick | 20 |
| The Difference betwixt Kings and Subjects | 20 |
| His Answer to a Question | 20 |
| Upon Julia's Fall | 21 |
| Expences Exhaust | 21 |
| Love what it is | 21 |
| Presence and Absence | 22 |
| No Spouse but a Sister | 22 |
| The Pomander Bracelet | 22 |
| The shooe tying | 23 |
| The Carkanet | 23 |
| His sailing from Julia | 24 |
| How the Wall-flower came first, and why so called | 24 |
| Why Flowers change colour | 25 |
| To his Mistresse objecting to him neither Toying or Talking | 25 |
| Upon the losse of his Mistresses | 27 |
| The Dream | 27 |
| The Vine | 28 |
| To Love | 29 |
| On himselfe | 29 |
| Love's play at Push-pin | 29 |
| The Rosarie | 30 |
| Upon Cupid | 30 |
| The Parcæ, or, Three dainty Destinies. The Arमित | 31 |

| | PAGE |
|---|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| Sorrowes succeed | 31 |
| Cherry-pit | 32 |
| To Robin Red-brest | 32 |
| Discontents in Devon | 32 |
| To his Paternall Countrey | 33 |
| Cherrie-ripe | 33 |
| To his Mistresses | 33 |
| To Anthea | 34 |
| The Vision to Electra | 34 |
| Dreames | 35 |
| Ambition | 35 |
| His request to Julia | 35 |
| Money gets the masterie | 35 |
| The Scar-fire | 35 |
| Upon Silvia, a Mistresse | 36 |
| Cheerfulnesse in Charitie : or, The sweet Sacrifice | 36 |
| Once poore, still penurious | 37 |
| Sweetnesse in Sacrifice | 37 |
| Steame in Sacrifice | 37 |
| Upon Julia's Voice | 37 |
| Againe | 38 |
| All things decay and die | 38 |
| The succession of the foure sweet months | 38 |
| No Shipwrack of Vertue. To a friend | 39 |
| Upon his Sister-in-Law, Mistresse Elizab : Herrick | 39 |
| Of Love. A Sonet | 39 |
| To Anthea | 40 |
| The Rock of Rubies : and The quarrie of Pearls | 41 |
| Conformitie | 41 |

| | PAGE |
|---|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| To the King, Upon his comming with his Army into the West | 41 |
| Upon Roses | 42 |
| To the King and Queene, upon their unhappy distances | 43 |
| Dangers wait on Kings | 43 |
| The Cheat of Cupid : or, The ungentle guest | 43 |
| To the reverend shade of his religious Father | 45 |
| Delight in Disorder | 46 |
| To his Muse | 47 |
| Upon Love | 47 |
| To Dean-bourn, a rude River in Devon : by which sometimes he lived | 48 |
| Kissing Usurie | 49 |
| To Julia | 50 |
| To Laurels | 50 |
| His Cavalier | 51 |
| Zeal required in Love | 51 |
| The Bag of the Bee | 51 |
| Love kill'd by Lack | 52 |
| To his Mistresse | 52 |
| To the generous Reader | 53 |
| To Criticks | 54 |
| Duty to Tyrants | 54 |
| Being once blind, his request to Biancha | 54 |
| Upon Blanch | 55 |
| No want where there's little | 55 |
| Barly-Break : or, Last in Hell | 55 |
| The Definition of Beauty | 55 |

| | PAGE |
|---|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| To Dianeme | 56 |
| To Anthea lying in bed | 56 |
| To Electra | 57 |
| A Country-life: to his Brother, M. Tho: Herrick | 57 |
| Divination by a Daffadill | 64 |
| To the Painter, to draw him a Picture | 65 |
| Upon Cuffe. Epig. | 66 |
| Upon Fone a School-master. Epig. | 66 |
| A Lyrick to Mirth | 66 |
| To the Earle of Westmerland | 67 |
| Against Love | 68 |
| Upon Julia's Riband | 68 |
| The frozen Zone: or, Julia disdainfull | 68 |
| An Epitaph upon a sober Matron | 69 |
| To the Patron of Poets, M. End: Porter | 70 |
| The sadnesse of things for Sapho's sicknesse | 70 |
| Leanders Obsequies | 71 |
| Hope Heartens | 71 |
| Four things make us happy here | 71 |
| His parting from Mrs. Dorothy Keneday | 72 |
| The Teare sent to her from Stanes | 72 |
| Upon one Lillie, who marryed with a maid call'd Rose | 74 |
| An Epitaph upon a child | 74 |
| Upon Scobble. Epig. | 75 |
| The Houre-glasse | 75 |
| His Fare-well to Sack | 76 |
| Upon Glasco. Epig. | 78 |
| Upon Mrs. Eliz: Wheeler, under the name of Amarillis | 79 |

| | PAGE |
|--|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| The Custard | 80 |
| The Myrrha hard-hearted | 80 |
| The Eye | 81 |
| Upon the much lamented, Mr. J. Warr | 81 |
| Upon Gryll | 82 |
| The suspicion upon his over-much familiarity with a Gentlewoman | 82 |
| Single-life most secure | 84 |
| The Curse. A Song | 84 |
| The wounded Cupid. Song | 84 |
| To Dewes. A Song | 85 |
| Some comfort in calamity | 86 |
| The Vision | 86 |
| Love me little, love me long | 87 |
| Upon a Virgin kissing a Rose | 87 |
| Upon a Wife that dyed mad with Jealousie | 87 |
| Upon the Bishop of Lincolne's Imprisonment | 88 |
| Disswasions from Idlenesse | 89 |
| Upon Strut | 90 |
| An Epithalamie to Sir Thomas Southwell and his Ladie | 90 |
| Teares are Tongues | 100 |
| [Epitaph] Upon a young mother of many children | 100 |
| To Electra | 100 |
| His wish | 101 |
| His Protestation to Perilla | 101 |
| Love perfumes all parts | 102 |
| To Julia | 102 |
| On himselfe | 103 |

| | PAGE |
|--|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| Vertue is sensible of suffering | 103 |
| The cruell Maid | 103 |
| To Dianeme | 105 |
| To the King, To cure the Evill | 105 |
| His misery in a Mistresse | 106 |
| Upon Jollies wife | 107 |
| To a Gentlewoman objecting to him his gray haire | 107 |
| To Cedars | 108 |
| Upon Cupid | 108 |
| How Primroses came green | 109 |
| To Jos : Lo : Bishop of Exeter | 109 |
| Upon a black Twist, rounding the Arme of the Countesse of Carlile | 110 |
| 3 On himselfe | 111 |
| Upon Pagget | 111 |
| A Ring presented to Julia | 112 |
| To the Detracter | 113 |
| Upon the same | 114 |
| Julia's Petticoat | 114 |
| To Musick | 115 |
| Distrust | 115 |
| Corinna's going a Maying | 116 |
| On Julia's breath | 119 |
| Upon a Child. An Epitaph | 120 |
| A Dialogue betwixt Horace and Lydia, Trans- lated Anno 1627, and set by Mr. Ro : Ramsey | 120 |
| —The captiv'd Bee : or, The Little Filcher | 121 |
| Upon Prig | 123 |

| | PAGE |
|--|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| Upon Batt | 123 |
| An Ode to Master Endymion Porter, upon his Brothers death | 124 |
| To his dying Brother, Master William Herrick . | 125 |
| The Olive Branch | 126 |
| Upon Much-more. Epig. | 127 |
| To Cherry-blossomes | 127 |
| How Lillies came white | 127 |
| To Pansies | 128 |
| On Gelli-flowers begotten | 128 |
| The Lilly in a Christal | 129 |
| To his Booke | 131 |
| Upon some women | 132 |
| Supreme fortune falls soonest | 133 |
| The Welcome to Sack | 133 |
| Impossibilities to his friend | 137 |
| Upon Luggs. Epig. | 138 |
| Upon Gubbs. Epig. | 138 |
| To live merrily, and to trust to Good Verses . | 138 |
| Faire dayes : or, Dawnes deceitfull | 141 |
| Lips Tonguelesse | 141 |
| To the Fever, not to trouble Julia | 142 |
| To Violets | 143 |
| Upon Bunce. Epig. | 144 |
| To Carnations. A Song | 144 |
| To the Virgins, to make much of Time | 144 |
| Safety to look to ones selfe | 145 |
| To his Friend, on the untuneable Times | 146 |
| His Poetrie his Pillar | 146 |

| | PAGE |
|--|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| Safety on the Shore | 147 |
| A Pastorall upon the Birth of Prince Charles, Presented to the King, and Set by Mr. Nic : | |
| Laniere | 148 |
| To the Lark | 150 |
| The Bubble. A Song | 151 |
| A Meditation for his Mistresse | 152 |
| The bleeding hand : or, The sprig of Eglantine given to a maid | 153 |
| Lyrick for Legacies | 153 |
| A Dirge upon the Death of the Right Valiant Lord, Bernard Stuart | 154 |
| To Perenna, a Mistresse | 155 |
| Great boast, small rost | 155 |
| Upon a Bleare-ey'd woman | 156 |
| The Fairie Temple : or, Oberon's Chappell. Dedicated to Mr. John Merrifield, Coun- sellor at Law | 156 |
| The Temple | 156 |
| To Mistresse Katherine Bradshaw, the lovely, that crowned him with Laurel | 163 |
| The Plaudite, or end of life | 164 |
| To the most vertuous Mistresse Pot, who many times entertained him | 165 |
| To Musique, to becalme his Fever | 165 |
| Upon a Gentlewoman with a sweet Voice | 167 |
| Upon Cupid | 167 |
| Upon Julia's breasts | 168 |
| Best to be merry | 168 |

| | PAGE |
|---|------|
| HESPERIDES (continued) | |
| The Changes. To Corinna | 168 |
| No Lock against Letcherie | 169 |
| Neglect | 169 |
| 4 Upon himselfe | 170 |
| Upon a Physitian | 170 |
| Upon Sudds a Laundresse | 170 |
| To the Rose. Song | 170 |
| Upon Guesse. Epig. | 171 |
| To his Booke | 171 |
| Upon a painted Gentlewoman | 171 |
| Upon a crooked Maid | 172 |
| Draw Gloves | 172 |
| To Musick, to becalme a sweet-sick-youth | 172 |
| To the High and Noble Prince, George, Duke, Marquesse, and Earle of Buckingham | 173 |
| His Recantation | 173 |
| The comming of good luck | 174 |
| The Present : or, The Bag of the Bee | 174 |
| On Love | 174 |
| The Hock-cart, or Harvest home : To the Right Honourable, Mildmay, Earle of Westmor- land | 175 |
| The Perfume | 178 |
| Upon her Voice | 178 |
| Not to love | 178 |
| To Musick. A Song | 179 |
| To the Western wind | 179 |
| Upon the death of his Sparrow. An Elegie | 180 |
| To Primroses fill'd with morning-dew | 181 |

XXIX

MEMORIAL-INTRODUCTION.

XXX

Memorial-Introduction.

I. BIOGRAPHICAL.

HERRICK himself proudly recalls his “deare ancestrie” generally, and specifically works into his Book “of the Just”—of which more in the sequel—celebrations of many members of his family on both sides, as well direct as indirect (by marriages). It seems therefore only fitting that in the outset his Biographer should avail himself of recently-given details of Pedigree, corrective of and supplementary to Nichols, and others.¹

The earliest known seat in England of the Herricks was Stretton Magna or Great Stretton, (Leicestershire)

¹ Nichols' History and Antiquities of the County of Leicester (Vol. II. part ii. p. 615 and pp. 502-3) has been displaced in so far as the district embraced by the later book is concerned, by the following most laborious local history: “The History of Market Harborough with that portion of the Hundred of Gartree, Leicestershire, containing the parishes of Baggrave, Billesdon [etc., etc., etc.]with an account of the Lords of the Manors and their Pedigrees; and a list of the Patrons and Rectors of each Living; a Description of the Churches, Monuments, &c., by John Harwood Hill, B.A., F.S.A., Leicester: printed for the subscribers (and not and which is sometimes called Bishop Stretton, from being the birth-place of Robert Eyrick, Bishop of Lichfield, who in 1378 founded a 'Chantry' there. It is told of him that at the time of his consecration he was "obliged to have some one to read the profession of canonical obedience before the Archbishop, as he could not read"²—no unusual thing then. Earlier still, viz. in 1334, Isabella, wife of Ivo Herrick—Ivo suggesting the Norse traditionary lineage from Erik—"recovered seisin in relation to the Manor of Stretton, from Matilda, daughter of Ivo Eyrick, of three and a half acres and one messuage."³ The following is the Pedigree of Eyrick of Great Stretton.

—Eyrick of Stretton, temp Henry III. = —

Alan Eyrick, of Stretton = — 2. Henry Eyrick, of Stretton = —

Robert Eyrick, of Stretton. John Eyrick, of Stretton = —

Robert Eyrick, of Stretton = Joanna

1. Sir William Eyrick, of Stretton, Kent, from whom descend the Eyricks of Houghton. 2. Robert Eyrick, Bp. of Lichfield, ob. 1385. 3. John Eyrick, of Adelena, Stretton.⁴

published) by Ward and Sons, 1875, folio pp. xvi. and 345. In these genealogical details Mr. Hill is my authority, unless otherwise marked. ² Hill, as before, p. 110. ³ Ibid. ⁴ Ibid., p. 123.

The Stretton Eyricks—as represented by Sir William Eyrick, Knt.—are next found at Houghton, anciently called Houkton, Hohtone, Houltone, and Houghton-on-the-Hill, about six miles from Leicester. The story of this ‘Lordship’ is a stirring and various-coloured one. Many lustrous names figure in it, especially the Zouches or La Zouches, Ferrers, Erdingtons, and Beaumonts, and later the Freers. The Church—dedicated to St. Catharine—lies in a light of ancient glory. One of the most venerable ‘Rectors’ was Tobias Heyricke B.D. 1605, who died in 1627. The branches of the Houghton Herricks are manifold. I can only record the more noticeable. As at Stretton the spelling of the name was Ericke, Eyreke or Eyrick. Robert Ericke of Houghton, had two sons, by Agnes his wife: Robert, who died without issue, and Thomas, “of Houghton-on-the-Hill, Gent,” who afterwards settled at Leicester. This Thomas is the first of the name that appears in the Corporation-Books of Leicester, where he is mentioned as a member of that body in 1511. He died “about six years afterwards, most probably in early life, as he never executed the office of chief magistrate of Leicester.” His Will is dated 1517. Nicholas and John, the two sons of this Thomas Eyrick, became freemen of Leicester in 1535. Nicholas, the eldest, was Mayor of Leicester in 1552, and "had, it is believed, two sons, Thomas and John." John, as appears by the Corporation-Books was made free in 1568; and he had a son (probably named John) for "old John, in his Will dated in 1588, gives a small legacy to his godson, the son of his cousin John Eyrick; and it is well known that in those days uncles called their nephews cousins."⁵ John Eyrick, the younger son of Thomas, was twice Mayor of Leicester; and by Mary, his wife, daughter of John Bond, of Ward End, otherwise Little Bromwich, in the county of Warwick, Esquire, had five sons and seven daughters.⁶ The following curious epitaph of this John Heyrick and Mary, his wife, is in St. Martin's Church, Leicester, on an upright marble, at the East end of the North aisle, in what is still called Heyrick's Chapel:—

"Here lieth buried the body of JOHN HEYRICKE, late of this parish, whodeparted this life y^e 2nd of April, 1589, beinge about the age of 76. He did marrie the daughter of John Bond, of Wardend, of the county of Warwicke, Esquire, who lived with y^e saide Marie in one house, full 52 years; and in all that time never buried man, woman, nor childe, though they were sometimes 20 in a household. He had issue by the said Marie, 5 sonns and 7 daughters, viz: Robert, Nicholas, Thomas, John, and William; and daughters, Ursula, Agnes, Elizabeth, Ellen, Christian and Alice. The said John was Mayor of this towne in anno 1559; and again in anno 1572. The said MARIE departed this life y^e 8th of December, 1611, being of the age 97 years. She did see before her departure, of her children, and her children's children, to the number of 142."⁷

⁵ See this curiously illustrated by "The London Prodigal" who invariably calls his uncle "uncle," while the uncle as invariably calls the nephew "cousin."

⁶ Ibid, p. 118. Interesting data are here given on all these "sons and daughters"—not necessary to be furnished by us.

Robert Heyricke, the first son of John and Mary thus celebrated, was three times Mayor of Leicester, and was M.P. for the borough, with John Chyppyndale, Esq., "the indenture of whose return is dated 11th of October.—30 Elizabeth."⁸ He had large property, being possessed of the Franciscan or Grey, and the Augustus Friars, in Leicester, with a considerable estate adjoining to the latter, besides other estates; and although he had eleven children, was a great benefactor to the town of Leicester.

In 1598, "were granted from the Herald's office, unto Robert and William Herrick, the sonns of John Heyrick, the sonne of Thomas Herick, alias Erick, of

⁷ Ibid, p. 118.

⁸ Ibid, pp. 118-19.

Houghton, in the county of Leicester, gent, and their posterity for ever.—A certain creast or badge, ivy, on a wreath of these colours, a bull's head Argent, yssuing forth of a laurell garland, the mussell, ears, and hornes tipped Sable, to be annexed and borne with their auncient coat of armes, which is, Silver, a fess verrey Or, and Gules.”⁹

The old Alderman Heyrick died in 1618, and is thus described on an upright stone in St. Martin's.—

“ Here lieth the bodie of Robert Herick, Ironmonger and Alderman of Leicester, who had been thrise Maior thereof. Hee was the eldest son to John Herrick and Marie, and had two sonnes and 9 daughters by one wife, with whom he lived 51 years. At his death he gave away 16 pound 10 shillings a yeare to good uses. He lived 78 years : and after dyed very godly the 14th of June, 1618. All flesh is grasse : but younge and ould must die : and so we pass in judgment by and by.”¹

The Portrait of this Robert Herrick is still preserved in the Town Hall of Leicester, thus inscribed :

“ His picture whom you here see,
When he is dead and rotten ;
By this shall he remembered be,
When he would be forgotten.

⁹ Ibid, p. 119.

¹ Ibid, p. 116.

The descendants of these Leicester Herricks gave various clergymen to the Church of England and eminent citizens to London and elsewhere.² Two things in their descent and intermarriages claim passing notice from their linking on to still greater modern names, viz., 1. That an Abigail Erick, of Leicester, (probably of the family of the first Nicholas) married in 1665, Jonathan Swift, of Leicestershire, father of the Dean of St. Patricks. 2. That Anne, daughter of the Rev. Samuel Heyrick, M.A., Rector of Bramton Ash, co. Northampton, married the Rev. Aulay Macaulay, vicar of Rothley and brother of Zachary Macaulay, father of Lord Macaulay.

Turning back now to Nicholas Heyrick, the second son of John and Mary of the epitaph before given, he was "articled in or before the year 1556, to a goldsmith of eminence in Cheapside, London, in which place and profession he afterwards himself settled."³ By a lucky accident I have obtained the record of his marriage-license as granted by the Bishop of London. It was issued "8 Dec. 1582" and the parties are described as "Nicholas Herycke, Goldsmith, and Julian Stone, spinster, of the city of London." They were

² Ibid, pp. 119—121.

³ Ibid, p. 121.

“to marry at St. Leonard’s, Bromley, co. Middlesex.”⁴ This Julian Stone is usually described as a daughter of William Stone, of Segenhoe, in Bedfordshire, Esquire ; but Segenhoe did not come to the Stones until 1632 ; so that such description is by prolepsis.⁵ She was sister to Anne, Lady Soame, wife of Sir Stephen Soame, Knight, Lord Mayor of London (1598). Fortunately the Registers of their Parish Church—St. Vedast, Foster Lane, London—escaped the fire ; and I am enabled by the kindness of the present Rector (the Rev. Thomas Pelham Dale, M.A.) to furnish hitherto unknown family details, as follows :—

1. William Hericke sonne to Nicholas Hericke was baptized the xxiii. day of November 1585.

2. Martha Hericke the daughter of Nicholas Hericke was baptized the xxiith day of January, 1586.

3. Mercie the daughter of Nicholas Hericke was baptized the xxiith day of December, 1586.

4. Thomas Hericke sonne to Nicholas Hericke was baptized the viith day of May, 1588.

5. Nicholas Hericke sonne to Nicholas Hericke was baptized the xxijth of April 1589.

6. Anne Hericke the daughter of Nicholas Hericke was baptized the xxvi day of July 1590

7. Robert Hericke sonne to Nicholas Hericke was baptized the xxiii day of August 1591.

⁴ Through Colonel Chester, Bermondsey, London.

⁵ Ibid.,—who has supplied me with the facts.

There was a posthumous son, William (born 1593) as appears by a poem in the Hesperides. The 'Robert' of this Register was our Poet. So that it is seen his great-grandfather was Thomas Eyrick of Houghton-on-the-Hill (ob. 1517)—his grandfather, John Eyrick of Leicester, son of Thomas (ob. 1589)—his father, Nicholas Herrick or Heyrick, 2nd son of John of Leicester. He was named 'Robert' after the famous Robert of Leicester as is proved by a small legacy to him as his 'godsonne.'⁶ Very soon after the birth of Robert a dark shadow fell across the hearth and household in Cheapside—for the father died in 1592, and was buried on "the ixth day" of the month.⁷ Family papers at Beaumanor inform us that the death was caused by a fall from an upper window of his own house. These also reveal that at the time the fall was suspected to have been not accidental but intentional. The Will—which it is our privilege to print for the first time from the original, and which is dated only two days before the funeral, gives no suspicion of suicide. It thus runs—literatim :—

⁶ In his Will in 1617 he leaves "To Robert Heyricke my brother Nicholas's son, my godson, five pounds."

⁷ Usually he is said to have died on the 9th November, but the entry in the Register of Vedast, Foster Lane, is:—"Nicholas Herrick a goldsmith was buried the ixth day of November 1592." This would seem to indicate that he died on the very day of making his Will (7th). He could hardly have been buried on the same day that he died.

“In the name of God Amen The seaventhe Daye of November A thousand ffive hundreth ninety twoe I Nicholas Hericke goldsmith of perfecte memorye in sowle but sicke in bodye Doe make and ordayne this my Last will and testament wherein I Doe commend my Sowle to the handes of Almighty god And my Bodye to be buryed in the parrishe Churche of S^t fosters My worldly goods I will and give as the Lorde hath given me freely in this sorte My state is worthe three thowsand poundes I giue to my Loving wyfe Julyan Hericke the thirde parte which is one thowsand poundes And the twoe partes to be Devided my funeralls being Discharged amongst my six children my twoe Brothers Robert and William chefe overseers And my sonnes Thomas and Nicholas wholle and sole Executors This I request my brethren to see performed Nicholas Hericke Witnesses William Hericke Helyn Holden⁸ V.H.”

This Will is stated by Mr. Hazlitt⁹ and others not to have been forthcoming on the death ; but as it bears

⁸ Letters of Administration were granted in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury 13 Feb. 1592-3 to Robert Hericke, brother of testator, during the minority of Thomas and Nicholas Hericke the sons and executors named in the will, the relict Julian Hericke having renounced. Recorded in Book “Nevell,” folio 95.

⁹ Biographical Notice, as before, p. xiii.

that Letters of Administration were granted in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury so early as Feb. 13th 1592-3, this must be a mistake. All the more deplorable consequently was it that rumours swiftly taken up by Dr. Fletcher, Bishop of Bristol, as High Almoner, led to a claim by him on the whole "goods and chattels" of the alleged suicide. After weary and wearing litigation, the matter was referred to arbitration, and the Bishop was awarded £220 only, "in satisfaction of all pretensions." It was £220 taken graspingly from the "widow and the fatherless"—one of, alas! many unscrupulous actions of this constantly impecunious Bishop. (Sorrow it is to us thus to speak of the father of John Fletcher and a brother of the noble Dr. Giles Fletcher, father of Phineas and Giles Fletcher.)¹

The surroundings of Robert as a child, then little more than a year old, as of the entire family, were thus black enough; but their worldly prospects were not altogether inauspicious. If not to be regarded as wealthy, Nicholas Herrick must have been in fairly easy circumstances. By his Will (supra) he himself estimated his entire property at £3000; but it realized actually £5000, which may be set down as equal to £25,000 to-day. Early in 1593 came a posthumous child, who was named William, the "dying brother" of some touching lines in the Hesperides.² As he was born at Harry Champion's house at Hampton, [Court] the widow appears to have retired thither. From an enigmatical reference to his father's burial-place it looks as though a shadow of mystery was allowed to hang over his memory.³ He thus writes of him :—

¹ Beaumanor MSS.

"To the reverend shade of his religious Father.

That for seven Lusters I did never come
 To doe the Rites to thy Religious Tombe ;
 That neither haire was cut, or true teares shed
 By me, o'r thee, (as justments to the dead)
 Forgive, forgive me ; since I did not know
 Whether thy bones had here their Rest, or no.
 But now 'tis known, Behold ; behold, I bring
 Unto thy Ghost th' Effusèd Offering :
 And look, what Smallege, Night-shade, Cypresse, Yew,
 Unto the shades have been, or now are due,
 Here I devote ; And something more then so ;
 I come to pay a Debt of Birth I owe.
 Thou gav'st me life (but mortal) ; For that one
 Favour, Ile make full satisfaction ;
 For my life mortall, Rise from out my Herse,
 And take a life immortall from my verse."⁴

² Vol. I. p. 125.

³ Probably the body had been secretly buried and the place kept secret in fear of its being buried as that of a suicide. The rapidity of the burial, two days or less after death, is significant certainly.

⁴ Vol. I., pp. 45-6.

As annotated in the place 'seven Lusters' is = 35 years, and gives 1626 as the date of the long-delayed filial tribute. This was only three years before the mother's death. It is not easy in our dim light to explain the son's ignorance of his father's burial-place; but if the litigation extended over years and years, he may intend a sub-allusion in 'Rest' to the undecided question as to suicide or accident—the former involving ecclesiastically an unconsecrate grave and a darkened memory—for the Bishop in his greed made no pitiful allowance for so much as temporary insanity, even supposing his intended self-destruction had been true. As an infant of 14 months only, he could himself have no personal recollections. Be this as it may, by the Will the children were confided to the guardianship of their uncle, William Herrick, (afterward from the boring skilfully of a diamond for the King, created Sir William)—who was also a goldsmith in Cheapside and prosperous in every way.⁵ From our Poet's kindly recollections of "beloved Westminster" it may be pretty safely assumed that that venerable School may claim

⁵ In Appendix A to this Memorial-Introduction will be found genealogical and other details on the Beaumanor Herricks; and also in Appendix B a fuller notice than hitherto of one eminent member of the family, the Warden of Manchester College.

? much disputed. Insuperable!
 him for a pupil. Mr. Walford observes on this: "He certainly speaks of the youthful amusements of rowing and swimming in connection with his "beloved Westminster" in a way which would all but warrant us in asserting that he was educated at Westminster School; and the assertion would be strongly confirmed by the evident saturation of his mind with the writings of classical authors, to an extent scarcely ever found except in the case of those whose early years have been spent at an English public school," (p. v.). It is to be regretted that the early Registers of this renowned School have all perished; but I agree with Mr. Walford that his way of celebrating his "beloved Westminster" seems to indicate the School and not his after home-residence. The amusements point to boyhood, not to the later abode in "St. Anne's, Westminster." The fact that his little brother William was born at Hampton gives vividness to his mention of the villages on the Thames, whither he steered, "Richmond, Kingstone and Hampton-Court." If he came and went to School at Westminster from Hampton it is not difficult to understand his "Tears to Thamasis."

There were four boys in all, and their guardian seems to have seen to their several occupations with characteristic carefulness (in a double sense, as will appear). The post-natus William died young : Thomas was placed with Mr. Massam, a merchant in London ; but in 1610 he retired to the country and settled in a small farm—as immortalized in one of his brother's most Horatian and sustained poems (" A Country Life : to his brother M. Tho: Herrick"),⁶ and Nicholas, was similarly settled early in life in London, and traded to the Levant. Another poem, addressed to him, shows that he had travelled much by sea and land, including Jerusalem (" To his Brother, Nicholas Herrick ").⁷ Robert was in like manner destined to follow in his father's footsteps ; for from the original Indentures which are at Beaumanor, we learn he was " bound apprentice " on the 25th September, 1607, " for ten years " to his uncle and guardian. Ten years would bring us forward to 1617-18 ; but the pact must have been broken,⁸

⁶ Hill, as before, p. 122. It is supposed that this Thomas was father of Thomas Heyricke, who in 1668, resided at Market Harborough and issued a trader's token there ; and grandfather to a Thomas Herrick who was curate of Market Harborough, and who published some Sermons and Poems.

⁷ Ibid, p. 122. In 1634 his pedigree is entered in the Visitation of London ; and he had then by his wife Susanna, d. of William Salter, 3 sons and 3 daughters. He was living in 1648 when the Hesperides was published.

⁸ ' Broken.' That is in so far as young Herrick was concerned, seeing that he is found addressing his uncle from (probably) Cambridge so early as September, 1613, and in all likelihood he had proceeded thither some time previously. In 1613 he was in his 21st year, and youths went to College from their 14th to their 17th year. From the loss of the University and College registers and other documents, it is impossible to trace him exactly ; but there can be no question that he proceeded to the University. Mr. Walford casts doubt on his ever having been of St. John's College, and in all Professor Mayor's bulky tomes from the Baker MSS. his name is sought for in vain, albeit innumerable nobodies (or bodies only) have found, perhaps inevitably, devout record and eulogy therein.⁹ It is singular that both these scholars should have overlooked the fact that two of his Letters are expressly dated "Cambridg : St. Johns" and that in a third in a receipt, he designates himself a "Fellow Commoner of St. Johns Colledg in who certainly ceased to be an 'apprentice.' It has been suggested to me that his dependence upon his uncle for the quarterly doles of his own patrimony even after his coming of age, is to be accounted for by the apprentice bond being still in force. It is noteworthy in regard to this that the money-letters cease about the date of the expiry of the apprentice term.

⁹ Memoir, as before, p. v.: and History of St. John's College, Cambridge, 2 vols., 8vo, 1869.

Cambridg." There is thus absolute certainty as to his having entered and attended at St. John's College.

His guardian-uncle, though the "Fellow Commoner" was in his 21st-23d years, kept a discredibly tight rein on his nephew's expenditure. In the first of fourteen letters preserved at Beaumanor, the student seeks "fifteen pounds" for his brother Thomas.¹ It has all the stiffness and stateliness of etiquette demanded from young men (and eke young ladies) of the period, in their approaches to their seniors and (technically) superiors—even in the case of sons and daughters to their parents. We must pause to read it :

LETTER I.

[September, 1613.]

"SR.—Syth the qvallitie of the Time, and extremitie of my Brothers occasions forse me, I first shew my deutie, and next entreat you to furnish my Brother with 15 pounds, which he would needes borrow of me, and because his vrgent occasions stand in so vehement a manner, I am willing to pleasure him, still relying vpon your Worships

¹ Nichols in his Leicestershire was the first to print some of these Letters. Mr. Hazlitt printed them in extenso as an Appendix, but faultily. I have had the advantage of collating his text with the originals, through their owner, the late W. Perry-Herrick, Esq., of Beaumanor. Eheu! He has recently died, and in him the English Herricks become apparently extinct. There are others in the United States.

fauour, and trusting that I shall not seem offensiue to you nor engender any cause of dislike in my proceeding: I haue writ thus much at the request of my Brother, though indeed I was vnwilling to acquaint you in this busines, yet pray, Sr, iustly waigh each thing in equall ballances: I still runn headlong into your Worships debt. I trust you will be pleased, though I vnwillingly acquaint you with this. Thus hauing rudely made known the effect of the matter, I with my endles deutie take my leaue, liuing to be comanded by you and yours for euer:

ROBERT HERICK."

[Endorsement:]

"To the right worl. Sr William Hearick at Beaumanor or els where."

A second Letter but without time-date, though from echo of words used in the preceding, most probably written very soon after it—has under all its phrases of respect an under-tone of plaint if not complaint of his "constrained necessitie." The explanation of the evident sore feeling of the Writer is to be found in this, that every one of the payments in these letters was simply out of his own "little fortune," which amounted to from £470 to £660 (= £2500 now). It was hard to have what was his own doled out meagrely, in this knowledge. This second letter intimates a very bare 'setting up' at the University. Had the nephew-apprentice irritated the old knight by violating his indenture to him? We can only conjecture. Here is “Cambridg : St. Johns.

LETTER II.

“Sr.—Considering the importunitie of my own affaires, and the last testimonie of your so euident loue, makes me to run headlong between two ineuitable difficulties, but desirous of equall performance : the shortness of this shall not hinder the one, nor I trust detract from the other : Sr, vnderstand that my hart (more feruently then my pen can express) speaks my deuout thanks, and ioyes in no greater thing then this, that it can see some sparkes of your conceald affection : I haue not as hitherto acquainted you with the chardg I liue in, but your self can iudg, by my often (as now at this time) writing for mony, which when I doe, it is for no impertinent expens, but for constraigned necessitie : for be your self the iudg, when aboue twentie pounds will not suffice the house, not reckening with it commoditie for my self (I meane apparell nor other complements) nor tuition mony nor other sundrie occasions for chardges, this but considered, there is no reasonable soule, but will kindly and indulgently censure of my lyfe and me. Had I but a competent estate to mayntayne my self, to my title, I could presume of as soone ataying to y^e end of the efficient cause—my coming,—as he that hath stronger cause and fortune : Sr, I know you vnderstand me, and did you but know how disfurnished I came to Cambridg, without bedding (which I yet want) and other necessaries, you would (as I now trust you will) better your thoughts towards me, considering of my forc’t expence. Sr, I entreat you to furnish me with ten pounds this quarter ; for the last mony which I receaud came not till the last quarter had almost spent it self, which now constraines me so suddenly to write for more. Good S^r, forbeare to censure me as prodigall, for I endeouour rather to strengthen (then debilitate) my feeble familie fortune.

I should fill much paper, if I should follow my passions ;
but I will break off, only entreating you (yf there be no waye for me to leade a lyfe here) that then you would write me your counsell how I maye learn to liue. In hope that you will some waye effectuate my desires, with all respect of deutie and obseruance, I forstop² my passage.

“ Euer to be at comand and studious to please,

“ R. HEARICK.”

[Endorsement:]

“ To his most carefull Vncle S^r Willi :

Hearick dwelling at London in Wood-streete.”

There was a little break of sarcasm surely in that endorsement “To his most carefull Vncle” as within in the phrase, “concealed affection.”

Still at S^t. John’s College, a third letter brings the student before us in the same attitude of formal and punctilious obeisance to the grand city-uncle and evidently hampered for books and scholarly necessities, after a fashion not at all creditable to his guardian.
In the last letter he had said “I should fill much paper
if I should follow my passions ; but I will break off, only entreating you (yf there be no waye for me to leade

² I stop my going on earlier than I otherwise would.

a lyfe here) that then you would write me your counsell how I maye learne to liue." Surely this was most reasonable? With his youth passing away and his future indefinite, he now still more passionately longs to be and to do something, e.g. "because that Time hath devoured some yeeres, I am the more importunate in the crauing." One is reminded of a greater Poet who similiary marked the flight of his years and mourned grandly over uneffected purpose and hindering circumstance. Before we turn to this letter we may pause to read Milton's great sonnet :—

" On his having arrived at the age of twenty-three..

How soon hath Time, the subtle thief of youth,
 Stolen on his wing my three-and-twentieth year !
 My hasting days fly on with full career,
 But my late spring no bud or blossom shew'th.
 Perhaps my semblance might deceive the truth
 That I to manhood am arrived so near ;
 And inward ripeness doth much less appear,
 That some more timely-happy spirits endu'th.
 Yet, be it less or more, or soon or slow,
 It shall be still in strictest measure even
 To that same lot, however mean or high,
 Toward which Time leads me, and the will of Heaven.
 All is, if I have grace to use it so,
 As ever in my great Task-Master's eye.

I do not think that I do wrong to Herrick when

I judge that in these years there came no such vision of the 'great Task-Master's eye' to him. It were of the Pleasures of Imagination rather than of the Pleasures of Hope, to think of him as, thus far, more than impulsively ardent in the acquisition of that odd and discursive learning which characterizes his Poems. His fierce Norse blood, I fear, made the 'flesh' rather than the 'spirit' master—as the Puritans would have phrased it. There was evidently, as yet, no fixed purpose of studying for 'holy orders;' and so, as evidently, he gave full swing to what were accounted lay-liberty to quaff of all cups that might be put to his lips. Even later he had to accuse himself of "wild, unhallowed rhymes," and contemporary with his attendance at the University the manners were gay (in a sorrowful sense), and not a few of the students (so-called) uncleanly. Evidently 'evil reports' reached the old gentleman—Herrick's uncle—concerning him; for he deprecates his suspicions (in Letter X). Now for

LETTER III.

From St. Johns in Cambridg.

"Qui timide rogat, Negare docet."

"Are the minds of men immutable? and will they rest in only one opinion without the least perspicuous shewe of chaing? O no, they cannot, for Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illis: it is an old but yet young saying in our age, as times chainge, so mens minds are altered: O would . . .³ weere seene, for then some pittying Planet would with a dr [op of] deaw refreash my withered hopes, and giue a lyfe to that which [is about?] to die; the bodie is preserued by foode, and lyfe by hope, which (but wanting either of these conseruers) faint, feare, fall, freese, and die. Tis in your power to cure all, to infuse by a profusion a duple lyfe into a single bodie. Homo homini Deus: man should be soe, and he is commanded so; but, fraile and glass-lik, man proues brittle in many things. How kind Arcisilaus the philosopher was vnto Apelles the painter, Plutark in his Morals will tell you; which should I heere depaint, the length of my letter would hide the sight of my Labour, which that it may not, I bridle in my Quill, and mildly, and yet I feare too rashly, and too boldly, make knowne and discouer [that] which my modestie would conceale: and this is all: my studie craues but your assistance to furnish hir with bookes, wherein she is most desirous to labour; blame not hir modest boldnes, but suffer the aspertions [=sprinklings] of your loue to distill vpon hir, and next to Heauen she will consecrate hir laboures vnto you, and because that Time hath deuoured some yeeres, I am the more importunate in the crauing: suffer not the distance to hinder that which I know your disposition will not denie. And now is the time (that florida ætas) which promises frutifulness for hir former barrenness, and wisheth

³ The corners of the original are somewhat injured, and hence certain words are illegible.

all to hope : As euery thing will haue in time an end, so this, which though it would extend it self and ouerflow its bounds I forcibly withstand it. Wishing this worlds happines to follow and attend you in this lyf, and that with a triumphant crown of glorie you maye be crowned in the best world to come. "ROBERT HEARICK."

[Endorsement:]

"To the very Worshipf[ul] His Vncle Sr W[ill.] Hearicke dwelling at London in Woodstreete. These."

These Letters (I. to III.) belong to 1613-14. So that 1615, which has hitherto been given as the year of his going to Cambridge, is proved to be much too late. The next two Letters—as shown by the receipt at the foot of the first—belong to January, 1615-6 : another to February, 1616 : another to April, 1616. These have all the same 'burden' of "mitte pecuniam," as it so happens (what must be repeated and remembered) that this one thing was all that led to correspondence between nephew and niggard uncle—who gave (of what was not his own but simply held in trust) as if a personal bestowment. These four further Letters follow successively :—

LETTER IV.

"Cambridg. [January, 1615-16.

SR.—Your prosperitie desired and the good success of your issue, I pronounce my deutie, and wish some felicitie to my self (as all other creatures do). I entreat you (as heretofore) so now to paye to Mr. Adrian Morrus, book-seller in the black fryers, the some of tenn pounds, who hath payd the same some at Cambridg: I cannot meet the expence for want of primarie consideration; be you but pleas'd, and I shall iustifie the expectation (which I trust is religious) of all men. My prayers begin at home, but end at you their obiect. Bless me with your countenance, and I shall liue triumphant, and my weake hopes will receaue vigour. Yf you reflect vpon I am all yours and completely yours for euer obsequious,

“ROBIN HARRICK.”⁴

[Endorsement:]

“To the right Wor^{sh}. his louing Vncle
Sr William Hearick dwelling at London in great Wood-street. This.”

LETTER V.

“Cambridge, [January, 1616.]

“Before you vnceald my letter (right wor^{sh}.) it cannot be doubted but you had perfect knowledg of the essence of my writing, before you reade it; for custome hath made you expert in my playne songe (mitte pecuniam) that beeing the cause sine quâ non, or the power that giues lyfe and beeing to each matter. I delight not to draw your imagination to inextricable perplexities, or knit vp my Love in indissoluable knotts, but make no other exposition but the literall sence, which is to entreat you to paye to Mr. Adrian Morice the some of tenn pounds as customarily, and to take a note of his hand for the receipt, which I desire may be effected breffly, because the circumstance of the time must be expressed. I perceau I must crie with the afflicted vsquequo, vsquequo, Domine. Yet I haue confidence that I liue in your memorie, howsoeuer Time brings not the thing hoped for to its iust maturity; but my beleef is stronge, and I do establish my hopes on rocks, and feare no quick-sands, be you my firme assistant, and good effects (produced from virtuous causes) follow. So shall my wishes pace with yours for the suplement of your owne happiness and the perfection of your owne posterity.

⁴ The request was granted, and at the foot of the letter appears Robert Martin's receipt for £10 to be paid to Herrick; this bears date Jan. 24, 1615-16. The present letter is not in the poet's handwriting, but seems to have been written for him, and his name added playfully.

“Euer to be commanded,

“ROBERT HEARICK.

“To paye to Mr. Blunt Bookseller in Paules church yarde the some aboue named.

LETTER VI.

“Chambridge [February, 1616.]

“Because my Commencment is at hand (worthie Sir), I am compeld to write, though it be with a violent reluctance; for what hermonie can be effected when there is diuision 'twixt the hart and hand; want and chardge admit no sympathie, because they are of diffring natures, not conuertibles. Yet volens, nolens, it must be done, and as heretofore so now I desire your worship to paye to this Bearer, Mr. Hotchkin, the dew of tenn pounds for my vse at Chambridge. I haue runn thorough the most of the expense which is not much, but in respect of disability. Yf it may please you to remember me like a trew Maecenas, I shall glory in that my Tale hath raysd me vp a Friend to share in my passions—

‘Multorum manibus grande leuatur onus.’

Many hands make light worke ; your healpe can make my burden light. I atend your pleasure, and as I hope such wilbe my hap, I haue fayth in the goodness of your Nature. Attending with patience the complement and consummation of my hopes.

“Euer obseruant
 “to your benignant
 “fauours, R. HEARICK.”⁵

“Bis dat qui cito dat.”

[Endorsement:]

“To the right wor^{ll}. his louing vncl
 Sr William Hearick dwelling at London in Great Woodstreet.
 This.”

LETTER VII.

“Camb. [April, 1616.]

“Sir, that which makes my letter to be abortive and borne before maturitie, is and hath been my Commencement, which I haue now ouergonn, though I confess with many a throe and pinches of the purse ; but it was necessarie, and the prize was worthie the hazarde ; which makes me less sensible of the expence, by reason of a titular

⁵ The acknowledgment of the person who was appointed to receive this sum, is at the foot of the letter as elsewhere.

prerogatiue—& bonum est prodire in bono. The essence of my writing is (as heretofore) to entreat you to paye for my use to Mr. Arthour Johnson bookseller in Paules church yard the ordinarie sume of tenn pounds, and that with as much sceleritie as you maye, though I could wish chardges had leaden wings and Tortice feet to come vpon me; sed votis puerilibus opto. Sr, I fix my hopes on Time and you; still gazing for an happie flight of birdes, and the refreshing blast of a second⁶ winde. Doubtfull as yet of either Fortunes, I liue, hoarding vp prouision against the assault of either. Thus I salute your Vertues.

“ Hopefull R. HEARICK.”

It has already been stated that there is no trace of Herrick's matriculation at either St. John's College, or at Trinity Hall, or at the Registry; but from the last it is found that he took his B.A. degree from Trinity Hall in 1616-7, when he signed himself 'Robertus Hearick.'⁷ He must have migrated from St. John's to Trinity Hall in 1616; and thus the letters dated by Mr. Hazlitt⁸ 1617, belong to 1615-6; for in the last of the next group he is still a "fellow commoner of St. John's colledg." As these additional letters are read, be it still borne in mind, that their monotonous refrain of 'money' is in consequence of the correspondence being practically so many receipts for (apparently) quarterly payments of the "customarye £10." Again these Letters follow successively :—

⁶ The Latin secundus = favourable, profiting.

⁷ Unfortunately only the year-dates are recorded. Mr. William Ald. Wright, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, was so good as to favour me with this and another entry at the Registry.

⁸ Edition of Herrick, as before, pp. 492-94 et seqq.

LETTER VIII.

"Health from Heauen.

"Chambridg.

"Sr.—I haue long since expected your return in that your long absence hath made me want that which your presence could haue remedied. I trust you are not ignorant what my meaning is; may it therefore please you to send me £10, for my ocasions require so much; and the long time that your Worship hath been absent from London hath compelled me to runne somewhat deepe into my Tailours debt. I entreat your Worship to send me a part of my stipend with all possible sceleritie, for want of which so necessarie helpe, cares greatly posses me, and force me contrarie to my wish, in some sort to neglect my study; whereas yf you would be pleased to furnish me with so much, that I might keepe beforehand with my Tutor, I doubt not but with quicke dispatch to attaine to what I ayme. Thus trusting that you will in some sort be mindfull of me, in sending me that which I haue writ for, with my eternall deutie to your self for euer, together with my Ladie, I finish.

"For euer readie

"to be comanded

"during mortallitie

"ROBERT HEARICK."

“I entreate your worship to furnish me with so much as will serue me till the Natiuitie.”

[Endorsement:]

“To the right wor^{ll}. his carefull vncl^e Sr
William Hearick. These be delivered at his house in London.”

LETTER IX.

“From Cambridg.

“S^r.—I am loath, yet pforce I must, beeing ouerruled by necessitie, trouble you. I haue, before the birth of this letter, sent others which peraduenture haue been stayed by infortunitie; but I trust this will manifest itself. Let it not seeme offensiu^e, though I exceede a little in length, for your Worships long beeing in the Cuntry, hath constrained me contrarie to my will to become a debter to my instruct^r,—wherfore let me entreat your worship to be mindfull of me, and that this weeke I may receaue it; for my extreames be such that vnless I attaine what now I desire, I shalbe constrained to make a iourney to London to satisfie the mind of my Tutour. Good S^r, consider this, and redresse it, and I shall for euer in deutie show my self most abundantly thankfull. I trust this little will suffice to explain my great want, and I hope you will in some sorte bee carefull for my credit, which wilbe weak, except I hear from your worship this weeke. I will not extend too farr, but with my deutie to you and my Ladie, I for this time cease.

“Being euer, obsequious to both,

“ROBERT HEARICK.”

[Endorsement:]

“To the Right worshipfull his louing vncl^e Sr Willia Hearick dwelling at London in Great Wood-street, Giue this.”

LETTER X.

“Chambridge.

“Sr.—Though my seruice be late, yet better thus then neuer; it is in you to pardon what I haue so long neglected, and I beleeeue you will. I will come speedily and personally to attend you at London, and will bring your bond along; to which end (necessitie constraing me) I entreate you out of my litle possession to deliver to this bearer the customarye £10, without which I cannot meate⁹ my ioyrney: I vnderstand it is troublesom to you for the quarterly dispatch, and I am honestly sorrowfull for your disease. Pardon me, and mayntayn some good opinion of me, that what I haue lost heretofore in your estimation, time and my endeouours may redeeme it. Trusting to which I offer vp to them, and to your self, the sacrifice of my vowes.

“ROBERT HEARICKE.”

[Endorsement:]

“To his lovinge Vncle Sr William Hearicke dwellinge at Westminster this del. del.”

LETTER XI.

“Cambridg, 11th of October.

“Sr.—My deutie remembred to your self and La: the cause essentiall is this: That I would entreat you to paye to this bringer (to Mr. Adrian Morrus book seller in the black friers,) the some of £10 the which my Tutor hath receaued, to be payde at London. I have business that drawes me from prolixitie; and I craue pardon for this rudeness, still expecting the sun-shine of youre fauour and the daye of happiness. I end with my prayers for your preservation and health, the best terrestriall good. Long lyf and the asperitions [=sprinklings] of Heauen fall vpon you.

⁹ = meet, the expenses of.

“ Yours euer

“ obsequious

“ R. HEARICK.”

[Endorsement :]

“ To the right worll., &c.”

LETTER XII.

“ Cambridg.

“ Sir,—I presume againe to present another Embassador, who, in the best eloquence that was taught him, aboundingly thanks you for the larg extent of your favor and kindness; which, though present time denies to mak any ostentation of desert, yet future . . . crownes the expectation of the hopefull; and because the urgent extreamite and vnexpected occasion of chamber roome instigats me to such importunate demands, I am bold to entreat you that the mony might this week be sent me, for necessitie fervently requires it; and I am sorrie to be the subiect of so great a molestation to your Worship; but, trusting on your patience, I am bold to saye that generous minds still haue the best contentment, and willingly healp where there is an euidentie of want. Thus hoping to triumph in the victorie of my wishes, by being not frustraeted in my expectatiō, I take my leaue, and eternally thank you. Liuing to be comanded by you and yours to the end of mortalitie.

“ Euer most “ obsequious

“ ROBERT HEARICK.”

“ Be it known to all, that I Robert Hearick, Fellow commoner of St. Johns colledg in Cambridg, acknowledg my self to stand indebted unto my vnclē, Sir Will. Hearick, of London, in the some of tenn pounds, for so much receaved of him; to be repayde vnto him a[t] all times: I saye, receaved tenn pounds by me, Robert Hearick."

[Endorsement:]

"To the right wor^l. his vnclē Sr Willi: Hearicke dwelling at London in Great Wood strete giue This."

The wording of the receipt seems to show that Herrick had either come to the end of his own money or that the money was a loan over and above his allowance. These importunities for books and necessaries recall that through the same years, and at the same University, George Herbert was writing in much the same strain to his good and generous step-father, Sir John Danvers. It will put the blame on the guardian-uncle, and lighten the pecuniary-iteration of these letters, to show that apart from the monies being from his own patrimony, his requests were really necessities—not forgetting that Herbert's love of 'gay-dress' probably carried him further than Herrick. I cull one characteristic letter from Herbert, as thus:—

Sir,

I dare no longer be silent, lest while I think I am modest, I wrong both my self and also the confidence my friends have in me; wherefore I will open my case unto you, which I think deserves the reading at the least ; and it is this—I want books extremely. You know, sir, how I am now setting foot into divinity, to lay the platform of my future life ; and shall I then be fain always to borrow books and build on another's foundation ? What tradesman is there who will set up without his tools ? Pardon my boldness, sir, it is a most serious case, nor can I write coldly in that wherein consisteth the making good of my former education, of obeying that Spirit which hath guided me hitherto, and of atchieving my (I dare say) holy ends. This also is aggravated in that I apprehend what my friends would have been forward to say if I had taken ill courses, 'Follow your book, and you shall want nothing.' You know, sir, it is their ordinary speech, and now let them make it good ; for since I hope I have not deceived their expectation, let not them deceive mine. But perhaps they will say, 'You are sulky ; you must not study too hard.' It is true, God knows, I am weak, yet not so but that every day I may step towards my journey's end ; and I love my friends so well as that if all things proved not well, I had rather the fault should be on me than on them. But they will object again, 'What becomes of your annuity ?' Sir, if there be any truth in me, I find it little enough to keep me in health. You know I was sick last vacation, neither am I yet recovered, in that I am fain ever and anon to buy somewhat tending towards my health ; for infirmities are both painful and costly. Now this Lent I am forbid utterly to eat any fish, so that I am fain to dyet in my chamber at mine own cost ; for in our publick halls you know, is nothing but fish and white meats ; out of Lent also twice a week, on Fridays and Saturdays, I must do so, which yet sometimes

I fast. Sometimes also I ride to Newmarket, and there lie a day or two for fresh air; all which tend to avoiding of costlier matters if I should fall absolutely sick. I protest and vow I even study thrift, and yet I am scarce able with much ado to make one half year's allowance shake hands with the other. And yet if a book of four or five shillings come in my way, I buy it, though I fast for it; yea sometimes of ten shillings. But, alas, sir, what is that to those infinite volumes of divinity, which yet every day swell and grow bigger? Noble sir, pardon my boldness, and consider but these three things: first, the bulk of divinity; secondly, the time when I desire this (which is now, when I must lay the foundation of my whole life); thirdly, what I desire and to what end—not vain pleasures nor to a vain end. If then, sir, there be any course, either by engaging my future annuity, or any other way, I desire you sir, to be my mediator to them in my behalf.

Now I write to you, Sir, because to you I have ever opened my heart; and have reason by the patents of your perpetual favour to do so still, for I am sure you love your faithful servant
GEORG HERBERT.

“Trin. Coll. March 18. 1617.”¹

Far different was the response to the “sweet Singer” of “The Temple” from that to the poet of “Hesperides”; and for my part, across the centuries, I cry, Beshrew the close-fisted old Knight.

¹ Prose of Herbert in Fuller Worthies' Library: Vol. iii. of Complete Works, pp. 485-6.

Like Herbert, Robert Herrick had undoubtedly proceeded to the University with a vague intention to study for the Church ; and, like him, he ought now to have been "setting foot into divinity." But his next letter brings him before us as doubtful whether to direct "his study" to Divinity or to Law. This letter also belongs to 1616. It follows :—

LETTER XIII.

"After my abundant thanks for your last great loue (worthie Sir), proud of your fauoure and kindness shewne by my Ladie to my vnworthy selfe, thus I laye open my selfe; that, for as much as my continuance will not long consist in the spheare where I now moue, I make known my thoughts, and modestly craue your counsell, whether it were better for me to direct my study towards the lawe or not; which yf I should (as it will not be impertinent), I can with facilitie laboure my self into another colledg appointed for the like end and studyes, where I assure my self the charge will not be so great as where I now exist; I make bold freely to acquaint you with my thoughts; and I entreat you answeare me: this being most which checks me, that my time (I trust) heeing short, it may be to a lesser end and smaller purpose; but that shalbe as you shall lend direction. Nothing now remaines but my perfect thankfullness and remembrance of your hopefull promises; which when Heauen, working with you, shall bring them to performance, I shall triumph in the victorie of my wishes; till when, my prayers shall inuocate Heauen to powre vpon you and your posteritie the utmost of all essentiall happiness.

“ Yours euer seruicable

“ R. HEARICK.”

The closing Letter is dated “ Trinitie Hall, Cambridge,” and is pathetic in its references to his “ebbing estate”—by which I understand that Sir William had told him his £400 to £500 was nearly exhausted; nor less so his resolution in his new College “to liue recluse, till Time contract me to some other calling, striuing now with myself (retayning vpright thoughts) both sparingly to liue and thereby to shun the current of expence.” The yearly amount allowed was (apparently) at most £40, and had it been from Sir William himself instead of from his own “little portion,” Herrick might have had no great ground of complaint. As it was he certainly had ground of complaint. It is likewise to be noted that though Robert (Sir William’s elder brother) was associated with him as ‘overseer’ of the Will, the Knight seems practically to have ignored him from the outset and acted alone. The last letter thus runs:—

LETTER XIV.

“ Trinitie Hall, Camb.

“ Sr.—The confidence I haue of your bothe virtuous and generous disposition makes me (though with some honest reluctance) the seldomer to sollicite you; for I haue so incorporated beleef into me, that I cannot chuse but persuade my self that (though absent) I stand imprinted in your memorie; and the remembrance of my last beeing at London serud for an earnest motiue (which I trust liues yet vnperisht) to the effectuating of my desire, which is not but in modesty ambitious, and consequently virtuous; but, where freeness is euident, there needs no feere for forwardness; and I doubt not (because fayth giues boldness) but that Heauen, together with your self, will bring my ebbing estate to an indifferent tyde; meane while I hope I haue (as I presume you know) changd my colledg for one where the quan[ti]tie of expence wilbe shortned, by reason of the priuacie of the house, where I propose to liue recluse, till Time contract me to some other calling, striuing now with my self (retayning vpright thoughts) both sparingly to liue, and thereby to shun the current of expence. This is my desire (which I entreat may be performd) that Mr. Adrian Morrus, bookseller of the black fryers, maye be payd ten pounds as heretofore, and to take his acquittance. Trusting whereto, Ile terminate your sight, and end; hoping to see your dayes many and good; and prosperitie to crown your self and issue.

“Euer seruiceable

“to your Virtues,

“R. HEARICK.”

It rouses one to remember that to the guardian-uncle to whom these letters were addressed, an additional quarterly allowance to his nephew would have been as nothing. But he was adding broad acre to broad acre, and ambitious to found a family away down in ancestral Leicestershire. That in his land-hunger (of which the greater Sir Walter Scott later spoke so penitently) he was not over scrupulous, appears by this damning record in the MSS. of the House of Lords :

“ 1640-1, Jan. 15.—Petition of Elizabeth Smyth, the poor distressed widow of Christopher Smyth, deceased, that Sir William Herrick may be called upon to answer for detaining from her a certain estate in the county of Leicester, part of the manor of Beaumanor, to which the Court of Chancery decreed that she is entitled.”²

From the indefiniteness of the phrase “till Time shall contract me to some other calling” in the final letter that remains, it would seem that the proposed change from Divinity to Law was left undetermined. The only further record of him at the University is that he took his M.A degree in 1620, signing himself ‘Robert Hearick.’ In this year, thereupon, he most probably left Cambridge. As he was not a Fellow, it is not likely that he would continue in residence. Besides, had he remained and ‘taught’, there must have been some memorials of his teaching and pupils. Certain entries found by Mr. Riley in the Steward’s Book, and printed in the Second Report of the Royal ² Fourth Report of the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts : Part I. Report and Appendix : p. 40.

Commission on Historical Manuscripts (pp. 121-123) have been too hastily assigned to our Robert Herrick. His nephew—Robert 3rd son of Sir William Herricke, who was “baptized the viii. day of February, 1598,” at St. Vedast’s Church, Foster Lane, London,³ was much more probably the person whose indebtedness to his college is therein recorded. Extending as these entries do to 1629-30, or fully nine years after his M.A. degree, it surely bears on the face of it, that it could not be our Robert, and on the other hand, it would be quite in keeping with the Beaumanor Knight’s penuriousness and begrudging, so to hamper his own son as to compel him to leave there a small debt, unliquidated.⁴

³ From the Register by the present Rector, as before. See also Appendix A to this Memorial-Introduction.

⁴ I place here Mr. Riley’s notes :

“A small memorandum [among Trinity Hall MSS.] without any date, but belonging, no doubt, to the year 1630, bearing reference to Robert Herrick, who had been a member of the College, (the well-known author of the “Hesperides”)—The names of those that are to be sued. Will. Wake, 5*l* 18*s*. 6*d*. obol. Thomas Creak, besides ‘præ manibus’ [a name apparently given to caution-money] deducted 4*l* 2*s*. 7*d*. Herricke 3*l* ‘præ manibus’ being deducted, 7*l* 16*s*. 9*d*. The Steward’s accounts of 1629 and 30 follow shortly after, in both of which Herrick’s name appears, as debited with 10*l* 16*s*. 9*d*. against it, the largest sum debited against

A study of the facts, leaves the impression that on closing his attendance at the University in 1620 (as supra) Herrick—then in his 29th year—came to London, with his future uncertain, but ready to plunge into all the gaities of ‘town.’ To these years—1620-28-9—belong (meo iudicio):—

“Those Lyric feasts
Made at the Sun,
The Dog, the Triple Tun,”

any one in the list: reference will again be found made to Herrick’s name in the sequel (p. 122). “Also a paper book, pamphlet form, entitled—“The Steward his accompt of the whole Commons Booke, the 3rd of October 1623.” In this book, col. 2. of page 3, under (tr.),—“Names of those who were in College on the 3rd day of October 1623, and their debts.” Herrick is named, as then owing the steward 57s. 7d. (p. 123). I must add to what is said in the text, that had these entries referred to our Herrick, I should have expected that he would be called ‘Mr. Herricke.’ Walford mistakenly says there is an entry of indebtedness at Trinity Hall in 1617 (p. v). There is no such entry. The earliest is 1623, and the others 1630—at which time he was incumbent of Dean Prior. Anthony a-Wood mistook our Herrick’s cousin Robert for him, and so entered him as of Oxford. The cousin may have attended both Universities—as was common—and in such case it was natural that his father would send him to the same College at which his nephew had attended. Supra, it was not exactly ‘caution,’ nor even earnest, but so much being already paid. Be it also noted that the £7 16s. 9d. and £3 make up the same amount and debt as before—viz., £10 16s. 9d.

of which he sang so proudly. To them also belong the still more boastful reminiscences of his "Farewell vnto Poetrie," as thus :—

—————"Wee haue spent our tyme
Both from the morning to the euening chyme ;
Nay, till the bell-man of the night had tould
Past noone of night, yett weare the howers not old,
Nor dull'd with yron sleeps, but haue out-worne
The fresh and fayrest flourish of the morne
With flame, and rapture ; drincking to the odd
Number of wyne, which makes vs full with God,
And yn that misticke frenzie, wee haue hurl'de,
(As with a tempeste) nature through the worlde,
And yn a whirl-wynd twirl'd her home, agast
Att that which in her extasie had past."

(Vol. III. p. 102.)

Nor may we doubt that his "Farewell to Sack" and "Welcome to Sack" find place in the same group.

Be it noted that while the later 'innes' of assembly, "The Sun, the Dog, the Triple Tun" are celebrated, nowhere is the earlier "Mermaid," or "Mitre," or the after-frequented "Windmill" (1605) so much as named. Be it also noted that it would have simply been impossible for Herrick to have met Shakespeare at "The Mermaid" and not have recalled the meeting. As we read his "Apparition of his Mistresse calling him to Elysium"

(Vol. II. pp. 173-4) with its lofty praise of Beaumont and Fletcher and Jonson, we instinctively ask, 'Where is Shakespeare all this time?' But by 1611—at latest—he had gone down to Stratford-on-Avon, and our Poet celebrates only the contemporaries he actually knew. Every one carries in his memory the verse-letter of Beaumont to Ben Jonson of "The Mermaid":—

————— "What things have we seen
Done at the Mermaid! heard words that have been
So nimble and so full of subtle flame,
As if that any one from whence they came
Had meant to put his whole wit in a jest,
And had resolv'd to live a fool the rest
Of his dull life; then when there hath been thrown Wit able enough to justify the town
For three days past; wit that might warrant be
For the whole city to talk foolishly,
Till that were cancell'd; and when that was gone,
We left an air behind us, which alone
Was able to make the two next companies
(Right witty, though but downright fools) more wise."

But these days were early, when Sir Walter Raleigh founded 'The Club,' and when Herrick was much too young to have joined; and onward, as first 'apprentice' goldsmith, and next at College in (probably) 1612-13, he cannot be supposed to have found his way within the 'charmed circle.' Accordingly I am not satisfied that because he refers to the unfavourable reception of the Alchemist, which was brought out in 1610, or because in his lines to John Fletcher he speaks of the power of his Maid's Tragedy (which was produced in 1611) to make "young men swoon," he knew either personally so early as 1610-11. But there is abundant evidence that later he did know personally Ben Jonson. It was, however, later—viz., from 1620 forward. When the Master of Arts, in 1620, came to town, the purple splendour was still in the air if not in the sky, though the sun had sunk and only stars gleamed. Besides "immortal Ben," if Shakespeare and Francis Beaumont were gone, there still remained John Fletcher and Philip Massinger, William Browne and Richard Corbet, James Shirley and William Cartwright, Thomas Carew and venerable John Selden. I can very well believe that, bound apprentice to his goldsmith-uncle on 25th September, 1607, while the Poet of the "mountain belly and the rocky face" was bringing out his Volpone, and Epicene, and Alchemist, and Catiline, and at "Whitehall, and the "Court," his unapproachable Masques, as of the Masque of Queens and Oberon, the Fairy Prince—the young apprentice paid furtive visits to the theatres.⁵ His "Fairie Temple," and "Oberon's Feast," and others, were written early; and therefore, one can understand with what rotund and thundering mouth 'great Ben' would give their conceiver admittance among his sons. But whatever slighter acquaintance there may have been whilst he was passing out of his teens, the likelihoods are that—as above—it was not until 1620 that he "quaffed the mighty bowl" and mingled in those "brave translunary scenes." Perchance in his occasional visits to London while at the University he may have looked in upon the great computators, and so paved the way for full fellowship on leaving it. By 1620 he had unquestionably composed some, at least, and some of his daintiest Poems (exclusive of the 'Fairy' ones). It was "in the season," that is in youth, he sang:—

"Of brooks, of blossomes, buds and bowers
Of April, May, of June and July flowers;"

and so he could carry proof of his poetic vocation to the august brethren. With Ben Jonson for 'Master,'

⁵ Volpone, 1605, &c., published 1608—shows a long run: Epicene, 1609: Alchemist, 1610: Catiline, 1611: Bartholomew Fair not till 1614.

there were others subsidiary. I think it is manifest that he elected his subjects and formed his style after CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE (in his sweeter and lowlier vein, and in his epithets), ROBERT GREENE, and JAMES SHIRLEY—exclusive of the Classics. The first in his “Come live with me, and be my love,” is echoed in his rural pieces. Then his favourite vocabulary of dews and nard, wine and ambrosia, amber and flames, and spices, white brows, golden hair, cherry lips, eyes that brighten, lily cheeks, ‘silver shine,’ kisses and clasps, maidens and virgins and ‘maidenheads,’ favourite flowers as roses, lilies, daisies and daffodils, and out-of-the-way words as ‘chequered’ and ‘diapered’ and ‘enamell’d’ and the like, are all found in Greene. One could imagine it was from the Hesperides such things as these have been gathered :—

“ Her hair of golden hue doth dim the beames
That proud Apollo giveth from his coach.”

(II. 215, Dyce.)

“ Her lips are roses over-wash’d with dew
Or like the purple of Narcissus’ flower.” (Ib. p. 228.)

“ Her cheeks like ripen’d lilies steep’d in wine

.
When first her fair delicious cheeks were wrought,
Aurora brought her blush, the morn her white ;

Both so combin'd as passèd Nature's thought,
 Compil'd those pretty orbs of sweet delight."

(Ib. p. 230.)

"Thine eyes are like the glow-worms in the night."

(Ib. p. 232.)

—————"Enchanted fits of lunacy." (Ib. p. 236.)

"Her haire as Gorgon's foul retorting snakes."

(Ib. p. 237.)

"As air perfum'd with amber is her breath."

"Like lilies dipt in Bacchus' choicest wine." (Ib. p. 254.)

"Her amber trammels did my heart dismay."

(Ib. p. 254.)

[Flora] "Curld locks of amber hair." (Ib. p. 243.)

— "Her mantle chequer'd all with gaudy green."

(Ib. p. 26.)

"And bade my lambs to feed on daffadil." (Ib. p. 284.)

"Behold my cell, built in a silent shade." (Ib. p. 246.)

Nor is it only in single words and turns that Greene is inevitably recalled. His "Ode" and "The Palmer's Ode" and the "Penitent Palmer's Ode" have the very touch of Herrick's 'Fairy' poems:—

"Down the valley 'gan he track
 Bag and bottle at his back,
 In a surcoat all of gray:
 Such wear palmers on the way,

When with scrip and staff they see
 Jesus' grave on Calvary." (Ib. p. 243.)

Again, in Francesco's Ode are other characteristics :—

“ Eyes that lighten, and do shine
 Beams of love that are divine,
 Lily cheeks, whereon beside
 Buds of roses show their pride,
 Cherry lips, which did speak,
 Words that made all hearts to break,
 Words most sweet, for breathe was sweet,
 Such perfume for loue is meet,
 Precious words, as hard to tell
 Which more pleasèd, wit or smell.” (Ib. p. 249.)

Once more, Infida's Song :—

“ Thy face as fair as Paphos' brooks,—
 Wherein fancy baits her hooks.
 Thy cheeks like cherries that do grow
 Amongst the autumn mounts of snow ;
 Thy lips vermilion full of loue,
 Thy neck of siluer white as doue,
 Thine eyes, like flames of holy fires
 Burn all my thoughts with sweet desires.”
 (Ib. pp. 252-3.)

Further :—

“ White her brow, her face was fair
 Amber breath perfum'd the air ;

Rose and lily both did seek
 To show their glories on her cheek :
 Love did nestle in her looks
 Baiting there her sharpest hooks ;
 Gold her hair, bright her eyne,
 Like to Phœbus in his shine." (Ib. p. 299.)

And here, as already noticed, is an odd but recurring word of Herrick :—

" Meads that erst with green were spread
 With choice flowers diap' red." (Ib. p. 302.)

Herrick's " Charon and the Nightingale " (II. 224) and " The New Charon " (III. 110) were certainly inspired by Greene's " Fyrymachus' Fancy in the prime of his Affection," and it is only fair to the earlier singer to give here this more complete example of him :—

" As thus I sat, disdain'g of proud love,
 Have over, ferryman, there cried a boy ;
 And with him was a paragon for hue,
 A lovely damsel, beauteous and coy ;
 And there
 With her
 A maiden, cover'd with a tawny veil,
 Her face unseen for breeding lovers bale.
 I stirr'd my boat, and when I came to shore,
 The boy was wing'd ; methought it was a wonder ;
 The dame had eyes like lightning, or the flash
 That runs before the hot report of thunder ;

Her smiles
 Were sweet,
 Lovely her face ; was ne'er so fair a creature,
 For earthly carcass had a heavenly feature.
 My friend, quoth she, sweet ferryman, behold,
 We three must pass, but not a farthing fare ;
 But I will give, for I am Queen of Love,
 The brightest lass thou lik'st unto thy share ;
 Choose where
 Thou lov'st,
 Be she as fair as Love's sweet lady is,
 She shall be thine, if that will be thy bliss.
 With that she smil'd with such a pleasing face
 As might have made the marble rock relent ;
 And I that triumph'd in disdain of love,
 Bad fie on him that to fond love was bent,
 And then
 Said thus,
 So light the ferryman, for love doth care,
 As Venus pass not, if she pay no fare.
 At this a frown sat on her angry brow ;
 She winks upon her wanton son hard by,
 He from a quiver drew a bolt of fire,
 And aim'd so right as that he pierc'd mine eye ;
 And then
 Did she
 Draw down the veil that hid the virgin's face,
 Whose lovely beauty lighten'd all the place."

(pp. 259-60, as before.)

The closing line is worthy of Spenser, and there is nothing finer in the Hesperides.

James Shirley's "Poems" published in 1646 had long circulated in MS., and I find the original of Herrick's Julia in his Odelia, and in his "To L. for a Wreath of Bays sent him," I discern the prototype of his "Welcome to Sack," and ever and anon peculiar ways of putting things and celebrations of feminine graces, that Herrick must have seen. Of Shirley I can find space only for a single quotation. It reminds us in parts of Herrick's "Welcome to Sack" (I. 133) and "Farewell to Sack" (I. 76), and also of his Lines "To Mistresse Katharine Bradshaw, the lovely, that crowned him with Laurel" (I. 163). There is much of their abandon and ecstatic fancies :

To L. for a Wreath of Bays sent him.

"Soul of my Muse, what active unknown fire
 Already doth thy Delphick wreath inspire !
 O' th' sudden, how my faculties swell high,
 And I am all a powerful prophesy !
 Sleep, ye dull Cæsars, Rome will boast in vain
 Your glorious triumphs ; one is in my brain
 Great as all yours ; and circled with thy bays,
 My thoughts take empire o'er all land and seas :
 Proof against all the planets, and the stroke
 Of thunder, I rise up Augustus' oak,
 Within my guard of laurel, and made free
 From age, look fresh still as my Daphnean tree.

My fancy's narrow yet, till I create
For thee another world, and in a state
As free as innocence, shame all poets and wit,
To climb no higher than Elysium yet,
Where the pale lovers meet, and teach the groves
To sigh, and sing vain legends of their loves ;
We will have other flights, and taste such things
Are only fit for sainted queens and kings.
Musaeus, Homer and y^e sacred rest
Long since believ'd in y^r own ashes blest,
Awake, and live again ! and having wrote
One story, wish your songs forgot,
And yourselves too : but one high subject must
In spite of death and time, new soul y^r dust.
What cannot I command ? what can a thought
Be now ambitious of, but still be brought
By virtue of my charm ? I will undo
The year, and at my pleasure make one new,
All spring, whose blooming paradise but when
I list, shall with one frown wither again.
Astrologers, leave searching the vast skies :
Teach them all fate, O Delia, from thine eyes ;
All that was earth resolves my spirits free,
I have nothing left now but my soul and thee."

(Works by Gifford & Dyce, vi., pp. 413-14.)

I cannot doubt that besides those named, he had studied Barnabe Barnes and Richard Barnfield and other of the early Singers. With an absolute and unique originality Herrick, nevertheless, reveals that, Bee-like, he gathered his honey from many flowers. Yet was it his boast that anything he took was 'adopted, not stolen,' as thus :—

Upon his Verses.

“What off-spring other men have got,
The how, where, when, I question not.
These are the Children I have left ;
Adopted some ; none got by theft.
But all are toucht (like lawfull plate)
And no Verse illegitimate.” (Vol. II. p. 223.)

He had been a Poet at Cambridge, and came to 'town' all ringing with his poetic readings and his own fine imaginings. It was something that there were still surviving so many who could appreciate his rare gift.⁶

During the year 1620 onward, it is just possible that ⁶ I wish here to express my admiration for a brilliant paper on Robert Herrick, by Mr. Edmund W. Gosse, which appeared in Cornhill (August, 1875). I am unlucky enough to be compelled to express and vindicate differences (as above and onward) in several important points of fact, and likewise in criticism; but none the less do I appreciate the fine spirit of the paper, and its finished workmanship. Besides, Mr. Gosse was really the first to write in full sympathy with Herrick's genius, and to try to indicate (if not always accurately) his reading. See II. Critical. for remarks on Mr. Gosse's conception (cheu! misconception) of Herrick in relation to the events and circumstances of the period, and other matters.

through his uncle he was received at Court. His later royal poems "sung at Whitehall" and his usual language to the King and Queen, suggest that he had been for years known to them, if certain also suggest that he met with inevitable courtly disappointments—as George Herbert too had to confess. The only really dated poem is his rendering of the "Dialogue betwixt Horace and Lydia," which is inscribed "Translated anno 1627," and "set by Mr. Ro. Ramsey." To have found such a distinguished composer as Ramsey to 'set' his verses, is surely declarative of a position already gained; for Ramsey, and Laniere, and Wilson, and the Lawes—all of whom 'set' his poems—moved in the Court and among the "Upper Ten."

In 1629 two important events in Herrick's life took place. The first—hitherto unascertained—was the death of his mother. I am able to give here, for the first time, her Will, which is again literatim, as follows:—

"In the name of God, Amen, I, Julian Hirricke of Brantā, in the Countie of Suff., Gent., being in perfect memorie, (thanks bee vnto God) yet remembre the vncertainty of this life, doe make my last will and Testament in forme following, ffirst I bequeath my soule vnto God my mercifull ffather, And my bodie to to bee buried at the place of my departure. Imp^r. I will & bequeath to my daughter Wingfeild one hundred pounds. Item to my sonne Wingfield, Twenty pounds. It. to my Grandchild Mercy Wingfield, fiftie pounds. It. to their sonne, Humphrey Wingfeld, Twentie pounds. It. to their sonne, John, Tenne pounds, and to their sonne, Willm, ten pounds. It. to my sonne, Willm Herricke, one hundred pounds; and to his two children, ten pounds apeece. To my Goddaughter, Ellis, my lesser Cutt worke handkerchiefe. To his wife, a Ringe of Twenty shillings. To my two sonnes, Nicholas and Robert, either of them a Ringe of Twenty shillings apeece. To my sonne Willm, his wife, a Ringe of Twenty shillings. It. to Dr. Jones, fortie shillings. It. to Mr. Herdson, three pounds; to his wife, my saddle and cloth. Item to Mr. Cauldred, a Ringe of Twenty shillings. Item to Charls Cutler, Twenty shillings. To Laurence Crick, Twenty shillings. To mine owne maide, Twenty shillings, besides her wages. It. to An Tomson, twenty shillings. To Humph: Huggins, Twenty shillings. It. to Nurse Lawter, Twenty shillings. To the Coachmā, tenne shillings. It. to the boye in the Kitchin, Ten shillings. To the maides now in the house, ten shillings apeece. To the poore of Brantā, fortie shillings. All the rest of my goods now at Brantā I bequeath to my daughter Wingfeld, the siluer skillet and plate, after her decease, to Mercy, her daughter. And I doe appoint my sonne Willm and my daughter Wingfeld my Executors, and my sonne Wingfeld suprauisor of this my last Will. In witnes whereof I haue herevnto set my seale the fower and Twentieth of August, One thousand six hundred twenty nine, Julian Hirricke.

“ Sealed and deliuered in the presence of Ro: Grimble,

John Rand.—Nowe Lord letst thie Servant depart in peace.”⁷

Recorded in Book “Ridley” at folio 97.

This Will was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury 5th November, 1629, by William Herricke (not Hirricke or Hiricke as the mother spelled) the son and Mary Wingfield the daughter of the testatrix, the executors named by her. So that she probably died shortly after making these arrangements. That she came to be resident at Brantham in Suffolk, is explained by her daughter ‘Mercie’ having married there. Unfortunately the Register of Brantham does not commence until 1634; but until comparatively recent years Wingfields are found in the register and Parish. All that Robert and his elder brother Nicholas received was “a ringe of twenty shillings” apiece. Sir William Herrick does not get even a ‘ringe’—a suggestive omission in the remembrance that he had been one of the two “chief overseers.” The solitary reference to his mother does not indicate any very warm regard; and it is noticeable that he who wrote Epitaphs so incomparably for so many, left none for her, neither aught of memorial-verse.

⁷ Obtained through Colonel Chester, as before.

The second event of the year 1629 is his taking orders, and his presentation to the 'living' of Dean Prior in Devon. I know not on what authority it has been stated that it was through the (then) Earl of Exeter the 'presentation' was obtained. The fact is that the vicar of Dean Prior,—Potter—several of whose family find a place in Hesperides—being promoted to the bishopric of Carlisle, he was admitted thereto on 2nd October, 1629. What bishop gave him 'orders' has not been transmitted. From his Lines to Williams Bishop of Lincoln on his imprisonment, one might suspect that he had thrown obstacles in the way of his ordination. But it may be that the felt injury was neglect or even flouting by that most astute but unpoetical dignitary, of the earlier "Charoll," which the Poet had sent him. Nor have we any light on the long delay from 1620 to (apparently) 1629, that is until nearly his 40th year, in seeking, or at least being made 'priest.' His motif for seeking ordination was at any rate not mercenary, or for "a piece of bread." He asserts this unmistakably in his impassioned "Farewell vnto Poetrie," as thus :—

—————" 'Tis not need

(The skarcrow vnto mankinde) that doth breed

*Wiser conclusions in mee, since I knowe
I've more to beare my chardges, then way to goe ;
Or had I not, I'de stopp the spreading itch
Off craueing more : soe yn conceipt bee ritch ;
But tis the god of nature who yntends,
And shaps my function for more glorious ends :”*

To-day a more charming portion of the great Vineyard (to fitly appropriate Bible language) than Dean Prior is scarcely conceivable. Leaving Brent—a station on the South Devon Railway, about 16 miles from Plymouth,—you take the road in a north-easterly direction, passing just below the edge of the moor. The road is not particularly beautiful or interesting, but you get glimpses of the hills sometimes on your left, and a mile and a half from Brent there are a few old cottages, and then the road passes through a fordable stream by a clump of trees, and from a little stone bridge for foot passengers that they call in Devonshire a clam, you look over the hedge to your right upon rich meadows, well backed with wood. Another mile and you come to the narrow lane on the right which leads down to Dean Church, i.e. the Church and vicarage and a small farm-house and a few cottages clustered round them. The Church town as it is called in Devon and Cornwall, lies in a small but deep valley. Looking down upon them from the high road, the church and houses seem sunk among the trees. The trees now standing are all of recent growth, but from the sheltered situation of the little valley, it was probably always well wooded. About a mile further on is Dean Prior, another little hamlet, close to which stands Dean Court, now a farm, but anciently a great manor-house. In Herrick's time it was beautified by Sir Edward Giles, the lord of the manor, who left his family-seat at Bowden near Totness, and came thither to reside a few years before his death in 1637. Close to this hamlet of Dean Prior—(which en passant gets its name from the manor having been, up to the Reformation, the property of the Priory of Plympton) the little river Dean flows down to join the Dart near Buckfastleigh, a market-town a mile further on the road to Ashburton. The stream flows from the moor through one of the coombs, or deep and wooded valleys which abound on the borders of Dartmoor. Like all Devonshire streams it has a rocky bed. The wood through which it bickers is called Deany Wood, and just above the wood is another little hamlet called Dean Combe. These three hamlets, Dean Combe, Dean Prior and Dean Church, all within the parish of Dean, form as it were the points of a triangle, of which each side is about three-quarters of a mile in length. The parish contains 4,165 acres, and in 1871 the population was 400, the number of people having diminished since the beginning of the present century, and being probably less than it was in Herrick's time. According to the Clergy List the tythe-rent charge is now about £230 a year with 93 acres of glebe. The old manor-house—Dean Court—was the only great house in the parish. From Sir Edward Giles, who enlarged the house and made a park, and apparently kept up some state there, it passed into the family of Yarde, and from them—long after Herrick's death—by marriage, to the Bullers. Lord Churston, the present head of the Buller family, is now lord of the manor, but Dean Court is shorn of its grandeur, and is now an ordinary farm-house, with but few remains of its ancient dignity.

Two centuries and a half ago Dean Prior was remote from literary society, and its parishioners not very capable of giving intellectual sympathy to their Vicar. The change from London to "dull Devonshire" and the "loathed West" to such a sociable and erewhile pleasure-taking nature must have been in Dominie Sampson's exclamation—prodigious! The links that bound him to the great Metropolis were not easily severed. From his "loopholes of retreat" he looked thitherward. Within a few months of his settlement he wrote "A Pastoral upon the Birth of Prince Charles," afterwards Charles II., and it is headed, "Presented to the King," (Charles I.) "and set by Mr. Nic. Laniere." Three years onward—1633—he similarly greeted another royal birth, entitling his poem, "The Poet's Good Wishes for the most hopeful and handsome prince, the Duke of York," afterwards James II. Later still, sick-at-heart, through hope long deferred (I fear) he thus addressed his Muse on sending (as seems likely) a copy of Hesperides :

"Go wooe young Charles, no more to looke
Then but to read this in my booke :
How Herrick begs, if that he can-
Not like the Muse, to loue the man
Who by the shepherds, sung long since
The starre-led birth of Charles the Prince."

namely his "Pastorall."

Thus was it continuously, on through the troublous and dolorous years of conflict between Kingdom and King. That he cultivated his gift as a Poet in Devonshire is certain, albeit Hesperides in its order or disorder violates all chronology and makes it impossible to date earlier and later except occasionally. So far as I have been able to trace, his first appearance in print was the anonymous publication of fragments of his "Fairy" poems—so imperfect as to suggest that they had been surreptitiously obtained. This was in 1635, in a delicious little booklet called, "A Description of the King and Queene of Fayries, their habit, fare, their abode, pompe and state. Beeing very delightfull to the sense, and full of mirth."⁸ Ben Jonson's death took place on 6th of August, 1637⁹; but Herrick did not contribute to "Ionsonus Virbivs" (1638). Within the next few years he must have been well known as a Poet; for when in 1640 there came out "Wit's Recreations" there were included in it no fewer than 62 of the poems contained in Hesperides afterwards, and one ("Description of a Woman") not reprinted therein. In common with the entire collection, these are all without name or even initials; but they establish their authoritative publication by the author's own most careful revision and reproduction of them subsequently.¹ It is noticeable that so much from him should have found place in a book that was the first to bring together—sadly intermixed, no doubt—some of the most choice pieces of the greater poets and a few originals, as of Richard Crashaw's immortal "Wishes," if somewhat poorly given. The probabilities are that he came and went between Devonshire and London. The provincial Winters could not but be dull and lonely; and for the elder generation of his poetic contemporaries there were rising into notice Carew and Lovelace, Denham and Suckling, and Charles Cotton, with all of whom he formed friendships apparently.

⁸ This will likely be reproduced as one of my "Occasional Issues."

⁹ It is usually said to have been 16th August. Whether it was old or new style I am not aware. If new style it would be = 18th August.

¹ See II. Critical for more on "Wit's Recreations."

Of his life as a clergyman—except in the lights and shadows of touching memorial and 'epitaph' verses beyond all Greek and Roman exquisiteness, and marriage greetings comparable with Catullus at his best, and stinging and rough epigrams hitting off his parishioners emulative of Martial at his worst, in Hesperides—we know very little. That he entered on his office with a real sense of new responsibilities, and that he was resolved to be delivered from all that would hinder his consecration to its manifold duties, is certain. This indeed is made to stand out very definitely, in a sense, awfully—though, strange to say, it has escaped all his Biographers. Among the Ashmolean MSS. a little poem—complete in itself, and not a fragment—is informed with a passion and has over it a shadow of solemnity most unusual to Herrick, and declarative of a resolute breaking off from earlier entanglements and self-indulgences, and a profound sense of being now a 'priest of the Most High God,' and so set apart for holy and celestial work. We know that he remained unmarried; and hence there was reality in the "Farewell" of this remarkable poem. Let us study it, meditatively:—

"Vpon Parting.

Goe hence away, and in thy parting know
 'Tis not my voice, but heauens that bids thee goe;
 Spring hence thy faith, nor thinke it ill desart
 I finde in thee, that makes me thus to part.
 But voice of fame, and voice of heauen haue thunderd
 We both were lost, if both of us not sunderd:
 Fould now thine armes, and in thy last looke reare
 One Sighe of loue, and coole it with a teare:
 Since part we must, let's kisse; that done, retire
 With as cold frost, as erst we mett with fire;
 With such white vowes as fate can nere dissever,
 But truth knitt fast; and so farewell for euer."

Vol. III. p. 109.

It needs no italicizing or capitals to arrest attention to the significance of these words:—

"Voice of fame and voice of heauen haue thunderd
 We both were lost, if both of us not sunderd:

 and so farewell for euer."

There was probably folded up in this "Parting" such unsuspected struggle and conquest as similarly unsuspected, went on with Phineas Fletcher.² Even his Muse was to be forsaken, as his equally striking and memorable "Farwell vnto Poetrie" remains to attest—although it proved a mere mood, not an irreversible or unreversed decision; or rather, henceforward he would 'sing' his "Noble Numbers" rather than add to "Hesperides." Will the Reader tarry at this point to read and re-read this "Farwell" (Vol. III., pp. 101-6), or at least the italicized lines in these two brief quotations from it:—

———— "Vnto mee, bee onlye hoarse, since now
(Heauen and my soule beare record of my vowe)
I, my desires screw from thee, and directe
Them and my thoughts to that sublim'd respecte
And conscience vnto priesthood." (p. 104.)

Then thus of higher aims in his after-verse:—

"Thus with a kisse of warmth, and loue, I parte
 Not soe, but that some relique yn my harte
Shall stand for euer, though I doe addressse
Chiefelye my selfe to what I must proffess:
 Knowe yet (rare soule) when my diuiner muse
 Shall want a hand-mayde (as she ofte will vse)

² See my Memoir of Phineas Fletcher, F. W. Library edition of his Works.

*Bee readye, thou for mee, to wayte vppon her,
 Though as a seruant, yet a mayde of honor.
 The crowne of dutye is our dutye : well
 Doing's, the fruite of doinge well. Farewell."*

(P. 106.)

Swift's and Sterne's Sermons remain to witness how they could and actually did preach—to the confusion of all theories and preconceptions about them, for where do you find of their kind, better? We have not this advantage in the case of Herrick. Anthony a-Wood characterizes his Sermons as "florid and witty [=wise] discourses," but he shews himself ill-informed on him in several ways. He states, too, that he was much "beloved by the neighbouring gentry." A late tradition, from the mouth of the "oldest inhabitant," aged 99, one Dorothy King, informs us that "he one day threw his sermon at his congregation, cursing them for their inattention."³ It has been said of Sterne's portrait that it looks as if he were going to fling his wig at his auditors. He had too keen a sense of the ridiculous to have run such a grotesque risk ; but somehow one does not feel it incongruous if Herrick did what venerable Dorothy recalled. She shewed that her old Vicar's memory was dear to her ³ Quarterly Review : Mr. Barron Field, as before.

by regularly using stray verses of his "Letanie" in bed o' nights and preserving in her memory other lines.⁴ I suspect that not in the pulpit, but as a free and easy associate with the "neighbouring gentry," and his humblest parishioners in their joys and sorrows, amusements and superstitions, did the Vicar exercise influence. From his repeated self-portraits and descriptions of his 'cell' (as he called his Vicarage) it is abundantly manifest that if there were high thinking, his ordinary living was homely. His one house-keeper and servant, 'Prue,' or Prudence Baldwin, lives "for all time" in Hesperides. His spaniel 'Tracy' takes its place beside Cowper's and Scott's. One other pet he has not celebrated. Dame Dorothy King distinctly remembered that he had a "favourite pig, which he amused himself by teaching to drink out of a tankard." This latter 'favourite' has been repeated in our own day in a 'parson' of equal uniqueness of character and almost equal poetic genius—the Vicar of Morwenstow, the Rev. Robert Stephen Hawker, M.A., of whom his Biographer (the Rev. S. Baring-Gould, M.A.) states: "He had a favourite rough pony which he rode, and a black pig of Berkshire breed, well cared for, washed and curry-combed, which ran beside him when he went out for walks and paid visits. Indeed, the pig followed him into ladies' drawing-rooms, not always to their satisfaction. The pig was called 'Gyp,' and was intelligent and obedient. If Mr. Hawker saw that those whom he visited were annoyed at the intrusion of the pig, he would order it out, and the black creature shrunk out of the door, with its tail out of curl."⁵ Elsewhere (II. Critical) it will be amply shown that the Vicar of Dean Prior had a deeper vein of Christian thoughtfulness than Hesperides, or even Noble Numbers hastily read, would lead us to suppose. There will be found also a striking undertone of melancholy. Fundamentally, it will appear that no misconception is more absolute than that he went on singing his jovial lyrics and throwing off his light fantastiques of verse and broad epigrams while the most disastrous events were occurring in the nation. A thoughtful study of Hesperides reveals him as moved in the deepest of him by every element of the sorrowful national conflict, and that his gay 'singing' was long prior to these years. There was gravity all along in combination with his jesting, aye, even when what was "not convenient" fell from him.

⁴ Ibid.

⁵ Page 20.

From 1629 to 1647 he continued Vicar of Dean Prior. Then came thundering "The Revolution," with Oliver Cromwell's truncheon as "Lord Protector," more potential than kingly sceptre gripped by Charleses. John Selden was Herrick's friend "next to idolatry;" but Herrick was an avowed Royalist and 'Loyalist'—that is to the King, rather than to the Kingdom. His 'Loyal' poems are open-mouthed in his avowal of the 'divine right' of kings to 'govern,' wrongly or rightly. There are memorable bites that go to prove he saw with tear-wet eyes, the madness of Charles I. and his advisers—saw the glory paling in his ideal sovereignty—the rainbow vanishing in a drizzle of bodiless rain; but substantially he held fast by the old anchor of hereditary monarchy as such. As a consequence he was disloyal to the Commonwealth and its 'government'—a government built up, if as augustly, also against as great odds as was the second Temple on Mount Zion. One can understand the chivalry of such loyalty; especially as nowhere is there a ribald or even tart word against the Roundheads or Cromwell personally; but we must equally comprehend the inevitableness of the Vicar's removal. "Sober and learned" he might or might not be—as John Walker in his folio of "Sufferings of the Clergy"⁶ names him; but then one true to the powers that were, in every parish, was a necessity. And so Robert Herrick stepped out, and good and brave and venerable JOHN SYMS stepped in. That it was unreluctantly he gave way is loudly proclaimed in his "Return to London"—all palpitating as the poem is with gladfulness in once more being back in his native country (as he designates it) and free from his banishment. We must tarry to read this poem:

⁶ Page 253.

His returne to London.

From the dull confines of the drooping West,
 To see the day spring from the pregnant East,
 Ravisht in spirit, I come, nay more, I flie
 To thee, blest place of my Nativitie !
 Thus, thus with hallowed foot I touch the ground,
 With thousand blessings by thy Fortune crown'd.
 O fruitful Genius ! that bestowest here
 An everlasting plenty, yeere by yeere.
*O Place ! O People ! Manners ! fram'd to please
 All Nations, Customes, Kindreds, Languages !*
 I am a free-born Roman ; suffer then,
 That I amongst you live a Citizen.
 London my home is : though by hard fate sent
 Into a long and irksome banishment ;
 Yet since cal'd back ; henceforward let me be,
 O native countrey, repossess by thee !
 For, rather then I'le to the West return,
 I'le beg of thee first here to have mine Urn.
 Weak I am grown, and must in short time fall ;
 Give thou my sacred Reliques Buriall.

It is evident that the 'outed' Vicar's return to London was as of a Jew's from captivity and exile. Walker (as before) states that "after his Ejectment he returned to London, and having no fifths paid him, was subsisted by Charity, until the Restoration." This needs sifting—and shall now have it. First of all, Mr. Walford, in sheer ignorance of the facts, sneers at his "godly successor," repeatedly putting 'godly' within inverted commas. Now had he deigned to inquire, instead of sneering, he would have superabundantly discovered that John Syms was a man of men—an humble, devoted, learned, conscience-ruled servant of the 'great Taskmaster'—a man whose memory bore fragrance in it across a century and more, as well for the multitude of his 'sufferings' on account of his heroic Nonconformity, as for the meekness and modesty and unclamorousness with which he bore them. Next, in like ignorance of the facts, the non-payment of 'Fifths' is turned not only into a sneer, but an accusation. If, again, Wood and Mr. Walford and your ultra-Churchmen had inquired, it would have been made clear to them that in the case of such slender 'livings' to give 'Fifths' was an impossibility, if body and soul were to be kept together, and that it was only in such cases, naturally, as warranted the deduc-tion, or in special circumstances, that 'Fifths' were due to the 'outed' clergyman. Then one is compelled to remind your Mr. Walfords that when the later Ejection of 24th August, 1662, was enforced, those who returned' in not a solitary instance paid 'Fifths,' or paid one sixpence to the then 'outed'; and yet these "Two Thousand" were as learned, as cultured, as 'godly,' as consecrate (to say the least), and as lawfully and 'divinely' appointed as they were. More than that: they were 'ejected' not for disloyalty to an earthly sovereign, but as being loyal to the King of Kings as their consciences instructed them. I cry shame on the 'restored,' who while 'out' had regularly drawn their 'Fifths' and more—and yet forgot the good men and true who beyond the letter had kept the law toward them. I protest with indignation against such traducing of honourable and illustrious men.

Further: the alleged poverty and 'subsisting by charity' is sheer nonsense. For, unlike most, Herrick had innumerable wealthy relatives of the nearest, and many open doors of welcome in brothers and sisters well-married. It is out of the question to accredit that all these resources were dried up. As a Royalist in the Commonwealth, he doubtless had his hardships and vexations ; but there is not one iota to warrant the alleged abject poverty. We are the more disposed to argue this from the numerous indications of the most friendly relations being sustained by the Poet with his family on both sides. The Stones and Soames and Wingfields, and the other Herricks, and their sons and daughters—all kindly remembered as ‘kinsmen’—have prominent and heart-full celebration all through Hesperides. Probably the origin of the whole misrepresentation is to be looked for in ‘gossip’ concerning gifts bestowed on him by noble and other friends, as was the mode. That, like others, he received such gifts, is evident by his acknowledgments to the Earl of Pembroke, as thus :—

“You, my lord, are one, whose hand along
Goes with your mouth, or do’s outrun your tongue,
Paying before you praise, and cockring wit,
Give both the gold and garland unto it.”

(Vol. II. p. 63.)

So “To the Patron of Poets, M. End. Porter” :—

—“Let there be Patrons ; Patrons llke to thee,
Brave Porter ! Poets ne’r will wanting be :
Fabius, and Cotta, Lentulus, all live
In thee, thou man of men ! who here dos’t give
Not onely subject-matter for our wit,
But likewise oyle of maintenance to it.

For which, before thy threshold, we'll lay downe
 Our Thyirse, for Scepter, and our Baies for Crown."
 (Vol. I. p. 70.)

A brother of Endymion Porter may also have been a 'patron'; but it must be remembered that the two introductory stanzas of "An Ode to Master Endymion Porter, upon his Brother's Death" are put into the mouth of Endymion and express his loss, not Herrick's own. Otherwise the second stanza would have suggested weighty obligation, if not dependence, e.g. :—

"Alas for me! that I have lost
 E'en all almost :
 Sunk is my sight ; set is my Sun ;
 And all the loome of life undone :
 The staffe, the Elme, the prop, the shelt'ring wall,
 Whereon my vine did crawle,
 Now, now, blowne downe ; needs must the old stock fall."
 (Vol. I. p. 124.)

The opening precludes the application of this to Herrick :—

"Not all thy flushing sunnes are set,
 Herrick, as yet."

Such 'gifts' partook not at all of the nature of eleemosynary payments ; and yet I feel persuaded that Anthony a-Wood had merely caught up a perverted rumour concerning them, and so wrote of his "subsisting by charity."

In 1647-8 he published his "Hesperides: Works Humane and Divine," with his portrait—of which more in the sequel—prefixed. He describes himself as "Robert Herrick, Esq.;" so assuming the lay character, as was possibly expedient, alike from the circumstances and from the matter-of-fact that in so far as the bulk of the poems went, they had been composed by him while a layman. Elsewhere again (II. Critical) I examine his matterful and marvellous double-volume. Here it is sufficient to remark that never had the Cavaliers so congenial a gift in a book—redolent as it was of that type of wit with which they set "the table in a roar."

A tradition lingered in Devonshire that Herrick was the originator of "Poor Robin's Almanac" that ultimately became renowned and held a long lease of life, if indeed it do not still in humble guise circulate. Nichols in his Leicestershire accepts the tradition as possible, as he also accepts his (impossible) poverty while in London. Others recalling that the Almanac was first published in 1661 regard it as impossible. I have disposed of the poverty in any pauper-sense; but I am inclined to accredit the tradition. For (1) The Restoration of "our most religious king" Charles II. came with sudden unexpectedness; so that such a literary scheme might be extremely timely to Herrick, and while all ready, years before, he may have simply postponed publication until 1661. (2) It was not until the 'Ejection' of 24th August, 1662, that John Syms was 'outed' from Dean Prior; and so Herrick might still up to 1662 be gladly occupied in such a venture. (3) Such a tradition could scarcely be invented—for it was not a thing at all likely to be ascribed to their Vicar by his Parishioners unless he himself had told and owned it. (4) It is specially to be remembered (albeit from Chaucer onward 'Robin' was the accepted name for a simple rustic) that both in his Poems, and in at least one letter, "Robin" and "Robin Herrick" was his self-chosen playful way of describing himself. An examination of the earlier 'Poor Robin's' Almanacs and of later, gives things that in my judgment might have been written by Herrick.⁷ If only we had the key—and a chance turning out of old MSS.

⁷ I regret that space cannot be found for specimens. Had one known absolutely that they were his, space must have been taken. As it is, we must wait confirmation. The verses, sooth to say, are not of high quality. Certes they are not equal to Hesperides, though they must have come after.

may any day put it into our hands—I imagine it would be discovered that the Poet of the Hesperides and Noble Numbers took part in the fecund literature of the period. It seems inconceivable that he could give the world “Hesperides” and “Noble Numbers,” and then cease production. And yet this must be believed if we set aside anonymous writing; for outside of his books, all that persistent research has recovered is the tomb-inscription of his neighbours, Sir Edward and Lady Giles. This, and the Poems from the Ashmolean and B. Museum MSS. are the whole that have been added to his ‘Works.’ Here and there poems of the Hesperides were inserted in after-books, e.g. in the ‘Musarum Deliciæ’ (1656) and the continuous editions of “Wit’s Recreations” and the like. How strangely even Hesperides had fallen out of sight so early as 1657 is evidenced by Henry Bold’s “Wit a sporting in a pleasant Grove of New Fancies,” wherein various of its Poems were undetectedly appropriated bodily, and others disguisedly.

Returned to Dean Prior after 24th August, 1662—John Symes still ‘preaching’ with splendid devotedness and fearlessness of penalties in neighbouring villages—Herrick was then in his 71st-72d year; but, in all likelihood beneath his grey hairs carried as clear an intellect and joyous a spirit as of old. He had vowed that nothing should ever take him back to loathed Devonshire :—

“ A people currish ; churlish as the seas ;
And rude (almost) as rudest Salvages ;
With whom I did, and may re-sojourn when Rockes turn to Rivers, Rivers turn to Men.”

(Vol. I., p. 48.)

but mellowed and softened by the intervening years of national and personal trial, he no doubt went back gratefully and graciously. He was destined to reach the “ four score years ” and upwards. There is an inexplicable absence of contemporary notices of him. How he bore himself in his white-headed old age there is no light to see. At last the “ lean fellow ” who beats all conquerors paid the ultimate call. He died in October, 1674, in his 83d year. As with George Herbert, the exact day of his death cannot be fixed ; but in the church-register at Dean-Prior is still preserved this entry :

“ Robert Herrick, vicker, was buried y^e 15th day of October 1674.”

His grave is unknown, or at least uncertain. There is a characteristic introduction of himself in his epitaph lines for Sir Edward and Lady Giles ; and if composed long after their decease for a late-raised monument, the expectant attitude of the words I venture to italicise, is significant and pathetic :

“ Here’s the Sun-set of a Tedious day :
 These two asleep are : I’le but be Vndrest
And so to Bed : Pray wish us all Good Rest.”

A collateral descendant (W. Perry-Herrick, Esq., of Beaumanor Park, Leicestershire) erected a costly monument to his memory in Dean Church. It is cut out of a great block of Caen stone, and carven in fruit and foliage. The inscription is on a brass plate and runs as follows :

IN THIS CHURCHYARD LIE THE REMAINS OF
 ROBERT HERRICK,

| | |
|---|----------------------------|
| AUTHOR OF THE HESPERIDES AND OTHER POEMS, | |
| OF AN ANCIENT FAMILY IN | PRESENTED TO THIS LIVING |
| LIECESTERSHIRE, AND BORN | BY KING CHARLES I., IN |
| IN THE YEAR 1591. HE WAS | THE YEAR 1629. EJECTED DU- |
| EDUCATED AT ST. JOHN’S | RING THE COMMONWEALTH |
| COLLEGE AND TRINITY | AND REINSTATED SOON |
| HALL, CAMBRIDGE. | AFTER THE RESTORATION. |

HE DIED VICAR OF THIS PARISH IN THE YEAR 1674.

This Tablet was Erected

TO HIS MEMORY BY HIS KINSMAN, WILLIAM PERRY HERRICK
 OF BEAUMANOR PARK, LEICESTERSHIRE, A.D. 1857.

“ OUR MORTAL PARTS MAY WRAPT IN SEARE-CLOTHES LYE, GREAT SPIRITS NEVER WITH THEIR BODIES DIE.”

HESPERIDES.

VIRTUS OMNIA NOBILITAT.^a

^a Works : Fuller Worthies’ Library, Vol. II. p. 70.

And so I leave my little Biography with the Reader, asking him, if so he please, to turn next to II. Critical. If in both I have sought to revive the 'fame' of Herrick it has been with a recollection of the axiom of Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke, in his "Inquisition vpon Fame and Honour":—

" Thus see we, both the force and use of Fame ;
How States and men have honour by her stile,
And ecchoes that enuiron in Order's frame,
Which disproportion waiteth to beguile :
Fame walks in truth, and cherisheth her end,
Knowes neither why, nor how, yet is her friend."
(Works in F. W. L., ii. p. 70.)

II. CRITICAL.

THE outward Facts in the life of Herrick, even as more matterfully told by us (I. Biographical) are few and simple. None the less has he secured that 'eternity of fame' of which again and again he prophesied in his Hesperides. It is as Singer he is remembered; and if his memory thus endure through relatively humble and fragile verse, it is only the old old story of the fern in its little nook out-during the stately Manor-house. Flowers bloom across the centuries, while the rock crumbles and moulders. The merest lilt and playthings of Poetry keep green and fragrant the name of their Maker, when (so-called) 'great' works are benignantly covered with the fine small dust of oblivion. And yet there is more, infinitely, than flower-beauty or bird-like singing in Hesperides. Apollo was still Apollo when he played his oaten reed; but Apollo who played his oaten reed was the 'unshorn' sun-god. Similarly, if you look and listen whilst you read the Poetry of Robert Herrick, you will discover that you have genius of a unique and masterful sort—no mere dainty weaver of words into rhyme. Greatness is not a synonym for bulk. Perfectness, on however small a scale, is the signet of the one man in ten thousand, whatever be his material, and whatever his art. Keeping all this in mind, I ask the Reader to accompany me in an examination of the Works of Herrick so as to bring out their and his characteristics—the latter the more necessary because if not the Poet at least the Man has not been adequately estimated ; contrariwise, has been mis-estimated. These SIX things I propose to look at successively :—

- I. The Book in its arrangement or disarrangement :
of what it consists, and wherefore.
- II. Evidences of patient and genuine workmanship.
- III. What the Book tells of the Man and his relation to his times.
- IV. The specialities of his Poetry.
- V. His assurance of fame.
- VI. His Portrait.

I. The Book in its arrangement or disarrangement : of what it consists, and wherefore. In “ The Argument of his Book,” (I. p. 7-8) the ‘argument’ is sweetly and alluringly put. As one is thankful to turn the leaf of our (Authorised) English Bible, and pass from the pious profanities and lying of the Epistle-dedicatory “ to the most high and mighty prince, James,” so one inhales with sense of relief from mephitic air the freshness of the outburst that succeeds the verse-dedication "To the most illustrious and most hopefull Prince, Charles, Prince of Wales." One cannot read it too often ; and so here it is :—

I sing of Brooks, of Blossomes, Birds, and Bowers :
 Of April, May, of June, and July-Flowers.
 I sing of May-poles, Hock-carts, Wassails, Wakes,
 Of Bride-grooms, Brides, and of their Bridall-cakes.
 I write of Youth, of Love, and have Accesse
 By these, to sing of cleanly-Wantonnesse.
 I sing of Dewes, of Raines, and piece by piece
 Of Balme, of Oyle, of Spice, and Amber-Greece.
 I sing of Times trans-shifting ; and I write
 How Roses first came Red, and Lillies White.
 I write of Groves, of Twilights, and I sing
 The Court of Mab, and of the Fairie-King.
 I write of Hell ; I sing (and ever shall)
 Of Heaven, and hope to have it after all.

(Vol. I., pp. 7-8.)

With this 'argument' for guide, it is not difficult to find it fulfilled (filled full)—for, as in Noble Numbers, he says of God :—

He gives not poorly, taking some
 Between the finger, and the thumb ;
 But, for our glut, and for our store,
 Fine flowre prest down, and running o're.

(III. p. 146.)

But there is a great deal more in Hesperides than the 'argument' promises. You come first of all on celebrations of eminent contemporaries and near relatives and others, and then all-too-often on what are designated 'Epigrams.' Neither of these are in any way so much as hinted at in the 'argument.' I notice this in the outset because it gives a solution of different problems that start themselves as you study the Book, and perchance lightens, if it do^{es} not absolutely relieve, the blame of those offences against good manners, and even good breeding, that stain the pages.

The verse-celebrations addressed to friends and eminent contemporaries were evidently designed to form a separate work from Hesperides. They are these—Upon his Sister-in-Law, Mistresse Elizab : Herrick (I. p. 39). To the reverend shade of his religious Father (I. pp. 45-6)—To the Earle of Westmerland (I. p. 67)—To the Patron of Poets, M. End. Porter (I. p. 70)—His parting from Mrs. Dorothy Keneday (I. p. 72)—Upon Mrs. Eliz: Wheeler, under the name of Amarillis (I. p. 78-9)—To his dying brother, Master William Herrick (I. p. 125-6)—To Mistresse Katherine Bradshaw, the lovely, that crowned him with Laurel (I. pp. 163-4)—To the most vertuous Mistresse Pot, who many times entertained him (I. p. 165)—To the High and Noble

Prince, George, Duke, Marquesse, and Earle of Buckingham (I. 173)—Mrs. Eliz. Wheeler, under the name of the lost Shepardesse (II. pp. 3-4)—To the most accomplit Gentleman Master Edward Norgate (II. p. 29)—To his honoured kinsman Sir William Soame (II. p. 45)—To the Lady Mary Villars, Governesse to the Princesse Henrietta (II. p. 56)—The meddow verse or Aniversary to Mistris Bridget Lowman (II. pp. 60-1)—To the right honourable Philip, Earle of Pembroke, and Montgomery (II. pp. 62-3)—To the most learned, wise, and Arch-Antiquary, M. John Selden (II. p. 65)—To the most fair and lovely Mistris, Anne Soame, now Lady Abdie (II. pp. 69-70)—Upon his Kinswoman Mistris Elizabeth Herrick (II. pp. 70-1)—Upon M. Ben Johnson—Another (II. pp. 78-9)—To his Nephew, to be prosperous in his art of Painting (II. p. 79)—To his Maid Prew (II. pp. 80-1)—To his peculiar friend, Sir Edward Fish, Knight Baronet (II. p. 82)—To his peculiar friend, Master Thomas Shapcott, Lawyer (II. p. 110)—To the right gracious Prince, Lodwick, Duke of Richmond and Lenox (II. pp. 113-4)—To the Right Honourable Mildmay, Earle of Westmoreland (II. p. 118)—To his Kinsman, Sir Tho. Soame (II. p. 124)—To his worthy Friend, M. Tho. Falconbridge (II. p. 132)—To Sir Clisebie Crew (II. p. 134)—To his Honoured Kinsman, Sir Richard Stone (II. pp. 139-40)—

To the right Honourable Edward Earle of Dorset
(II. p. 143)—To his Kinswoman, Mrs. Penelope
Wheeler (II. p. 145)—Another upon her (ibid)—To Mistresse Mary Willand (II. p. 148)—To his Kinswoman, Mistresse Susanna Herrick (II. p. 152)—Upon Mistresse Susanna Southwell her cheeks (II. p. 153)—
To his honoured friend, Sir John Myntz (II. p. 154)—
To his worthy Kinsman, Mr. Stephen Soame (II. p.
162)—To his Honoured friend, M. John Weare, Councillour (II. p. 166)—Upon his Kinswoman, Mis-tresse Bridget Herrick (II. p. 169)—To his Brother in Law, Master John Wingfield (II. p. 181)—His Prayer to Ben Johnson (II. p. 185)—To his worthy friend, M.
Arthur Bartly (II. p. 216)—To M. Denham, on his Prospective Poem (II. p. 220)—To Doctor Alablaste, (II. pp. 258-59)—Upon his Kinswoman Mrs. M. S. (II.
pp. 259-60)—To his deare Valentine, Mistresse Margaret Falconbrige (II. p. 272)—To his faithfull friend, Master
John Crofts, Cup-bearer to the King (II. pp. 276-7)—
To my dearest Sister M. Mercie Herrick (II. pp. 180-1)
—To Mistresse Amie Potter (II. 288)—To M. Henry Lawes, the excellent Composer of his Lyricks (II. p.
293)—To his Friend, Master J. Jincks (II. p. 295)—
To his Honour'd Friend, Sir Thomas Heale (II. pp.

298-9)—Vpon Ben Johnson and An Ode for him (III. pp. 11-12)—To M. Kellam (III. pp. 14-15)—To his honoured and most ingenious friend Mr. Charles Cotton (III. p. 24)—To M. Leonard Willan his peculiar friend (III. p. 27)—To his worthy friend M. John Hall, Student of Grayes-Inne (III. 27-8)—To the most comely and proper M. Elizabeth Finch (III. pp. 28-9)—Ultimus Heroum, or to the most learned, and to the right Honourable Henry, Marquesse of Dorchester (III. p. 31)—To his learned friend M. Jo. Harmar, Phisitian to the Colledge of Westminster (III. pp. 32-3)—To his Sister in Law, M. Susanna Herrick (III. p. 37)—Upon the Lady Crew (III. p. 37)—Of Tomasin Parsons (III. p. 38)—To his Kinsman, M. Tho: Herrick, who desired to be in his Book (III. p. 39)—To the handsome Mistresse Grace Potter (III. p. 43)—To his peculiar friend M. Jo: Wicks (III. p. 65)—To Sir George Parrie, Doctor of the Civill Law (III. p. 66)—A Dialogue betwixt himselfe and Mistresse Eliza: Wheeler, under the name of Amarillis (III. p. 69)—To the Honoured, Master Endimion Porter (III. pp. 70-1)—The School or Perl of Putney, the Mistress of all singular manners, Mistresse Portman (III. pp. 73-4)—To M. Laurence Swetnaham (III. p. 76)—To the most accomplisht Gentleman Master Michael Oulsworth (III. pp. 77-8)—To his Brother Nicolas Herrick (III. p. 80).

As the most of these 'celebrations,' compared with the majority of the others, are of considerable extent, it will be seen that their proportion to the whole is large. Now turning to certain of them, there appear various titles for the Book within which he was writing the several tributes. Thus to Sir Edward Fish (1) :—

Since for thy full deserts (with all the rest
Of these chaste spirits, that are here possest
Of Life eternall) Time has made thee one,
For growth in this my rich Plantation. (II. p. 82.)

Again, to Sir Richard Stone (2) :—

To this white Temple of my Heroes, here
Beset with stately Figures (every where)
.
Come, thou." (II. p. 139.)

Once more, to Mrs. Penelope Wheeler (3) :—

Next is your lot (Faire) to be number'd one,
Here, in my Book's Canonization :
Late you come in ; but you a Saint shall be,
In Chiefe, in this Poetick Liturgie. (II. p. 145.)

Further, to Mr. Stephen Soame (4) :—

Nor is my Number full, till I inscribe
Thee sprightly Soame, one of my righteous Tribe
.

Among which Holies, be Thou ever known,
 Brave Kinsman, markt out with the whiter stone :
 Which seals Thy Glorie ; since I doe prefer
 Thee here in my eternall Calender. (II. p. 162.)

Again, to Dr. Alablaster (5) :—

Nor art thou lesse esteem'd, that I have plac'd (Amongst mine honour'd) Thee (almost) the last.
 (II. p. 258.)

Once more, to Susanna Herrick (6) :—

The Person crowns the Place ; your lot doth fall
 Last, yet to be with These a Principall.
 How ere it fortun'd ; know for Truth, I meant
 You a fore-leader in this Testament. (III. p. 37.)

Finally, to his kinsman, M. Tho. Herrick, who desired to be in his Book (7) :—

Welcome to this my Colledge, and though late
 Th'ast got a place here (standing candidate)
 It matters not, since thou art chosen one
 Here of my great and good foundation.
 (III. p. 39.)

The first, by the use of "Plantation," might have been interpreted as applicable to Hesperides, as such ;
 but all the others point out definitely a Book of Friends,
 a Book dedicated to their honour and poetic immortality.
 Then the third to Mrs. Penelope Wheeler, while called “Late,” is early in Hesperides, though well-advanced in the list of those separately renowned; and so of Dr. Alabaster, “almost the last” does not at all hold of his place in Hesperides, neither is the sixth to Mrs. Susanna Herrick “last.” Besides, finally, the seventh to M. Tho. Herrick recalls the first-announced purpose of that Book in which he had “desired to be.” Hence I think most will agree with me that Herrick had a manuscript book wherein he copied out his Verses to the inner circle of his friends and compeers, and which he pleasantly thought of, as a Gallery of Portraits, or a Hall of Statues, or a College of good and great. Their repeated annunciation of ‘immortality’ would lead us to conclude that they were meant one day to be published. Add to these the royal and loyal poems—of which anon—and the brilliant Epithalamiums and tender Epitaphs and rural poems to his Brother, and Crewe, and Pemberton, and sunny self-portraits—which all more or less partake of the same character,—and we can understand the Poet’s lofty estimate of such a book when it should be given to the world.

The Epigrams, in relation to the ‘argument’ are also and likewise made conspicuous by its absolute silence on them. Taken as a whole they were evidently written off after a laugh over Martial, or at some odd or offending parishioners. With very rare exceptions they lack the keenness of the classical Epigram. With as rare exceptions they are just so many 'spots' of putridity placed among the good things of the banquet. I cannot suppose that their Author designed them for publication, or at least, as part of Hesperides. A friend suggests that the Vicar of Dean Prior answered his parishioners as Solomon says the fool ought to be answered, that is, descended to their low level and versified in their own rough and coarse fashion the every-day subjects of their unlicensed wit and mirth. It may have been so—may be conceded that refinement would have been cast away on such "currish" natives. None the less is it to be lamented that their Vicar descended rather than sought to elevate them. Yet must it be added that among old clergymen, even down to our own day, an extraordinary freedom of speech was common. A very small grain of salt gave circulation to exceedingly broad stories; and notwithstanding, one could not doubt of the reality of the worth of such ancient and jocund clerics. The sorrow is that in Herrick's case his Epigrams were printed and published—only let after-considerations thereon be weighed.

Had those poems announced in the 'argument' alone been published, Hesperides had been such a gift to our finest poetical literature, as should have remained to-day unapproached for ethereality and delicacy, for brightness and whiteness, for colour and fragrance and melody. But self-evidently the Publisher had an eye to the sale, and his own remuneration; and on the plea of slenderness if only such Poems composed the volume, over-persuaded Herrick to entrust him with his "Book of the Just" and his miscellaneous Manuscript of Epigrams and the like, and his marked copy of "Wit's Recreations." Whereupon he or some unskilled subordinate proceeded to intermix these additions with the others. That the Poet himself had nothing to do with the arrangement or disarrangement lies on the surface. Thus "The Fairie Temple" of which the last line is

"Goe's to the Feast that's now provided"

is separated from the Feast by nearly fifty pages, and then after fully nine pages comes "Oberon's Palace," which begins "After the Feast." These three poems were most certainly intended to form one, or to be set together. Then "The Beggar to Mab" would naturally have followed the others. It may be presumed that the beggar saw the fairy banquet, and asked for a share of the crumbs. Similarly one is constantly coming on poems in Hesperides utterly incongruous, yet associated. You have such a blossoming of flowers, or such an incense of scents, or such a healthy breath of vernal wind, or such a vivid word-landscape as the setting of some fine old English country usage, as thrills one; and lo! on the same or next leaf you have an Epigram without one grain of salt of wit, or some hit at a luckless parishioner, or some outrage on common decency that might have done for "Wit's Recreations" or the "Musarum Deliciæ," but which in Hesperides is a sorrow and a scandal. I should very gladly have re-arranged the whole, shovelling away the Epigrams bodily into an appendix that might not be read, and as one removes a snail from a lily's heart, occasional lines throughout. But as the Book was published during the Author's own life-time, it is too late, in an edition of his Works, to venture on this. I have before noted that there appeared in "Wit's Recreations" (1640), sixty-two poems afterwards included in Hesperides. Mr. Hazlitt has a section of his edition of Herrick which he entitles "Poems Attributed to Herrick." They are the following :—

1. King Oberon's Apparell.
2. The Fairy King.
3. The Fairy Queen, or the Fairies Fegaries.

4. Another Copy.
5. The Fayrie Kings Diet and Apparrell.
6. A Description of the Fairies' Revel and Feast.
7. To a Gentlewoman with one eye.
8. Domina Margarita Sandis : Anagramma.
9. On Chloris Walking in the Snow.
10. On Julia's Weeping.
11. On a Beautifull Virgin.
12. A Loving Bargain.
13. To Celia Weeping.
14. The Wake.

Except No. 10—a couplet—which belongs to Hesperides (Vol. II., p. 250) and appears in its place in Mr. Hazlitt's own edition — there is not a shadow of authority for assigning any one of these to Herrick. Nos. 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, and 14 were published in "Wit's Recreations" (1640) and seeing that Herrick reclaimed no fewer than sixty-two Poems from "Wit's Recreations" for Hesperides, and did not these, this is decisive that they were not his; while internally no student of the Hesperides could for a moment imagine them to belong to our Poet. Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 are expressly assigned in three public MSS. and in several others to their actual Authors. Thus "King Oberon's Apparrell" appeared in "Musarum Deliciæ" (1655) and faultily in Poole's "English Parnassus" (1657)—in both anonymously; but in the Rawlinson MS. Poet 147, p. 102, under the heading of "The Faery King," it is signed Sr. S. St., and who was meant thereby is ascertained from—among others—the additional MSS. B. Museum 11,811, fol. 18, where the name is written in full, S[ir] Simeon Steward, which again agrees with MS. Malone, 17, and various other MSS. known to me in private hands. To Sir Simeon Steward therefore belongs "King Oberon's Apparell," and so too, of course, the variant of it (No. 2) "The Fairy King." In Hesperides there is a verse-Letter to Sir Simeon Steward (Vol. II. pp. 36-39) which prepares us to find him a writer of verse imitative or reflective of Herrick. Had "King Oberon's Apparell" or "The Fairy King" been Herrick's own, there was no reason whatever that when he published his Fairy poems he should not have included it. Nos. 3 and 4, "The Fairy Queen, or the Fairies Fegaries," and "Another copy" exists in a number of MSS., public and private, but in none is Herrick's name found. It was printed fragmentarily in a little volume already noticed, viz, "A Description of the Queen of Fayries," etc., etc., (1635) and like all therein, anonymously; but in MS. Ashmole 36, there is an endorsement, "To the right wo^{ll}. his moste deare and much respected Father James Pagitt at Battersey, present these." This may or may not mean that Pagitt (filius) was the author. Mr. Hazlitt is disposed to regard him as the transcriber only. Be this as it may—but for myself it is just such a juvenile writing after Herrick as one might expect in a young friend of his—that Herrick is not its composer is again made sure by his not reclaiming it for Hesperides, while he did so in the case of another fragment which appeared in the same volume—as will be seen immediately. Internally there is the faint echo, but not at all the real voice of Herrick. No. 5, "The Fayrie King's Diet and Apparrell," occurs in the Rawlinson MS. Poet 142 (near the middle of the volume). It is a somewhat stupid adumbration, of Nos. 1 and 2, and Herrick's "Feast." The two parts in the MS. are separated by a line. Mr. Hazlitt states that "the writer of this collection evidently supposed them to be portions of the same poem." This alleged 'supposition' is not quite certain. The second part was probably derived from an early MS. of Herrick's—as in the sequel will appear. Nowhere is the first part ascribed to him, and nobody worth considering will agree with Mr. Hazlitt's haphazard ascription of it to him. Still more emphatically must every one reject the possibility of Herrick perpetrating such rubbish as No. 6, "A Description of the Fairies Revel and Feast." In the Ashmole MS. 36, fol. 47, recto (not 45, as Mr. Hazlitt) whence Mr. Hazlitt fetched it, has no author's name attached. It is an outrage to make Herrick responsible for such inartistic rhymes—our word reminding that Mr. Hazlitt in st. 2d, l. 3, misreads 'artistically' for 'artificially' and otherwise mangles what can hardly be made worse than the original. No. 7, "To a Gentlewoman with One Eye," is found in Rawlinson MS. 147, p. 13 (not 142, as Mr. Hazlitt) and is signed "Henry Molle." In place of seeing with Mr. Hazlitt that this is "unmistakeably" Herrick's, no capable reader will discern anything in the lines that could not have been written by Henry Molle or any other, not excluding Mr. W. C. Hazlitt himself. Nos. 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, and 14, having all been published in "Wit's Recreations" (1640) whence Herrick re-claimed sixty-two poems for Hesperides (as before) they are set aside as not his, by the fact of his not claiming them. This is additionally confirmed by his having, on the other part, re-claimed No. 10—as already pointed out. Were it worth while, it might be shown to whom these belong; but not being Herrick's, there seems no call to think more about them. It is with a sense of infinite relief that I have rescued Herrick from the imputation of the authorship of so much additional trash. The Publisher's unhappy mixture and intermixture of all the Herrick MSS., good-naturedly entrusted to him by their Writer, has wrought sufficient damage, without more being contributed to the weeds and thorns and nettles and pestilential growths of Hesperides. Our section yclept 'Golden Apples' it had been pity to lose—the last, 'Epitaph on Sir Edward and Lady Giles' being very fine—but these "Poems attributed to Herrick," with the slight exception of the fragment from an early MS. of the "Feast," are to be summarily and gratefully rejected.

Let the student of Hesperides keep in his forgiving recollection that for a great deal at any rate of the incongruous arrangement or disarrangement of his book, not Herrick, but JOHN WILLIAMS and FRANCIS EGLESFIELD, his publishers, must be held answerable. It would have been a 'gainfull loss' had they not been allowed access to the Epigrams. By their indiscriminate insertion the Author's lines concerning the Errata were additionally illustrated :

"For these Transgressions which thou here dost see,
Condemne the Printer, Reader, and not me;
Who gave him forth good Grain, though he mistook
The Seed ; so sow'd these Tares throughout my Book."

II. Evidence of patient and genuine workmanship.

Differing from SIR PHILIP SIDNEY earlier, and GEORGE HERBERT later, the Works "humane and divine" of Herrick had the advantage that none were posthumous—every "clause and word" having passed under his own eye, although—as shewn—he allowed himself to be over-persuaded by his Publishers to let them print everything put into their hands in his MSS. But on the other hand—especially in the light of the intermixture and disarrangement that have been demonstrated—it is a disadvantage that Hesperides and Noble Numbers remained in the one edition, without revision, without revelation of the Poet's mind about his volume, and besides, an absolute after-silence (except possible anonymous writing) of upwards of a quarter of a century. There are not consequently those printed VARIOUS READINGS and Author's changes that so often (as in Spenser, and Shakespeare, and Daniel, and in modern days, Shelley, and Wordsworth, and Tennyson) reveal to us the crystallization of thought and the gradual perfection of the ultimate poem—though, alas! all too-often revealing strange and almost incredible deterioration, e.g. even Spenser, and Daniel, and Wordsworth, and Tennyson, are found to spoil the very bloom, and to remove the fine powder of many of their most exquisite fancies. When therefore I propose to give evidence of patient and genuine workmanship, my meaning is not to bring forth from Hesperides or Noble Numbers examples of supreme and consummate workmanship. This I shall do in stating the specialities of his Poetry. Here and now, through Manuscripts that remain to us—none, unhappily, autograph—and through prior publication, as in “Wit’s Recreations” (1640), I wish to look in upon the Poet at his fine work, and shew, in so far as within these limits can be done, that Herrick’s genius was too substantive and non-accidental to have given us his Lyrics and rural-breathed Poems off-hand (so-to-say). That is, admitting the apothegm, Ars est celare artem, therein as throughout, there was art as well as genius—genius kindling and inspiring the flame, but art giving it lustre, and setting it in its ‘golden candlestick.’ I should stand in doubt of the reality of genius of any type that was sundered from the long and ever-aspiring patience of nicest and devoutest workmanship. Turning to “Wit’s Recreations,” as might almost have been anticipated, material for the evidence now sought is relatively scanty. The likelihoods are that Herrick simply marked his own Poems in a copy of the book and allowed his Publishers to transfer them from “Wit’s Recreations” to Hesperides and Noble Numbers. Yet are there noticeable variants that are declarative of the Author's revision. The following are the sixty-two pieces that originally appeared in "Wit's Recreations"—taken in the order in which they are found therein, and on the left-hand side the places in our edition of the Poems :

| Hesperides. | Wit's Recreations. |
|---|--------------------|
| 1. Vol. 1. pp. - —Cherry Pit . . . | p. 457. |
| 2. „ „ 47-8—Upon Love . . . | p. 465. |
| 3. „ „ 51-2—The Bag of the Bee | pp. 413-4. |
| 4. „ „ 72-4—The Teare sent to her from Stanes. . . | pp. 339-40. |
| 5. „ „ 76-78—His Farewell to Sack. . . . | pp. 432-3. |
| 6. „ „ 103-4—The Cruell Maid | pp. 342-3. |
| 7. „ „ 106-7—His Misery in a Mistresse . . . | pp. 344-5. |
| 8. „ „ 112-13—A Ring present- ted to Julia . . . | pp. 321-2. |
| 9. „ „ 138—Upon Gubbs. Epig. | p. 89. |
| 10. „ „ 144-5—To the Virgins, to make much of time | pp. 474-5. |
| 11. „ „ 170—Upon Himselfe . . . | p. 465. |

| Hesperides. | Wit's Recreations. |
|--|--------------------|
| 12. Vol. I., pp. 170-1—To the Rose | p. 459. |
| 13. " " 171—Upon Guesse. Epig. | p. 91. |
| 14. " " 171—Upon a painted gentlewoman | p. 92. |
| 15. Vol. II. " 2—How violets came blew | pp. 461-2. |
| 16. " " 32—Upon a Child that Dyed. | p. 254. |
| 17. " " 42—Gold before Goodnesse | p. 95. |
| 18. " " 55—A short Hymne to Venus | p. 457. |
| 19. " " 55-6—Upon a delaying Lady | pp. 346-7. |
| 20. " " 60—Nothing Newe | p. 96. |
| 21. " " 62—Long and Lazie | p. 96. |
| 22. " " 66—Upon Wrinkles | p. 97. |
| 23. " " 77—Upon Doll. Epig. | p. 100. |
| 24. " " 78—Upon Skrew. Epig. | p. 101. |
| 25. " " 84-5—Upon Raspe. Epig. | p. 111. |
| 26. " " 87-8—Upon Himself | p. 157. |
| 27. " " 88—Another | p. 126. |
| 28. " " 88—Upon Skinns. Epig. | p. 104. |
| 29. " " 90—Upon Crow | p. 110. |
| 30. " " 111—To Oenone | p. 475. |

| Hesperides. | Wit's Recreations. |
|---|--------------------|
| 31. Vol. II. pp. 148—Change gives Con- | |
| tent | p. 122. |
| 32. " " 156-7—To Electra | p. 349. |
| 33. " " 172—Upon Umber. Epig. | p. 117. |
| 34. " " 184—Little and Loud | p. 167. |
| 35. " " 189-90—To the Maides | |
| to walk abroad. | p. 366. |
| 36. " " 203—Upon a Child | p. 247. |
| 37. " " 206—Upon an old Man, | |
| a Residenciarie | p. 258. |
| 38. " " 207—Upon Cob. Epig. | p. 118. |
| 39. " " 207—Upon Lucie. Epig. | p. 121. |
| 40. " " 207—Upon Skoles. Epig. | p. 128. |
| 41. " " 217—Upon Zelot | p. 131. |
| 42. " " 218—Upon Crab. Epig. | p. 132. |
| 43. " " 222—Deniall in Women, | |
| no disheartening to | |
| men | p. 133. |
| 44. " " 229—Adversity | p. 144. |
| 45. " " 247—Maid's Nays are | |
| nothing | p. 149. |
| 46. " " 250—Another upon her | |
| weeping | p. 150. |
| 47. " " 256-7—The Walke | p. 372. |

| Hesperides. | Wit's Recreations. |
|--|-------------------------|
| 48. Vol. II. pp. 263-4—A Hymne to Bac- | |
| | chus pp. 385-6. |
| 49. „ „ 266—Anger | p. 158. |
| 50. „ „ 273—Upon Bice | p. 165. |
| 51. „ „ 274—Upon Trencherman | p. 166. |
| 52. „ „ 274—Kines | p. 170. |
| 53. „ „ 286—Upon Purchin. Epig. | p. 172. |
| 54. „ „ 289—Upon a Maide | p. 259. |
| 55. „ „ 289—Beauty | p. 176. |
| 56. „ „ 292—Satisfaction for suf- | |
| | ferings p. 177. |
| 57. Vol. III. „ 23—An Hymne to | |
| | Love. . . . pp. 336-7. |
| 58. „ „ 26—Leven | p. 214. |
| 59. „ „ 55—Upon Boreman. Epig. | p. 215. |
| 60. „ „ 75—Upon Gut | p. 148. |
| 61. „ „ 84—Sauce for Sorrowes | p. 116. |
| 62. „ „ 87—The Ende of his | |
| | Worke p. 221. |

Looking now more closely at the Poems and Epigrams, No. 1 in “Wit’s Recreations,” is in the indirect form thus:—

Cherry-pit.

“Nicholas and Nell did lately sit
 Playing for sport at Cherry-pit ;
 They both did throw, and having thrown,
 He got the pit, and she the stone.”

In Hesperides it is direct, as thus :—

“Julia and I did lately sit,
 Playing for sport, at cherry-pit :
 She threw ; I cast ; and having thrown,
 I got the pit, and she the stone.”

In No. 2, which is headed ‘On Love,’ for l. 3 in Hesperides, “To signifie, in love my share,” the original reads, “To tell me that in love my share” : l. 7, carelessly as losing a rhyme with ‘he’ reads, “That joynt to ashes should be burnt,” for “That joynt to ashes burnt should be,”—which ought perhaps to have been adopted as our text. In No. 3, l. 1, in “Wit’s Recreations” has “To have the sweet Bag of the Bee,” for “About the sweet bag of a bee ;” and ll. 7-8 :

“And taking from them each his flame,
With myrtle rods she whipt them.”

for

“And taking thence from each his flame,
With rods of mirtle whipt them.”

The ‘About’ in l. 1 is an after change.

In No. 4 in Hesperides the more definite inscription is "The Teare sent to her from Stanes," that is from the royal residence there, is in "Wit's Recreations," simply "A Tear sent to his Mistresse." Otherwise only the orthography and punctuation differ. In No. 5 "His Farewell to Sack" of Hesperides is entitled "A Farewell to Sack," and is enlarged from 36 lines to 54 lines, but with four remarkable lines, in turn, omitted. So important a poem in every way as this "Farewell" calls for a full record of all the variants. Lines 1-2 for those in Hesperides :—

"Farewell, thou thing time-past so knowne, so deare
To me, as blood to life and spirit : Neare"

in "Wit's Recreations" read :—

"Farewell so true and dear
To me and near."

Line 3, ". . . Kindred, friend or wife," for "Kindred, friend, man, wife;" l. 4, ". . . Soul to the body" for "Soule to body;" l. 6, "Of the yet chaste, and undefilèd Bride" is transfigured in Hesperides into "Of the resigning yet resisting bride." The Master's touch! Ll. 7-8 are added :—

"The blisse of virgins ; foot-prints of the bed ;
Soft speech, smooth touch, the lips, the maiden-head."

Ll. 9-10 for the original :—

“ These and a thousand more could never be More near, more dear, than thou wert once to me ”

are altered to :—

“ These, and a thousand sweets, co'd never be
So neare or deare as thou wast once to me.”

Ll. 11-22 are additions in Hesperides to which the critical Student will do well to turn. They begin, “O thou the drink of Gods and Angels ! wine,” and end, “Vexation of the mind and damn'd despaire.” Line 23 of Hesperides, “'Tis thou alone, who, with thy mystick fan,” at first read “'Tis thou above, that” L. 25, “To rouse the sacred madnesse, and awake,” was originally “To raise the holy madnesse.” L. 27 for the later “flashing” had “sketching,” and l. 28 “souls” for “soule.” Lines 29-36 are another noticeable addition in Hesperides. Line 37 as now reads “But why? why longer do I gaze upon” for “But why? why longer do I gaze afar.” L. 39 read “when” “sure.” Ll. 42-3 now :—

“ Then know that Nature bids thee goe, not I :
'Tis her erroneous self has made a braine ”

originally ran :—

“ Know then 'tis Nature bids thee hence, not I ;
'Tis her erroneous self hath form'd my brain.”

L. 45-6 in Hesperides read :—

“ Prethee, not smile,
Or smile more inly, lest thy looks beguile.”

Originally they were as follows, along with four other lines cancelled in Hesperides :—

“ I prethee draw in
Thy gazing fires, lest at their sight the sin
Of fierce Idolatry shoot unto me, and
I turn Apostate to the strict command
Of Nature ; bid me now farewell, or smile
More ugly, lest thy tempting looks beguile.”

L. 47, for “ denounc’d ” read originally “ pronounc’t ;” l. 49, “ boldly ” for “ freely ;” l. 51 originally read “ And love, but not taste thee ” for “ And love thee, but not taste thee ;” l. 53, for “ inadult’rate ” read “ inadulterate ;” and, finally, l. 54, “ Hereafter shall smell . . . ” originally read “ Shall smell hereafter.” These various readings, insertions and the omission, show how cunningly the Poet wrought out this Donne-like poem—the omission, perhaps, the most suggestive thing of the whole. No. 6, “ The Cruell Maid,” except in orthography and punctuation, as always, in “ Wit’s Recreations ” only drops the needed “ has ” in l. 7 of Hesperides. No. 7 is identical in both, save that in "Wit's Recreations" the heading is "His misery" and in Hesperides "His misery in a Mistrresse." No. 8 in both is again identical, but in "Wit's Recreations" the heading is as follows :—

With a  to Julia.

No. 9 is the same in both. No. 10 in "Wit's Recreations" is inscribed "To make much of Time;" in Hesperides, "To the Virgins, to make much of Time;" and originally thus read in 1st and 2nd :—

"Gather your Rose-buds whilst you may,
 Old Time is still a-flying;
 And that same flower which smiles to-day
 Too morrow may be dying.
 The glorious Lamp of Heaven, the Sun,
 The higher he is getting,
 The sooner will his race be run,
 And nearer to his setting."

The text of Hesperides reveals dainty improving touches (Vol. I., p. 144-5); the remaining stanzas agree in both. No. 11 in "Wit's Recreations" is headed "On an old Batchelour" instead of "Upon himselfe;" and in l. 3 reads "married" for "wedded," in l. 4 "one" for "a jot," and l. 6 "Rather than mend me, blind me quite," instead of the later "Rather than mend, put out the light." No. 12, "To the Rose," in st. 1st, l. 5, originally has "hath" for "has;" st. 2d, l. 1, "If she frets, that" for "If she's fretfull, I;" l. 3, "struggles" for "struggle;" and l. 5, "although not kill" for "though not to kill." Nos. 13 and 14 agree, only for "Gentlewoman" in Hesperides there was originally "Madam." No. 15, "How Violets came blew," is of a class that must have been a favourite with Herrick. They are anything but admirable. Originally this runs:—

How the Violets came blew.

The Violets, as poets tell,
 With Venus wrangling went
 Whether the Violets did excell
 Or she in sweetest scent;
 But Venus having lost the day,
 Poor Girle, she fell on you,
 And beat you so, as some do say,
 Her Blowes did make you blew."

(Vol. II. p. 2.)

Besides the correction of "Girles" for "Girle" in l. 6, even this trifle shows revision. (Vol. II., p. 2.) Nos. 16 and 17 are the same in both, but the latter is originally headed "A Foolish Querie" instead of "Gold before

Goodnesse." No. 18 in "Wit's Recreations" is inscribed "A vow to Cupid," and in Hesperides "A short hymne to Venus;" and so originally in l. 1 reads "Cupids" for "Goddesse," l. 2 "like Pearl" for "with," l. 3 "that I may" for "I may but," l. 5 "I do" for "I will." No. 19 is alike in both, but originally is headed "A Check to her delay" for "Upon a delaying Lady." Nos. 20 and 21 are nearly identical; but I can suppose that it was with a chuckle that in the latter the Author removed the hyphen from "be-long" that your stupid reader might not catch the equivoque. No. 22 is headed originally "To a stale Lady," and in l. 1 reads "Thy wrinkles are no more." Nos. 23, 24, and 25 are the same. No. 26 curiously enough in l. 5 of Hesperides, "He to work, or pray," read originally "or play." Nos. 27, 28, and 29 agree. No. 30, "To Oenone," is inscribed originally "The Farewell to Love and to his Mistresse." It is singular that in both in st. 1st, l. 2, "won" should be mis-spelled "one," and so remain, certes by inadvertence in my own text. In st. 3d, l. 1, mis-reads "Court not both or" for "Covet not both, but." No. 31 is originally headed simply "Change," but in both are alike. No. 32, "To Electra," is originally addressed "To Julia," but otherwise both agree. Nos. 33 and 34

blind me quite," instead of the later "Rather than mend, put out the light." No. 12, "To the Rose," in st. 1st, l. 5, originally has "hath" for "has;" st. 2d, l. 1, "If she frets, that" for "If she's fretfull, I;" l. 3, "struggles" for "struggle;" and l. 5, "although not kill" for "though not to kill." Nos. 13 and 14 agree, only for "Gentlewoman" in Hesperides there was originally "Madam." No. 15, "How Violets came blew," is of a class that must have been a favourite with Herrick. They are anything but admirable. Originally this runs:—

How the Violets came blew.

The Violets, as poets tell,
 With Venus wrangling went
 Whether the Violets did excell
 Or she in sweetest scent;
 But Venus having lost the day,
 Poor Girle, she fell on you,
 And beat you so, as some do say,
 Her Blowes did make you blew."

(Vol. II. p. 2.)

Besides the correction of "Girles" for "Girle" in l. 6, even this trifle shows revision. (Vol. II., p. 2.) Nos. 16 and 17 are the same in both, but the latter is originally headed "A Foolish Querie" instead of "Gold before

Goodnesse." No. 18 in "Wit's Recreations" is inscribed "A vow to Cupid," and in Hesperides "A short hymne to Venus;" and so originally in l. 1 reads "Cupids" for "Goddesse," l. 2 "like Pearl" for "with," l. 3 "that I may" for "I may but," l. 5 "I do" for "I will." No. 19 is alike in both, but originally is headed "A Check to her delay" for "Upon a delaying Lady." Nos. 20 and 21 are nearly identical; but I can suppose that it was with a chuckle that in the latter the Author removed the hyphen from "be-long" that your stupid reader might not catch the equivoque. No. 22 is headed originally "To a stale Lady," and in l. 1 reads "Thy wrinkles are no more." Nos. 23, 24, and 25 are the same. No. 26 curiously enough in l. 5 of Hesperides, "He to work, or pray," read originally "or play." Nos. 27, 28, and 29 agree. No. 30, "To Oenone," is inscribed originally "The Farewell to Love and to his Mistresse." It is singular that in both in st. 1st, l. 2, "won" should be mis-spelled "one," and so remain, certes by inadvertence in my own text. In st. 3d, l. 1, mis-reads "Court not both or" for "Covet not both, but." No. 31 is originally headed simply "Change," but in both are alike. No. 32, "To Electra," is originally addressed "To Julia," but otherwise both agree. Nos. 33 and 34 are the same, save that in the latter for "woman's" it is originally "women's." No. 35, "To the Maids to walke abroade," is originally inscribed "Abroad with the Maids," but otherwise is alike in both. No. 36, "Upon a child," is also left untouched in its pathetic simpleness. To have changed a syllable would have been as risky as trying to pluck a dewy flower with any hope of preserving the dew. Abstention from alteration is in such instances truer insight than alteration. I have not found anywhere that Herrick changed his wording in his accepted perfect work. No. 37, "Upon an Old Man, a Residenciarié," and Nos. 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, and 45 are nearly identical in both. No. 39 substitutes "Lucie" in Hesperides for "Betty" in "Wit's Recreations," and in No. 40 an obvious slip of "and blast" for "one blast" is corrected in Hesperides. It is satisfying that only to a slight extent did Herrick bestow an after-look on his Epigrams. No. 46 is the couplet that, though it did appear in Hesperides, Mr. Hazlitt printed from "Wit's Recreations" as a new poem. No. 47, "The Wake," is in "Wits' Recreations" headed "Alvar and Anthea;" otherwise is identical in both. There follows "The Wake" in "Wit's Recreations," and Herrick probably gave the new name of "The Wake" to the other expressly to disown "The Wake" that so follows; and yet Mr. Hazlitt has "attributed" it to him! No. 48 in Hesperides removes an unneeded "a" in l. 4 of the penultimate stanza. Nos. 49, 50, 51, 52, and 53 are the same in both, except in Hesperides a lacking "the" is supplied in No. 52. No. 54, "Upon a Maide," is again characteristically left untouched. Nos. 55 and 56 are once more identical, only the latter was originally inscribed "Satisfaction." Nos. 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, and 62 are alike in both; but in No. 62 the heading is "Of this Booke." It is surely declarative of perfunctory study of Herrick that the present edition is the first to bring to light these various readings. Mr. Hazlitt contented himself with lazily remarking: "Six or eight other poems [i.e., in addition to those which we have seen are not Herrick's at all] also occur, but the text presents no noticeable variations from that given in the common printed collection" (I. vi.) and noting a few of the altered headings.

Passing now to those Poems that are preserved in MSS.—public and private—it is of the deepest interest to read these earlier texts in the light of that adopted and published in Hesperides. Mr. Hazlitt has a section in his edition called "Different Versions of Poems already Printed," and there is one other somewhat noticeable. I am not aware that any of these have been submitted to critical examination or comparison.

The first is in Harleian MS., 6917, fol. 10, and is an early version of the brilliant "Nuptiall Song, or Epithalamie on Sir Clipseby Crew and his Lady" (Vol. II. pp. 12-20). The opening of this poem has been cited to show that Milton had read it and remembered it in his choruses in "Samson Agonistes." I cannot say that I discern such remembrance or use of this "Epithalamie;" but it has all Milton's early lusciousness and stateliness. In l. 3 "faire injewel'd May" was originally written "faire enamell'd May," and l. 10 for "emergent" reads "emerging." In l. 14 for "Treading upon vermilion" there was "Throwing about vermilion." The following entire stanza was rejected in Hesperides just after the preceding :—

“Lead on faire paranymps, the while her eyes
 Guilty of somewhat, ripe the strawberries
 And cherries in her cheekes; there's creame
 Already spillt, her rayes must gleame
 Gently Thereon,
 And soe begett lust and temptation,
 To surfeit and to hunger;
 Helpe on her pace, and, though she lagg, yet stirre
 Her homewards; well she knowes
 Her heart's at home howere she goes.”

In the next stanza, l. 4, for the original, perhaps more realistic "Spirting forth pounded cinnamon," Hesperides gave 'perspiring,' and in l. 7, "Who would not then consume" for the later "Who therein wo'd not consume." In the succeeding stanza the MS. mis-spells 'margerum' for 'marjoram' (l. 2); and in l. 4, reads 'thy' for 'the bridegroom,' and l. 6 'besparckling' for 'disparkling;' and in the last line "Or like a firebrand he will waste," for "Or else to ashes he will waste." Then comes in this fragmentary stanza, which again is omitted in Hesperides :—

“ See how he waves his hand, and though his eyes
 Shootes forth his iealous soule, for to surprize
 And ravish you, his bride : do you
 Not now perceiue the soule of C. C. =Clipseyby
 Your mayden knight [Crew.

 With kisses to inspire
 You with his iust and holy ire.”

The next stanza in the MS. begins, "If so glide through the ranks of virgins, passe," for "Slide by the bankes of virgins then, and passe,"—the latter giving her the motion of a stream. In l. 10 Hesperides substitutes "as doth a fish," for "as doe the fish." Once more an omitted stanza succeeds :—

"Why then goe forward sweet auspicious bride,
 And come upon your bridegroome like a tyde,
 Bearing downe time before you, hye
 Swell, mixe, and loose your sailes; implye
 Like streames which flow
 Encurlld together, and noe difference show
 In their silver waters; runne
 Into your selues like wooll together spunne;
 Or blend so as the sight
 Of two makes one hermaphrodite."

In the following stanza l. 1 has originally "confesse you wise," for "confesse y'are wise," and the change gives that ripple in the flow of his rhythm, which Herrick loved and affected. In l. 2 for the later, "In dealing forth those," he had written, "In drawing forth those." The felicitous close of this stanza was worked out, not struck out as at a heat. The MS. has

"On then, and though y'are slow
 In going, yet however goe."

In Hesperides with cunning imitativeness of the lingering yet wistful motion, it reads:—

"On then, and though you slow-Ly go, yet, howsoever, go."

The divided word here and elsewhere is a trick caught from his favorite Catullus. Two omitted stanzas come next :—

“ How long soft bride shall your deare [Brides'-maids] make

Loue to your welcome with the mistick cake,
How long, oh pardon, shall the house
And the smooth handmaids pay their vowes,
With oyle and wine,
For your approach, yet see their altars pine ?
How long shall the page, to please
You, stand for to surrender up the keyes
Of the glad house ? come, come,
Or Lar will freeze to death at home.

Welcome at last unto the threshold, Time
Throaned in a saffron euening, seemes to chyme
All in ; kisse, and so enter ; if
A prayer must be said, be brief ;
The easy gods
For such neglect, haue only myrtle rodds
To stroake not strike ; feare you
Not more, milde nymph, then they would haue you doe ;
But dread that you doe more offend
In that you doe beginne, then end.”

In stanza 7th, l. 6 originally read :—

“ Us (and God shield her) ” changed into “ The house (love shield her) ” ; in

l. 10, ‘ has ’ for ‘ your. ’ Again two omitted stanzas are here in the MS. :—

"What though your laden altar now has wonne
 The creditt from the table of the sunne
 For earth and sea ; this cost
 On you is altogether lost,
 Because you feede
 Not on the flesh of beasts, but on the seede
 Of contemplation, your
 Your eyes are they, wherewith you draw the pure
 Elixar to the minde,
 Which sees the body fedd, yet pined.

If you must needs for ceremonies sake
 Blesse a sacke possett, lucke goe with you, take
 The night charme quickly, you have spells
 And magick for to ende, and hells
 To passe, but such,
 And of such torture, as noe God would grudge
 To liue therein for euer, frye,
 I, and consume, and grow againe, to dye
 And liue, and in that case
 Love the damnation of that place."

In the succeeding stanza, l. 1, for 'kind truths' the MS. writes 'sweet': l. 2 drops in MS. 'and,' and in l. 3 begins 'And' for 'But': l. 6, 'Hearing' for 'Telling.' In the next stanza, l. 2 originally reads "noe" for "no strife," and l. 3, "Further then vertue lends" for "Further then gentlenes tends": l. 4, 'catching at' for 'striving for': l. 8, 'gentle' and 'fragrous' for

'youthfull' and 'fragrant.' In stanza 11th, ll. 5-6, which originally read

"List, oh how

Euen heauen giues up his soule betweene you now" are changed into :—

"O marke yee how

The soule of Nature melts in numbers; now":

l. 7, "Marke how" for "See a." In the next stanza, l. 2 originally has 'rising' for the later 'swelling,' and in line 3,

"Tempting thee too too modest"

for Hesperides

"Tempting the two too modest":

l. 7, 'hugge you' for 'hugge it': ll. 8-9,

"Your selues unto that mayne, in the full flow /
Of the white pride"

for

"Your selues into the mighty over-flow /
Of that white pride":

l. 10, 'The starrs' for 'The night.' Stanza 13th, l. 1 in MS. reads "You see 'tis ready" for "The bed is ready": l. 7, "And doe it in the full reach" for "And do it to the full; reach": l. 8, "High in your owne concepts, and rather teach" for "High in your conceit, and some way teach": l. 10, 'Sport' for 'Play.' In Hesperides there follows next the second of the last two omitted stanzas before "If you must needs," &c., with only one noticeable reading in the last line of 'confusion' for 'damnation'—not an improvement if it be a softening of the passionate thought. In the MS. is here another omitted stanza:

"And now y'haue wept enough, depart, yon starres
 Begin to pinke, as weary that the warres =grow small
 Know so long treaties; beate the drumme
 Aloft, and like two armies, come
 And guild the field;
 Fight brauely for the flame of mankinde, yeeld
 Not to this, or that assault,
 For that would proue more heresy then fault,
 In combatants to flye,
 Fore this or that hath gott the victory."

In stanza 15, l. 3, originally, it reads "with ribbe of rocke and brasse" for the later "with rock or walles of brasse": and in the last line 'sheetes' for 'sheet' oblivious of line 2d. In the closing stanza, line 28, for the Hesperides misprint of 'that, that' the MS. reads 'that the.' In the place I corrected it preferably with 'two' as in the next line. The MS. is signed "R. Herrick." It will reward the Student to ponder and compare these abundant various readings, and to consider the opulence that could dispense with the omissions. There are bits in the omissions that one is grateful to have from the MS., although as a whole the Poet showed nicety of taste, as well as sound judgment in erasing them. The next Poem, "Herrick's Sack," in the Rawlinson MS. poet. 142, is an imperfect copy of his "Welcome to Sack." I have recorded its very unimportant variants in my examination of the text in "Wit's Recreations," compared with the fuller version in Hesperides.⁸ A third MS., viz. Ashmole 38, p. 90, Art. 110, is a similar inaccurate copy of his great poem to his brother, Thomas Herrick. It is headed, "In praise of the Country Life." Most of the various readings are the Scribe's blunders, and call for no detailed notice; but here and there, certain enable us to follow the shaping of the final text, e.g. l. 3, "Canst leave the cittie, with exchange, to see," for "Couldst leave the city, for exchange, to see": l. 10, "Wayes not to liue but to liue well," for "Wayes lesse to live then to live well": l. 22, "That mange," for "That plague": l. 23, "sparing," for "warie": l. 26, "quench," for "coole." In the MS., ll. 28-30 do not appear, and instead this couplet:—

⁸ See pages cxxxvi-viii.

“The first is Nature end : this doth imparte
Least thanks to Nature, most to art” :

Line 31 reads, “But that which next creates thy happye life,” for “But that which most makes sweet thy country life” : and there follow in these MSS. two omitted lines :—

“And in thy sense her chaster thoughtes commend
Not halfe soe much the act, as end” :

—a wise omission certainly. Line 43 reads in the MS., ‘crawling’ for ‘feebly’ : l. 46, ‘bediapered’ for ‘enameled’ : l. 51, ‘vowes’ for ‘comes’ : l. 52, “rau’nous wolfe the wolly sheep,” for “rav’ning wolves the fleecie sheep” : l. 55, ‘selfe’ [not ‘sleepe,’ as in Mr. Hazlitt’s] for ‘rest’ : l. 57, ‘Crowes’ for ‘Warnes’ : l. 60, ‘crackling’ for ‘spirting’ : l. 61, ‘thumb thus’ for ‘thumb this sentence’ : l. 61, ‘Jove’ for ‘God’ : l. 65, ‘farthest Inde’ for ‘Western Inde’ : l. 66, ‘lye’ for ‘fly’ : l. 68, ‘securer’ for ‘securerest’ : l. 70, ‘better’ for ‘whiter’ : l. 78, ‘Viewing’ for ‘Seeing’ : l. 79, “By their shadowes, their substances,” for “By those fine shades, their substances” : l. 80, ‘borrowing’ for ‘taking small’ : l. 81, ‘seal’d’ for ‘deafe’ : l. 85, ‘Fame tells the states’ [not ‘of,’ as in Mr. Hazlitt’s] for ‘Fame tell of states’ : l. 90, “Vice is vicegerent at the courte," for "Vice rules the most, or all at court": l. 91, 'godly' for 'pious': l. 92, 'Vertue had mouèd jn her sphere' for 'Vertue had, and mov'd her sphere.' Here follow these omitted lines in the MS:—

"Nor knowe thy happye and vn-enuey'd state
 Owes more to vertue then too fate, = to
 Or fortune too; for what the first secures,
 That as herselfe, or Heauen, indures.
 The two last fayle, and by experience make Knowne, not they giue againe, they take":

Then l. 93 reads, "But thou not fearest them," for "But thou liv'st fearlesse": l. 95, 'hopes stronge built,' for 'thoughts prepar'd': l. 96, 'For to salute her,' for 'To take her by': l. 99, 'sturдые' for 'surly'—the latter a mistaken reading certainly: l. 101, 'braue' for 'bold': l. 109, 'toothe' for 'mouth': l. 111, 'cheer' for 'fare': and l. 112, 'deare' for 'rare.' Here next comes (after l. 116) in the MS. this omitted couplet:—

"Canst drinke in earthen cuppes which ne're contayne Colde hemlocke, or the lizzards bane":

l. 117, "Nor is ytt fitt thou keep'st," for "Nor is it that thou keep'st": l. 128, 'build' for 'make': l. 132, 'flye' for 'shun': l. 135, "neate, firme, close, and true," for "and close, and wisely true": l. 145, "Till then, lett faith soe prompt your liues yee may," for

 "Till when, in such assurance, live ye may."

The next MS., viz. Ashmole 38, p. 93, Art. 111, is headed, "Mr. Herricke his Charge to his Wife." Had this not been included in Hesperides, we should naturally have concluded that it was by that cousin Robert Herrick whose marriage Mr. J. Payne Collier having stumbled on, he at once set down as the Poet's, forgetful of all the facts.⁹ Besides the Ashmole MS., the Kingsborough-Hazelwood MS. of my friend W. F. Cosens, Esq., London, has another version. Both pretty closely follow the same text. Neither offers much worthy of special record; but the following may interest from Mr. Cosens MS. :—l. 4, 'woers by thy haire' for 'thousands with a haire': l. 10, 'things' for 'that': l. 18, 'beauty' for 'feature': l. 24, "emblems which express the itch" for "are the expressions of that itch": ll. 27-8:

⁹ Bibliographical Account I. 370. Mr. Collier's record is: "As a small, but new contribution to the biography of Herrick, we may add here the registration of his marriage at St. Clement's Danes, Westminster:—'5 June, 1632. Robert Herrick and Jane Gibbons.' All that we have hitherto known, we believe, is that the Christian name of his wife was Jane." Contrariwise, all that we have hitherto known, and still know, is that Herrick lived and died a bachelor.

“ For that once lost thou needs must fall
To one, then prostitute to all ”

for

“ For that once lost, thou’ t fall to one
Then prostrate to a million ” :

Lines 11-16 of Hesperides that follow the last couplet in the MS., and closing thus :—

“ And thinke, each man thou seest doth dome
Thy thoughts to say I backe am come ” :

Lines 38-9,

“ Let them call thee wondrous faire Crowne of woeman, yett despaire ”

for

“ Let them enstile thee fairest faire
The pearle of princes, yet despair ” :

l. 47, ‘ vertuous ’ for ‘ gentle ’ : ll. 55-6 :

“ Thy fortres, and must needs prevaile Gainst thee and force ”

for “ Thy fortress, and will needs prevaile :

And wildly force ” :

l. 65, ‘ Creates ’ for ‘ That makes ’ : l. 67, ‘ Glory ’ for

‘Triumph’: l. 70, ‘Take my last regret’ for ‘Take this compression’: l. 79, ‘Sharp’ for ‘Lean’: l. 80, “In my full triumph” for “its one triumphant”: l. 81, “In thee, the height,” for “In thee all faith.”

In Harleian MS. 6917, fol. 48 (verso) is an early copy of the supreme “Mad Maid’s Song,” than which nothing out of the snatches put in the mouth of Ophelia is more conquering in its simple pathos. The variants are slight, e.g. st. 1, l. 2, ‘morrow’ for ‘morning’ (repeated): l. 4, ‘All dabbled’ for ‘Bedabled’: st. 2, l. 3, ‘teares’ for ‘flowers’: l. 4, ‘was’ for ‘is’: st. 5, l. 1, ‘I hope’ for ‘I know’: st. 7, l. 2, ‘balsome’ for ‘cow-slips.’ Perhaps the substitution of ‘morning’ in Hesperides for ‘morrow’ was a mistake: and ‘tears’ for ‘flowers’: and at least ‘balsome’ for ‘cow-slips’ had been preferable.

The next MS., “Charon and the Nightingale,” from Rawlinson MS., poet 65, fol. 32, is a fuller copy of “Charon and Phylomel, a Dialogue sung,” of Hesperides (Vol. II., pp. 244-5). Only ll. 1—26 are in Hesperides—the remainder is additional. Before giving the additions, these variants between the MS. and Hesperides text of the opening portion, call for record, passing over others of trivial moment:—l. 5, ‘voice’ for ‘sound’: l. 6, ‘what’ for ‘where’: l. 7, ‘shade’ for 'bird': l. 11, 'warbling' for 'watching': l. 12, 'made me hoist up sail' for 'made me thus hoist saile': l. 13, 'I'le be gone' for 'I'le returne': l. 18, 'praise' for 'pray': l. 19, 'sighs' for 'vowes': l. 22, 'in' for 'with': l. 24, 'Our passage' for 'Our 'slothfull passage.' The new MS. commences after l. 26, "Who els with tears wo'd doubtless drown my ferry" (in MS. "our wherry")—as thus:—

"A boat, a boat, hast to the ferry,
For we goe over to be merry,
To laugh & quaff and drink old sherry.

[Phil.] Charon, O Charon, the wafter of all soules to bliss or bain,

[Char.] Who calls the ferryman of Hell?

[Phil.] Come neer & say who lives in bliss & who in pain :

[Char.] Those that dye well eternall bliss shall follow,
Those that dye ill, their own black deeds shall swallow.

[Phil.] Shall thy black barg those guilty spirits row
That kill themselves for love? [Char.] Oh no, oh
no,

My cordage cracks when such foule sins draw neer,
No winde blows fair nor I my boat can steer.

[Phil.] What spirits pass & in elizium reign?

[Char.] Those harmless soules that love & are belovd again.

[Phil.] That soule that lives in love & faign would dye to win

Shall he goe free? [Char.] Oh no, it is too foul a sin.

And night will come when man will sweare
Time hath spitt now upon your hayre.
Then when in your glasse you seeke,
And find no roses on your cheeke,
No, nor the bud at least to show,
Where such a fayre carnation grew,
And such a smiling tulippe too.
Ah! then too late close in your chamber keeping,
It will be told
That you are old,
By those true teares y'are weepinge."

We have now reached the "Fairy" Poems, and it is of rarest interest to mark the fine and subtle working on these most dainty and delicate-fancied productions of Herrick's imaginative vein. The first is "King Oberon's Pallace." Mr. Hazlitt prints it in his Appendix (Vol. II. pp. 466-470), but has neglected to state whence he derived it. It is found in Ashmole MS. 38, p. 101 and 118. This MS. omits the opening (ll. 1-8). Thereafter, l. 9, reads "Of peltish waspes, well knowne his garde" for the less accurate "we'l know his guard" of Hesperides; ll. 20-1, "the grass of Lemster ore, soberlye sparkling," for "the finest Lemster ore mildly desparkling," l. 29, "girdle" for "ceston": l. 30, "The eyes of all doth straight bewitch" for "All with temptation doth bewitch." After l. 37 the MS. inserts these twenty-seven singular enumerative lines:—

“ And further of, some sorte of peare,
 Apple or plume is neatly layde =plum
 (As yf yt were a tribute payde)
 By the round vrchin ;¹ some mixt wheat
 The which the ant did taste, not eate :
 Deafe nutts,² softe Iewes-earres, and some thinne
 Chipping, the mice filcht from the binn
 Of the graye farmer ; and to theis
 The scrappes of lentells, chitted pease,
 Dried hony-combes, browne acorne cupps,
 Out of the which hee sometymes sups
 His hearby-broath ; and theis close by
 Are puckered bullas, cankers, and dry
 Kernells and withered hawes ; the rest
 Are trinketts falne from the kytes neast,
 As buttered bread, the which the wilde
 Birde snatcht away from the crying childe ;
 Blew pynes, taggs, sepcus, beades and things
 Of higher price, as halfe jett rings,
 Ribands, and then some silken shreakes
 To virgines lost att barlye breakes ;
 Many a purse-stringe, manye a threade
 Of gould and silver there is spread.

 Lyes here about ; and as wee ghesse,
 Some bitte of thymbles seeme to dresse
 The braue cheafe worke ; and for to faue
 The easie excellence of the caue
 Squirrells, &c.”

¹ = hedge-hog rolled up. ² = hollow nuts.

Then comes substantially the same as in Hesperides, but with certain variations—e.g., l. 47 in the MS. reads “Serue here, bothe which in-chequered” for “Are neatly here enchequerèd,” and then the continuation runs :—

“With castors doucettes (which poore thay Bitt off themselues, to scape away)
Browne toade-stones, ferrettes eyes, the gumm” :

l. 51, “Hand enchasing here those wartes” for “With hand enchasing here those warts”: l. 55, ‘slye’ badly for ‘shie’: l. 62, ‘richly’ for ‘neatly’: l. 64, ‘roche’ for ‘fish’: l. 69, ‘caue’ for ‘roome’: l. 70, “Can gett reflection from their jemmes” for “Can make reflected”——: l. 73, ‘Candle-masse’ for ‘taper-light’: l. 80, ‘conuenient’ for ‘obedient’: l. 84, ‘whiter’ for ‘luckie’: l. 88, ‘spungie’ for ‘sponge-like’: l. 98, “Wee call the files of mayden-heades” for “Broke at the losse of maiden-heads”: l. 99, ‘soft’ for ‘pure’: l. 100, ‘Which’ for ‘Dropt’: l. 101, ‘are shed when’ for ‘when panting’: l. 112, ‘yearne’ for ‘flax.’

The next ‘Fairy’ poem is “Kinge Oberon’s Feast,” from Ashmole MS. 38, p. 100, Art. 117. As in the former, the MS. omits the opening, (ll. 1-6) and begins

“ A little mushromp table spread
After the dance ” :—

for

“ A little mushroome table spred, After short prayers ” :—

ll. 3-4 :—

“ A yeallowe corne of heckey wheate
With some small sandye greets; to eate ” =grits

for

“ A moon-parcht grain of purest wheat
With some small glitt'ring gritt, to eate ” :

l. 8, “Wee dare not thinke” for “We must not think”:

l. 10, “His fier, the pittering grasshopper” for “His spleen, the chirring grasshopper”: l. 11, ‘prussing’ for ‘puling.’ After l. 12 comes an omitted couplet:

“ The humming dor, the dyinge swann,
And each a choyse musitian ” :

l. 16, ‘besweeted’ for ‘besweetned’: ll. 21-2:

—————“ but with a little Neate cole alaye of cvckoes spittle,” for “Of that we call”: l. 25-8 :—

————— “but hee not spares
To feed vppon the candide hayres

Of a dryed canker, with a sagg
And well bee-strutted bee's sweet bagg "

for

—————" but then forthwith
He ventures boldly on the pith
Of sugred rush, and eates the sagge," &c.

l. 29, "Shocking" for "Gladding." Then come these five lines that are in part inserted a little onward in

Hesperides :—

" A pickled magget and a drye
Hipp, with a red-cappt worme that's shutt
Within the carcasse of a nutt,
Browne as his tooth : and with the fatt
And well broyl'd inch-pin of a batt" :

ll. 32-3 read

" A bloated eare-wigg, with the pythe
Of sugred rush, he gladds hym with "

for

" A bloated earewig, and a flie ;
With the red-capt worme," &c.,

and then follow these lines (in the MS) :—

" But most of all the glow-worme's fier
(As much bewitching his desire
To knowe his queene) must with the farr
Fetcht binding ielley of a starr,
The silke wormes seed "

l. 42, 'fruittfull' for 'flattering'—the latter used repeatedly by Herrick (in III. "Golden Apples"): l. 45, 'a days chalice' for 'a dainty daizie.' This Poem appeared originally in a small volume more than once mentioned by us, viz., "A Description of the King and Queene of Fayries," &c. (1635); and this probably was Herrick's first printed production. The first form was very imperfect, and I deem it expedient to reprint it here literatim for comparison—as thus:—

"A Description of his Dyet.

Now they the Elves within a trice,
 Prepar'd a feast lesse great than nice.
 Where you may imagine first,
 The Elves prepare to quench his thirst,
 In pure seed Pearle of Infant dew
 Brought and sweetned with a blew
 And pregnant Violet; which done
 His killing eies begin to runne
 Quite ore the table, where he spyes
 The hornes of water'd Butter-flies.
 Of which he eats, but with a little
 Neat coole allay of Cuckowe spittle.
 Next this the red cap worme thats shut
 Within the concave of a nut.
 Moles eyes he tastes, then Adders eares;
 To these for sauce the slaine stagges teares,
 A bloated earewig, and the pith
 Of sugred rush he glads him with.

Then he takes a little Mothe,
Late fatted in a scarlet cloth,
A Spinners ham, the beards of mice,
Nits carbonado'd, a device
Before unknowne; the blood of fleas
Which gave his Elveships stomacke ease.
The unctuous dew tops of a Snaille,
The broke heart of a Nightingale,
Orecome in musicke, with the sagge
And well bestrutted Bees sweet bagge.
Conserves of Atomes, and the mites,
The silke wormes sperme, and the delights
Of all that ever yet hath blest
Fayrie land : so ends his feast."

If it were needful it would not be difficult to extend these various readings from other MSS., public and private. A number have been kindly sent to me and otherwise pointed out; but enough have been adduced to convince that, in common with the greatest and most spontaneous of our Poets, Herrick worked with a fine artistic patience and genuine concentration and consecration on his Verse. What is accidentally revealed in those thus minutely examined and reported on by us, warrants the conclusion that thus was it throughout. The student of our language and literature will be thankful for this additional evidence of highest art in combination with highest genius (of its kind), and will

(I hope) be helped to discern with what admirable insight and ear our Poet changed and omitted. To him equally with Ben Jonson may be applied William Cartwright's inestimable praise :—

“Where are they now that cry thy Lamp did drink
More Oyl than th' Author Wine, while he did think ?
We do embrace their slander; thou hast writ
Not for Dispatch but Fame; no Market Wit;
'Twas not thy Care that it might pass and sel
But that it might endure, and be done well;
Nor wouldst thou venture it unto the Ear
Until the File would not make smooth, but wear.”

(Poems, as before, p. 314.)

That Herrick did use the 'File' cunningly and patiently is everywhere apparent; and in anticipation of apparently an early death and before he should be 'in print' be appealed to Julia :—

“Julia, if I chance to die
Ere I print my poetry,
I most humbly thee desire
To commit it to the fire :
*Better 'twere my Book were dead
Then to live not perfected.*” (Vol. I. p. 35.)

and elsewhere :

“Parcell-gilt Poetry.

Let's strive to be THE BEST; the Gods, we know it, Pillars and men, hate an indifferent poet.”

(Vol. III. p. 46.)

III. What the Book tells of the Man and his relation to his times.—The merest glance over the manifold headings of the Poems, longer and shorter, of Hesperides and Noble Numbers, reveals that Herrick was not at all reluctant to tell the world of himself. Even in cases wherein he might have concealed his own personality he prefers revelation of it to concealment, silvery speech to golden silence—e.g., in “Wit’s Recreations” certain quaint lines had been inscribed “Of an old batchelor,” but when they were transferred to Hesperides he bravely substitutes “Upon Himself” (Vol. I. p. 170); and so, too, with “Cherry Pit” in “Wit’s Recreations” indirect, while in Hesperides direct “Julia and I.”¹ This is typical. If it were harsh to allege that he “wore his heart upon his sleeve for daws to peck at,” one must recognize a frank volubility and a fearless confidentialness about Robert Herrick by Robert Herrick, that are extremely noticeable. No more than Cromwell does he seek to tone down either the coppery hue of that feature which was so prominent in Bardolph, or to remove his warts. This suggests another element—his fundamental truthfulness. It is not simply that there is realism of description and utter nakedness of discovery, but that, whether grave or gay, you have a sense of absolute integrity of confession and profession. Both may mainly relate to moods and swift-coming and as swift-going thought and emotion; but then it is so because the man was a phenomenal man, a man of sudden moods, as changeful and as unexpected as the patterns made by a kaleidoscope. Forsooth there is often and often the same wonder over the verse-record, touched with imaginative splendours, as over the strange beauty shapened and coloured therein out of bits of broken glass and other valueless scraps. You turn to a poem headed “Of Himself,” and lo! the starting-point is a mere nothing, but before the close you are startled with something that lifts you up and ennobles the common-place. To take a representative example.—Like Thomas Randolph, he had lost a finger, and so he must ‘sing’ of the loss—not for Noble Numbers, but for Hesperides—and here is the result, one which the Reader might do worse than meditate on a little :—

¹ I refer here simply to the change to “Julia and I.” Of course it is clear he had other motives for the alteration, e.g. the first form shows he wrote for the sake of the equivoque, and then he altered it for the sake of better effect. The equivoque and meaning conveyed in his equivoque was also too gross for him to speak it really as of himself.

“ Upon the losse of his Finger.

One of the five straight branches of my hand
Is lopt already; and the rest but stand

Expecting when to fall : which soon will be ;
 First dyes the Leafe, the Bough next, next the Tree."

(Vol. II. p. 170.)

Compare this with the volatile Randolph's apostrophe to his finger lost in a scuffle :—

————— "deare finger, though thou be Cut from those muscles govern'd thee.
 And had thy motion at command ;
 Yet still as in a margent stand
 To point my thoughts to fix upon
 The hope of Resurrection :
 And since thou canst no finger be,
 Be a death's-head to humble me,
 Till death doth threat her sting in vain,
 And we in heaven shake hands again."

(Poems : 1652 pp. 121-2.)

How much truer and simpler and right from the heart is the pathos of Herrick | over against the mere 'trick' of Randolph. One accepts as real the one :
 as in reading his George Herbert-like "Necessary Observations," the tongue in cheek is inevitably called up in the other. I say this as judging by the ultimate impression left on the student of Herrick and of blazè
 Randolph. Herrick 'convinces' you of his truthfulness, whether he aspire or grovel. It were easy to multiply similar engrandeuring and entendering of very

What about his love &

ordinary things ; but all along I wish rather to lead the way than to exhaust those characteristics that have suggested themselves to me.

Springing out of these unlooked for touches of gravity and art of the Poet as distinguished from the mere rhymers, is another element still more largely present in Hesperides and Noble Numbers when you are vigilant in looking for it. I refer to an unlifted shadow of melancholy that must have lain broad and black over Herrick. Joyousness is not at all in contradiction with this, any more than is the shadow with the real brightness of the light whose shadow it is. Your 'merry' nature—merry toward others, through keen self-repression and self-denial—has often a dark thread interwoven in it. I find this melancholy (the 'Melancholia' of Robert Burton) in the perpetually-recurring thought of death in the Poetry of Herrick. The intermixture of the Poems—before accounted for—is apt to hide this ; but when you read pencil in hand, you are struck with the fascinating frequency of allusion to 'the end' of all ; your ear, once open, catches tones and semi-tones of an unmoving sense of mortality and uncertainty ; you see the gleam of tears in the very sunbeams of laughter. His "Gather ye rosebuds" is only a lighter setting to music of an habitual thought in this so blithe and whole-hearted Singer. This is the more remarkable as a recollection of the facts of his Life (I. Biographical) makes it certain that the largest proportion of his Poems must have been written when he was comparatively young. Nevertheless, his 'gray hairs' and death come in with a peculiar iteration among the earliest.² As we have already seen, the very remarkable Lines from the Ashmolean MS. entitled "Vpon Parting" ("Golden Apples," Vol. III. p. 109) mark his disentanglement from all his "Mistresses" (in the poetic, and only subsidiarily actual sense of 'sweet-hearts') on his assuming 'holy orders.' The other poem, "The Farewell vnto Poetrie" (Ibid pp. 101-6), is kindredly serious. About to be made 'priest,' he means to do his duty. Now all this was in or before 1629, when he was 'ordained' and installed as Vicar of Dean Prior. By 1629, consequently, or in his 38th year, his 'Antheas,' and 'Perillas,' and 'Julias,' and

² Herrick's melancholy and thoughts of death are abiding, not transient, much less mere phrases. An unpublished autograph note of Voltaire to Lord Chesterfield gives an example of the mere jesting-phrase reference to death—as follows:—

"Si je ne suis pas mort, je Serai a vos ordres, si je suis mort, je vous en demande pardon d'avance. V."

A my lord.

Comte Chesterfield : 1772 or 1773 : MSS. at Bretby Park.

‘Silvias,’ and all the bevy of fair girls and women were of the Past—earlier in his ‘wild, unhallowed’ youthhood and later after leaving the University and being resident in town, prior to ordination, and when he was of the ‘Sun,’ and the ‘Dog,’ and the ‘Triple Tun,’ and other great gatherings, social and literary ; and yet it is in these relatively early poems the deepest and saddest notes are found. Let us glance over the Book to briefly indicate (by italics) and illustrate this,—going from the opening pages onward. Thus “To Perilla” he writes,—the last line (italicized) being very fine in another aspect than what is now being looked at :—

“Ah, my Perilla ! do’st thou grieve to see
 Me, day by day, to steale away from thee ?
 Age cals me hence, and my gray haire bid come,
And haste away to mine eternal home ;
 ’Twill not be long (Perilla) after this,
That I must give thee the supremest kisse :
Dead when I am
 Follow me weeping to my Turfe, and there
 Let fall a Primrose, and with it a teare :
 Then lastly, let some weekly-strewings be Devoted to the memory of me :
 Then shall my Ghost not walk about, but keep Still in the coole, and silent shades of sleep.”

(Vol. I. pp. 14-15.)

Again, in his "To Robin Red-brest" how touchingly does he go away back as when a little child on the child's legend in all lands of the "Babes in the Wood," and seek a friend in the 'house-hold' bird of "the red stomacher":—

"To Robin Red-brest.

Laid out for dead, let thy last kindness be
 With leaves and mosse-work for to cover me :
 And while the Wood-nimphs my cold corps inter,
 Sing thou my Dirge, sweet-warbling Chorister !
 For Epitaph, in Foliage, next write this,
 Here, here the Tomb of Robin Herrick is !"

(Vol. I. p. 32.)

Once more, "To Anthea," as to "Perilla," we have this; and, as in I. Biographical I have remarked, it is surely very clear that under these fanciful names a real love-story of his youth is concealed, making us think of his bachelorhood as constrained by some disappointment in a first love:—

"To Anthea.

Now is the time, when all the lights wax dim ;
And thou (Anthea) must withdraw from him
Who was thy servant. Dearest, bury me
Under that Holy-oke, or Gospel-tree :
Where (though thou see'st not) thou may'st think upon
Me, when thou yeerly go'st Procession :

Or, for mine honour, lay me in that Tombe
In which thy sacred Reliques shall have roome.
 For my Embalming (Sweetest) there will be
 No Spices wanting, when I'm laid by thee."

(Vol. I. p. 34.)

Yet again, how unforced, how inevitable, how soft and tender is his :—

" Divination by a Daffadill.

When a Daffadill I see,
 Hanging down his head t'wards me;
 Guesse I may, what I must be :
 First, I shall decline my head ;
 Secondly, I shall be dead ;
 Lastly, safely buryèd.

(Vol. I. p. 64.)

Tenderer still is this :—

" Upon his eye-sight failing him.

I beginne to waine in sight ;
 Shortly I shall bid goodnight :
 Then no gazing more about,
 When the Tapers once are out."

(Vol. II. p. 131.)

Even when he is wearing, if not motley, at least the vine-wreath of Anacreon or the violets of Catullus, he semi-unconsciously deepens his raillery of "The cruell maid" into passionate entreaty, as thus :—

—“ I’le trouble you no more ; but goe
 My way, where you shall never know
 What is become of me : there I
 Will find me out a path to die ;
 Or learne some way how to forget
 You, and your name, for ever ” :

and again :

—————“ yet this thing doe,
 That my last Vow commends to you :
 When you shall see that I am dead,
 For pittie let a teare be shed ;
 And (with your Mantle o’re me cast)
 Give my cold lips a kisse at last :
 If twice you kisse, you need not feare,
 That I shall stir, or live more here.”

(Vol. I. pp. 103-104.)

Still more interpenetrated and penetratively, is

“ The Olive Branch.

*Sadly I walk’t within the field,
 To see what comfort it wo’d yeeld ;
 And as I went my private way,
 An Olive-branch before me lay :
 And seeing it, I made a stay.
 And took it up, and view’d it ; then
 Kissing the Omen, said Amen :
 Be, be it so, and let this be
 A Divination unto me :
 That in short time my woes shall cease ;
 And Love shall crown my End with Peace.”*

(Vol. I. pp. 126-7.)

Very striking is the working in of himself and his anticipated early death in the else gay rather than sombre "Meditation for his Mistresse." He has likened her to 'Tulip,' and 'July-flower,' and 'Rose,' and 'faire-set Vine,' and 'Balme,' and 'dainty Violet'! Then, like one of Mozart's marvellous notes in his Choruses, there is this close :

" You are the Queen all flowers among,
But die you must (faire Maide) ere long,
As He, the maker of this Song." (Vol. I. p. 152.)

Similarly in "The Changes. To Corinna"—

" Time, ere long, will come and plow
Loathèd Furrowes in your brow :
And the dimnesse of your eye
Will no other thing imply,
But you must die
As well as I." (Vol. I. p. 169.)

These will suffice to satisfy the Reader that not only was there beneath Herrick's moods of mirth and boisterousness an abiding element of melancholy, but besides, a deeper vein of thinking and feeling than is commonly suspected. This leads me to speak of another element in the make of the man that demands statement and insistence, seeing that inattention to it does him no ordinary injustice—his love of country, his Shakespeare-like proudness of being an Englishman. This comes out very delightfully in the fulness and fine credulity of his celebration of English ways and habits, and even superstitions. For where will you find such pictures of England's flowers and herbage, the freshness and brightness of her sunshine, and rains, and dews, the fragrance of her blossoms, and buds, and leafage, and fruits; the deliciousness of her bird-filled woodland and lanes, and twilights, the daintiness of her Christmas, and other home and harvest ordinances and customs, as Hock-cart, May-pole Morris dance, Wake, Quintell, Trentall, Twelfth Night, the heartiness and opulence of her firesides, gentle and simple, the exquisiteness and delicate fancies of her 'Fairy' lore, the peerless loveliness of her 'fair women,' and the imperial brains of her 'brave men,' the thorough gladness of the brown lads and ruddy lasses in the comely country round, or quaffing their nut-brown ale. So that his own appeal and request when he would have his verses read must be remembered by those who would drink in their finest inspiration—as thus :—

“ In sober mornings, doe not thou reherse
The holy incantation, of a verse ;
But when that men have both well drunke, and fed,
Let my Enchantments then be sung, or read.

*When Laurell spirts 'ith' fire, and when the Hearth
Smiles to it selfe, and guilds the rooffe with mirth ;
When up the Thyrsse is rais'd, and when the sound
Of sacred Orgies flies, A round, A round ;
When the Rose raignes, and locks with ointments shine,
Let rigid Cato read these Lines of mine."*

(Vol. I. pp. 11-12.)

But if more occult not a whit less pervading is the further evidence that Herrick, more than most of his contemporaries, felt keenly all through the tragedy of the Civil War, the vastness of the issues and the mournfulness of the conflict. When—as with his melancholy—you study Hesperides and Noble Numbers with this in mind, you are surprised and touched by the depth and strength of emotion as he writes of the men and the events of his age. In I. Biographical, I have stated that he was a Royalist, and 'loyal' to the King as against the Kingdom. In his case, as in many others, I have recognised the chivalry of his loyalty. If I must side with Cromwell not Charles, or with the Nation and not the Court, I none the less honour such as sacrificed everything in fealty to their convictions and principles. But underlying Herrick's Royalism and loyalty, there was open-eyed and sad-hearted insight into the high-handed procedure of his sovereign and his advisers, and a yearning for a way of escape and reconciliation. To those consequently who have turned to Hesperides as a mere Garden of Flowers, and Fruit, and Birds, and rural sights and fragrancies, and colours, and sounds, it is necessary to assert that his Poems, when adequately studied, give us unmistakable evidence that in him all the lights and shadows, the successes and disasters, the angers and estrangements, the wisdom and unwisdom of thick-coming occurrences were reflected. The evidence here is so universal that I must content myself with typical examples. At a chance opening of his Book take this to begin with:—

To his Friend on the untunable Times.

“ Play I co’d once ; but (gentle friend) you see
 My Harp hung up, here on the Willow tree.
 Sing I co’d once ; and bravely too enspire,
 (With luscious Numbers) my melodious Lyre.
 Draw I co’d once (although not stocks or stones,
 Amphion-like) men made of flesh and bones,
 Whether I wo’d ; but (ah !) I know not how,
 I feele in me, this transmutation now.
 Griefe, (my deare friend) has first my Harp unstrung ;
 Wither’d my hand, and palsie-struck my tongue.”

(Vol. I. p. 146.)

Again:—

On Himselfe.

“ Aske me, why I do not sing
 To the tension of the string,

As I did, not long ago,
 When my numbers full did flow?
 Griefe (ay me!) hath struck my Lute,
 And my tongue at one time mute."

(Vol. II. pp. 45-6.)

Once more:—

The Poet hath lost his pipe.

"I cannot pipe as I was wont to do,
 Broke is my Reed, hoarse is my singing too:
 My wearied Oat Ile hang upon the Tree,
 And give it to the Silvan deitie." (Vol. II. p. 172.)

Again:—

His wish to privacie.

"Give me a Cell
 To dwell,
 Where no foot hath
 A path:
 There will I spend,
 And end
 My wearied yeares
 In teares." (Vol. II. p. 262.)

Again:—

His Answer to a friend.

"You aske me what I doe, and how I live?
 And (Noble friend) this answer I must give:
 Drooping, I draw on to the vaults of death,
 O're which you'l walk, when I am laid beneath."

(Vol. III. pp. 50-51.)

Further :—

His change.

“ My many cares and much distress,
Has made me like a wilderness :
Or (discompos'd) I'm like a rude,
And all-confusèd multitude :
Out of my comely manners worne ;
And as in meanes, in minde all torne.”

(Vol. III. p. 51.)

There are many such personal plaints ; but there are more than these. His expressly ‘royal’ poems directly addressed to the King and his followers were natural enough from him. Their ‘loyalty’ lies on the surface. It needs not that I should quote from them. But with all his ‘royalism’ and ‘loyalty,’ how deep was his lamentation over kingly and courtly vengeance, and how burning his shame over incompetence among high-advisers. Take this :—

Clemency.

“ For punishment in warre, it will suffice,
If the chiefe author of the faction dyes ;
Let but few smart, but strike a feare through all :
Where the fault springs, there let the judgement fall.”

(Vol. II. p. 47.)

So, too, in his “ Pitie to the Prostrate ” :—

“’Tis worse then barbarous cruelty to show
No part of pitie on a conquer’d foe.”

(Vol. II. p. 163.)

This latter may have been a groan for the beaten King —and this also :—

Change common to all.

“ All things subjected are to Fate;
Whom this Morne sees most fortunate,
The Ev’ning sees in poor estate.”

(Vol. II. p. 179.)

How pathetic his verses to Wicks :—

“ W’ave seen the past-best Times, and these Will nere return.” (Vol. II. p. 48.)

Similarly, in his “ Parting Verse ” :—

“ As for myself, since time a thousand cares
And griefs hath fil’d upon my silver hairs.”

(Vol. II. p. 61.)

Again, in his “ Lachrimæ, or Mirth turn’d to Mourning ” :

“ Call me no more,
As heretofore,
The musick of a Feast;
Since now (alas)
The mirth that was
In me, is dead or ceast.” (Vol. II. p. 67.)

Once more, "To his Booke" :—

"He's greedie of his life, who will not fall, Whenas a publick ruine bears down All."
(Vol. II. p. 87.)

So in his "Pastorall sung to the King" :

"Bad are the times. And wors then they are we :
Troth, bad are both ; worse fruit, and ill the tree."

and the close :—

"The shades grow great ; but greater grows our sorrow,
But lets go steepe
Our eyes in sleepe ;
And meet to weepe
To morrow." (Vol. II. pp. 93-96.)

He could see the evil of 'royal' favouritism to the unworthy, as thus :—

Pollicie in Princes.

"That Princes may possesse a surer seat,
'Tis fit they make no One with them too great."
(Vol. II. p. 101.)

I think this must refer to Edgehill :—

Haste hurtfull.

"Haste is unhappy : what we rashly do
Is both unluckie ; I, and foolish too.

Where War with rashness is attempted, there
The soldiers leave the Field with equal feare.”
(Vol. II. p. 279.)

There returns his own personal grief : —

His weakness in woes.

“ I cannot suffer ; and in this, my part
Of Patience wants. Grief breaks the stoutest Heart.”
(Vol. II. p. 111.)

Here is the cry of a pathetic heart pierced to the core :—

Upon the troublesome times.

“ O ! Times most bad,
Without the scope
Of hope
Of better to be had !

Where shall I goe,
Or whither run
To shun
This publique overthrow ?

No places are
(This I am sure)
Secure
In this our wasting Warre.

Some storms w’ave past ;
Yet we must all
Down fall,
And perish at the last.”

(Vol. II. pp. 183-4.)

It was a mistaking of the coming down of a palace-ceiling (so to say) for the ruin of the ever-enduring dome of the sky (when it was only beclouded); none the less real were the pain and the trial. How curiously intermixed is his "Bad season makes the Poet sad," as thus:—

"Dull to my selfe, and almost dead to these
 My many fresh and fragrant Mistresses :
 Lost to all Musick now ; since every thing
 Puts on the semblance here of sorrowing.
 Sick is the Land to'th' heart ; and doth endure
 More dangerous faintings by her desp'rate cure.
 But if that golden Age wo'd come again,
 And Charles here Rule, as he before did Raign ;
 If smooth and unperplext the Seasons were,
 As when the Sweet Maria livèd here :
 I sho'd delight to have my Curles halfe drown'd
 In Tyrian Dewes, and Head with Roses crown'd.
 And once more yet (ere I am laid out dead)
 Knock at a Starre with my exalted Head."

(Vol. II. pp. 187-8.)

As shewn by the absence of the Queen, these lines must have been written after July, 1644. The facts give a keener edge to the couplet entitled "Love":—

"This Axiom I have often heard, Kings ought to be more lov'd then fear'd."

(Vol. II. p. 220.)

and again :—

True safety.

“ ’Tis not the Walls, or purple that defends
A Prince from Foes ; but ’tis his Fort of Friends.”
(Vol. II. p. 237.)

and once more :—

Clemency in Kings.

“ Kings must not only cherish up the good,
But must be niggards of the meanest blood.”
(Vol. II. p. 266.)

and yet again, very articulately :—

Moderation.

“ In things a moderation keepe,
Kings ought to sheare, not skin their sheepe.”
(Vol. II. p. 267.)

Further :—

Bad Princes pill their People.

“ Like those infernall Deities which eate
The best of all the sacrificèd meate ;
And leave their servants, but the smoak & sweat :
So many Kings, and Primates too there are,
Who claim the Fat, and Fleshie for their share,
And leave their subjects but the starvèd ware.”
(Vol. II. p. 284.)

‘ Primates ’ is peculiarly significant—Laud being intended, doubtless. Again :—

Kings and Tyrants.

“’Twixt Kings & Tyrants there’s this difference known, Kings seek their Subjects’ good : Tyrants their owne.”
(Vol. II. p. 296.)

Again, indignant over the shorn ears and slit nostrils of Prynne, and Burton, and Bastwicke, and which we have Dean Hook telling us to-day Laud did not sanction—“except perhaps by his vote”!!!—is this :—

Cruelty.

“Tis but a dog-like madnesse in bad Kings,
For to delight in wounds and murderings.
As some plants prosper best by cuts and blowes ;
So Kings by killing doe encrease their foes.”
(Vol. III. p. 18.)

Once more :—

Patience in Princes.

“Kings must not use the Axe for each offence :
Princes cure some faults by their patience.”
(Vol. III. p. 46.)

Significant is this :—

Examples, or like Prince, like people.

“Examples lead us, and wee likely see,
Such as the Prince is, will his People be.”
(Vol. II. p. 256.)

Further, boldly, and yet with a sad pensiveness :—

Finally, I know nothing more affecting than his address
"To his angry God," with himself wounded in and out, and his outlook ominous and spectral :—

 " Through all the night
 Thou dost me fright,
And hold'st mine eyes from sleeping ;
 And day, by day,
 My Cup can say,
My wine is mixt with weeping.
 Thou dost my bread
 With ashes knead,
Each evening and each morrow :
 Mine eye and eare
 Do see, and heare
The coming in of sorrow.
 Thy scourge of steele,
 (Ay me !) I feele,
Upon me beating ever :
 While my sick heart
 With dismall smart
Is disacquainted never.
 Long, long, I'm sure,
 This can't endure ;
But in short time 'twill please Thee,
 My gentle God,
 To burn the rod,
Or strike so as to ease me." (Vol. III. p. 141.)

I venture to assume that now it has been made good that Herrick was no heathen Anacreon or Catullus 'singing' jocundly his own mirthfulness, and singing heedless of the mighty ongoings that contemporaneously through long years reverberated over the land. I therefore quote, if in sorrow and wonder, yet also thankfully—because it puts effectively a long-prevalent misunderstanding and misconception of our Poet—from MR. EDMUND W. GOSSE'S paper in Cornhill (August, 1875). "This period was one of great lyrical ability; the drama was declining under Massinger [?] and Shirley, and all the young generation of poets, brought up at the feet of Jonson and Fletcher, were much more capable of writing songs than plays. Indeed no one can at this time determine what degree of technical perfection English literature might not have attained if the Royalist lyrists had been allowed to sun themselves unmolested about the fountains of Whitehall, and, untroubled by the grave question of national welfare, had been able to give their whole attention to the polishing of their verses. In fact, however, it will be noticed that only one of the whole school was undisturbed by the political crisis. The weaker ones, like Lovelace, were completely broken by it; the stronger, like Suckling, threw themselves into public affairs with a zeal and intensity that supplied the place of the artificial excitement of poetry so completely as to put a stop to their writing altogether. Herrick alone, with unfashionable serenity, continued to pipe out his pastoral ditties, and crown his head with daffodils, when England was torn to pieces with the most momentous struggle for liberty that her annals can present. To the poetic student he is, therefore, of special interest, as a genuine specimen of an artist, pure and simple. Herrick brought out the Hesperides a few weeks before the King was beheaded, and people were invited to listen to little madrigals upon Julia's stomacher at the singularly inopportune moment when the eyes of the whole nation were bent on the unprecedented phenomenon of the proclamation of an English republic. To find a parallel to such unconsciousness we must come down to our own time, and recollect that Theophile Gautier took occasion of the siege of Paris to revise and republish Emaux et Camées" (pp. 176-7). I feel sure that no one will be more eager than Mr. Gosse to recall his hard and utterly erroneous judgment of Herrick. I must iterate and re-iterate, that in no contemporary do you find such multiplied, poignant, over-mastering, and nevertheless unclamorous 'consciousness' of these 'troublous times.' The imaginary coincidence of the publication of Hesperides with the beheading of the King is singularly unfortunate. The title-page of Noble Numbers is 1647, and that of Hesperides 1648. The Book came out early in 1648. The King was beheaded January 30th, 1649. Equally mistaken is the notion that "the little madrigals upon Julia's stomacher" and the like belong to the period of the nation's throes for liberty. They were certainly of his earliest, many probably of 1610-12, and assuredly all, or nearly all, prior to 1629; or well-nigh, even in the latter, a good quarter of a century before the Civil War and its mournful strife and dolour. I would recall that even his 'flower' verses were all early; for thus "To Flowers" does he 'sing':—

"In time of life, I grac't ye with my Verse."

(Vol. I. p. 57.)

and when he thinks of his imperishable Lyrics, he exclaims:—

"*Before I went
To banishment
Into the loathèd West;
I co'd rehearse
A Lyrick verse,
And speak it with the best.*"

(Vol. II. p. 67-8.)

that is before 1629.

Going on from his undoubted patriotism, I wish to put stress on this thing of the chronology of the Poems of Herrick, for another reason. There no doubt still remains in the Epigrams, inexplicable contradiction to Noble Numbers, and to much of deepest and greatest in Hesperides. There must have been a streak of animalism to the last in him as in Rabelais, and Swift, and Sterne; for I dare not conceal, if I might, his portraits of parishioners, and loathsome allusions to corns, and toes, and sweat, and stinks, and "raw eyes," and "gum of the eyes," and "running ears," such as a Satyr given pen and ink might have written. But it does lift off a weight of blame and incongruity to keep fast hold of the simple matter-of-fact that his love-lays, and endless flaming after 'Mistresses,' and riot of self-indulgence in sack, and 'winking wine,' and such hilariousness and abandon as are not for an instant to be associated with a clergyman, WERE ALL THE PRODUCT OF HIS 'LAY' YEARS, AND SOCIAL MEETINGS WITH JONSON AND HIS COMPEERS. I would re-affirm that "Robert Herrick, Esq.," on his title-page was intended, as it was fitted, to disassociate his Poems—as a whole—from his 'clerical' years. It was long before even 1629 he sang:—

“ I feare no Earthly Powers,
 But care for crowns of flowers ;
 And love to have my Beard
 With Wine and Oil besmear'd.
 This day Ile drowne all sorrow ;
 Who knowes to live to-morrow ? ”

(Vol. I. p. 111.)

Here spoke the young man ‘about town,’ with his bones full of marrow, and his blood of fire, and his entire temperament pleasure-loving and sensuous. I quote again from Mr. Gosse that again the reader may be forewarned and forearmed against his further fundamental misconception of Herrick, through forgetfulness that the one set or class of Poems was sundered by a quarter-of-a-century at least from the other. Not in his “ dreary Devonshire vicarage,” but when his ‘fine frenzy’ was kindled by the guests of “The Dog,” and “The Sun,” and “The Triple Tun,” was he so ‘outspoken’ in his “half-classical dreams about Favonius and Iris, and in flowery mazes of sweet thoughts about fair, half-imaginary women.” With these preliminary words, here is our further quotation, after above lines, “I fear no earthly powers” :—
 “This was his philosophy, and it is not to be distinguished from that of Anacreon or Horace. One knows not how the old pagan dared be so outspoken in his dreary Devonshire vicarage, with no wild friends to egg him on, or to applaud his fine frenzy. His Epicureanism was plainly a matter of conviction, and though he wrote Noble Numbers, preached sermons, and went through all the perfunctory duties of his office [Not a shadow of proof of the 'duties of his office' having been 'perfunctory'], it is not in these that he lives and has his pleasure, but in half-classical dreams about Favonius and Iris, and in flowery mazes of sweet thoughts about fair, half-imaginary women. It matters little to him what divinity he worships, if he may work daffodils into the god's bright hair. In one hand he brings a garland of yellow flowers for the amorous head of Bacchus, with the other he decks the osier-cradle of Jesus with roses and Lent-lilies. He has no sense of irreverence in this rococo devotion. It is the attribute, and not the Deity he worships. There is an airy frivolity, an easy-going callousness of soul that makes it impossible for him to feel very deeply" (p. 180). A thousand and a thousand times 'No.' My gifted friend is oblivious of dates, and imposed on by the intermixture of earlier and later, light and serious, through the Publishers', not the Author's, arrangement or disarrangement of Hesperides. I am beyond measure astounded that a critic of the calibre and the weight of Mr. Gosse could deliberately write such a paradox of Herrick, as that his was "an easy-going callousness of soul that makes it impossible for him to feel very deeply"! Contrariwise, 'callousness' is the very antipodes of his nature in its surcharge of the emotional, and 'depth,' the one word to express his 'feeling,' in what of truest and noblest he has given us. I must add that there was no simulation, but intense fervour and sincerity in his passion at the moment, and for the moment, if it is to be conceded that it was also as changeable as Robert Burns's in the eighteenth century. Hence, as criticism, it is bewilderingly the reverse of the fact when Mr. Gosse thus further writes:—"There is a total want of passion in his language about women—the nearest approach to it, perhaps, is in the wonderful song 'To Anthea,' when the lark-like freshness of the ascending melody closely simulates intense emotion—with all his warmth of fancy and luxurious animalism, he thinks more of the pretty eccentricities of dress than the charms the garments curtain. He is enraptured with the way in which the Countess of Carlisle wears a riband of black silk twisted round her arm; he palpitates with pleasure when Mistress Katherine Bradshaw puts a crown of laurel on his head, falling on one knee, we may believe, and clasping his hands as he receives it. He sees his loves through the medium of shoe-strings and pomander bracelets, and is alive, as no poet has been before or since, to the picturesqueness of dress. Everybody knows his exquisite lines about the "tempestuous petticoat," and his poems are full of little touches no less delicate than this" (p. 180). Read cum grano salis there is truth in his eye to "the picturesqueness of dress"; but a very little study of the poems referred to will satisfy that the Wearers, not the 'dress,' inspired him to sing, and that his fault was not lack, but exuberance and wildness of 'passion.'

Within these wider relations of Herrick to his times, and the insight which they give us into his bearing through periods of national peril and sorrow, there was his every-day life at Dean Prior. Looked at broadly, Mr. Gosse has well sketched it for us, as follows:—
"In many sweet and sincere verses he gives us a charming picture of the quiet life he led in the Devonshire parsonage, that he affected to loathe so much. The village had its rural and semi-pagan customs, that pleased him thoroughly. He loved to see the brown lads and lovely girls, crowned with daffodils and daisies, dancing in the summer evenings in a comely country round; he delighted in the may-pole, ribanded and garlanded like a thyrsus, reminding his florid fancy of Bacchus and the garden-god. There were morris-dances at Dean Prior, wakes and quintels ; mummers, too, at Christmas, and quaint revellings at Twelfth Night, with wassail bowls and nut-brown mirth ; and we can imagine with what zeal the good old pagan would encourage these rites against the objections of any round-head Puritan who might come down with his new-fangled Methodistical notions to trouble the sylvan quiet of Dean Prior. For Herrick the dignity of episcopal authorship had no charm, and thunders of Nonconformity no terror. Busier minds were at this moment occupied with Holy Living and Holy Dying, and thrilled with the Sermons of Calamy. It is delightful to think of Herrick, blissfully unconscious of the tumult of tongues and all the windy war, more occupied with morris-dances and barley-breaks than with prayer-book or Psalter. The Revolution must indeed have come upon him unaware" (p. 181). Bating the reference to the illustrious and venerable Calamy, whose matterful sermons had Mr. Gosse read, he would have spared his (I fear intended) sneer, and the already pointed out mistake that in his seclusion the Vicar was 'unaware' of the march of events to 'The Revolution,'—this vivifies to us the long-past 'residence.' I feel disposed to acquiesce in the phrase of the "Devonshire parsonage, that he affected to loath." I suspect his objurgations and 'parish' Epigrams, were written during Winter, when the air was chill, and the roads miry, and society gone to town. One cannot credit that Poems so informed with the breath of the country, and so pulsating with love for everything rural and primitive, were not inspired by true enjoyment. It could only have been in a fit of bile, or when the old rhyme of 'rainy Devonshire' was being monotonously accomplished, that he thus wrote :

Upon himself.

"Come, leave this loathèd Country-life, and then Grow up to be a Roman Citizen.
 Those mites of Time, which yet remain unspent,
 Waste thou in that most Civill Government.
 Get their comportment, and the gliding Tongue
 Of those mild Men, thou art to live among :
 Then being seated in that smoother Sphere,
 Decree thy everlasting Topick there. =abode
And to the Farm-house nere return at all, Though Granges do not love thee, Cities shall."

(Vol. II. p. 116-7.)¹

¹ It may be noted here, en passant, that in Randolph's finest poem, "An Ode to M. Anthony Stafford to hasten him into the

Let us read the ancient rhyme as the key to such irate loathing :—

“ The West wind comes and brings us rain,
 The East wind blows it back again ;
 The South wind brings us rainy weather,
 The North wind cold and rain together.
 When the sun in red doth set,
 The next day surely will be wet.
 But if the sun should set in gray
 The next will be a rainy day !
 When buds the ash before the oak,
 Then, that year, there'll be a soak,
 But should the oak precede the ash,
 Then expect a rainy splash.”

Country ” you have the obverse of the medal. The opening will illustrate :—

“ Come spurre away,
 I have no patience for a longer stay ;
 But must go down,
 And leave the changeable noise of this great Town.
 I will the Countreye see,
 Where all simplicity,
 Though hid in gray,
 Doth look more gay
 Than fopery in plush and scarlet clad.
 Farewell you City-wits that are Almost at Civill-warre :
 'Tis time that I grow wise when all the world grows mad.”
 (Poems 1652, pp. 61-64.)

If the 'Western Wind,' like North, and South, and East, brought rain, and rain, and rain, it got other messages from the Poet too, as thus :—

“ Sweet western wind, whose luck it is,
 (Made rivall with the aire,)
To give Perenna's lip a kisse,
 And fan her wanton haire.
Bring me but one, I'le promise thee,
 Instead of common showers,
Thy wings shall be embalm'd by me,
 And all beset with flowers.”

(Vol. I. p. 179.)

Nay, more, his “ Noble Numbers ” at least were the product of “ dull Devonshire ”; and so he gratefully sums up his “ Discontents in Devon ” :

“ More discontents I never had,
 Since I was born, then here ;
Where I have bee'n, and still am sad,
 In this dull Devon-shire.
Yet, justly too, I must confesse,
 I ne'r invented such
Ennobled numbers for the Presse,
 Then where I loath'd so much.”

(Vol. I. p. 32.)

Then there is the title of his Book, Hesperides, which, if with a sly reminder of 'dragons,' also tells of “Golden Apples” from the West. There are home-Poems, that transparently assure us of real contentment and happiness. It will do us all good to read “His Grange, or private wealth,” thus :—

“ Though Clock,
 To tell how night draws hence, I’ve none,
 A Cock,
 I have, to sing how day draws on.
 I have
 A maid (my Prew) by good luck sent,
 To save
 That little, Fates me gave or lent.
 A Hen
 I keep, which creaking day by day,
 Tells when
 She goes her long white egg to lay.
 A Goose
 I have, which, with a jealous eare,
 Lets loose
 Her tongue, to tell what danger’s neare.
 A Lamb
 I keep (tame) with my morsells fed,
 Whose Dam
 An Orphan left him (lately dead).
 A Cat
 I keep, that playes about my House,
 Grown fat,
 With eating many a miching Mouse.
 To these

A Trasy I do keep, whereby
I please
The more my rurall privacie :
Which are
But toyes, to give my heart some ease :
Where care
None is, slight things do lightly please.”
(Vol. II. pp. 240-1.)

Other Poems—homelier and in a lower key—give equal testimony ; and his actual return in 1662 is still more consolatory. It was inevitable, that, buried in ‘ the country ’—he went to Dean Prior in October—he would yearn after old days and the old associates in London ; but from 1646 to 1662 would suffice for town, especially with the grand men of his youth all gone. And so he would ‘ travel West,’ not grudgingly or sadly, but thankfully. His Epigrams on obnoxious parishioners would be long forgotten ; but there is proof that his Noble Numbers and his rural pieces were ‘ learned by heart ’ (Scotice), and long lingered in aged memories. Then Devonshire had still its old-mannered usages and ‘ characters,’ its feminine loveliness, its ‘ tors,’ and vales, and shadowy lanes ; its primroses and violets, wild roses, wild strawberries and honeysuckle, cowslips and daffodils ; and the lark, and nightingale, and robin, and thrush. April and May, and June, and

July, would bring the old games, and the old mirth in the old gatherings. Even the slighted months then as now would yield him their own profuse beauty of ivy, and fern, and hedgerow. I like to picture the mellowed septuagenarian giving a kiss, glowing as thirty years before, to the 'maiden' whom he had baptized, and whose parents he had married. His hair might be white, but his heart was as young as ever. Broad of jest, perchance, and laughter-loving still, —loud, not low,—abhorrent of pretence, keen-eyed to sanctimoniousness taking the guise of saintliness, but soft-hearted and generous to the last; not "an old Pagan," but a hale, old-fashioned Churchman, who loved the ancient forms and ancient prayers, and ancient usages altogether, and who, not brazenly and merely orthodoxally, had with stooped head said in 1648 :—

—————"I sing, and ever shall

Of Heaven, AND HOPE TO HAVE IT AFTER ALL."^a

(Vol. I. p. 8.)

His relation to his Contemporaries I have already indicated in I. Biographical. Too early for knowing Shakespeare—away down in Stratford, not in London, unless on a chance-visit—we have found him couched at the feet of 'Rare Ben,' and a welcome guest among the immortals. It is pleasant to read his generous praise of his younger brethren—as DENHAM and CHARLES COTTON. They in turn, doubtless, looked up to him. Two of his poems got among the posthumously-published Poems of Thomas Carew, viz, "The Enquiry" (Vol. II., p. 3), and "The Primrose" (Vol. II., p. 177). Both appeared in "Wit's Recreations" (1640), and both were reclaimed from thence for Hesperides. It is most likely in tacit reference to these and possibly others, that he affirmed his express proprietorship of all, as thus:—

"Upon his Verses.

What off-spring other men have got,
The how, where, when, I question not.
These are the Children I have left;
Adopted some; none got by theft.
But all are toucht (like lawfull plate)
And no Verse illegitimate." (Vol. II. p. 223.)

It is more than satisfying that the great and good John Selden, though no Royalist, won his reverence and affection. It is characteristic of the spacious-hearted man that he had words of praise and recognition for merit wherever met. His judgments are invariably sound. It surprised me, I own, to come on his estimate of Mildmay, Earl of Westmoreland, as a Poet ; but, guided by his estimate, to his privately-printed "Otia Sacra", I was more than rewarded. Until the whole is given (in my "Occasional Issues") let this little poem gain for itself a reading, as warranting Herrick's counsel to 'print' :—

Quid amabilius.

If I must needs Discover
 I am in Love : be Christ again my Lover,
 And let His Passion bring
 My actions to their touch and censuring :
 Who in this world was born,
 Liv'd in it, and was put to death with scorn,
 That I to Sin might die,
 Being born again to live eternally :
 Thus I'll no longer make
 Addresses to my Glass for this curles sake,
 Or that quaint garb, whereby
 I may enchanted be with flattery :
 Nor on luxurious vow,
 Becircling Rosebuds seek to gird my brow ;
 But with a melting thought
 Bring home that Ransom whereat twas bought,
 In Contemplation
 Of that same Platted Crown He once had on.
 And when my Glove or Shoo
 Want Ribbond, call for th' Nails that pierced Him too :
 Else farther to be drest,
 Borrow the Tincture of His naked brest :

Nor wash, but in Soul Pride,
 Then use no other Bason but His Side :
 So, up and ready, think
 How He, for Me, low in the grave did sink,
 That I again might rise
 With Him, who was both Priest and Sacrifice,
 To make atonement in
 The Difference 'twixt his Father's wrath, Mans' sin ;
 Whereto it must remain,
 That I through Faith requite this love again.

(Otia Sacra, p. 70.) ✓

IV. The specialities of his Poetry.—I do not say that 'specialities' is the best possible word to express my purpose in the present observations ; but I wanted to mark out something more definite than 'characteristics'—all the more that I have already stated and illustrated his 'characteristics' as Man and Poet in working out a higher object. These five things include what I wish to note for the Reader :—

1. His imaginative realism.
2. His realistic imaginativeness.
3. His exquisiteness and brightness of fancies.
4. His allusive reading
5. His sacred verse.

1. His imaginative realism. I am thinking now of the fidelity with which he puts before you what he elects to

'sing' of. He can be as coarsely and offensively realistic as any be-praised Dutch 'interior' painter; and he is by no means fastidious in his choice of sight or theme. But at his best his realism is touched like the opal-edge of clouds just after sunset, with imagination. Look at his Primroses. They are not mere 'yellow primroses,' not even Wordsworth's interpenetrated with matter of direct ethical and spiritual teaching, but himself ageing, what a light of glory lies on them as 'fill'd with dew' they interpret the changefulness of human experiences. Let us read:—

“ To Primroses fill'd with morning-dew.

1. Why doe ye weep, sweet Babes? can Tears
 Speak grieffe in you,
 Who were but borne
 Just as the modest Morne
 Teem'd her refreshing dew?
 Alas, you have not known that shower,
 That marres a flower;
 Nor felt th'unkind
 Breath of a blasting wind;
 Nor are ye worne with years;
 Or warpt, as we,
 Who think it strange to see,
 Such pretty flowers, (like to Orphans young,)
 To speak by Teares, before ye have a Tongue.

2. Speak, whim'ring Younglings, and make known
 The reason, why
 Ye droop, and weep ;
 Is it for want of sleep ?
 Or Childish Lullabie ?
 Or that ye have not seen as yet
 The Violet ?
 Or brought a kisse
 From that Sweet-heart, to this ?
 No, no, this sorrow shown
 By your teares shed,
 Wo'd have this Lecture read,
 That things of greatest, so of meanest worth,
 Conceiv'd with grief are, and with teares brought forth."
 (Vol. I. pp. 181-2.)

Of the same type, but though worn through quotation, not nearly so fine as the 'Primroses' nor so original, is his "Gather ye Rose-buds while ye may."¹ This imaginativeness is absent from none of those Poems that give Herrick his peculiar place among the Poets of England ; and I call attention to it, because it is so common to take him at his lowly self-estimate, and look no deeper, e. g. thus, Mr. Gosse writes of Hesperides, as ¹ Mr. Robert Roberts, of Boston, has recently issued a delightful booklet yclept "Poesies of Roses" (8vo. pp. 22) wherein he has brought together several interesting variants on "Gather ye Roses." In Forbes' Cantus a poor answer to Herrick is found.

“songs, children of the West, brought forth in the soft, sweet air of Devonshire.” “The Poet,” says he, “strikes a key-note with wonderful sureness in the opening couplets of the opening poem :—

‘ I sing of brookes, of blossoms, birds and bowers,
Of April, May, of June, and July flowers.
I sing of maypoles, hock-carts, wassails, wakes,
Of bridegrooms, brides, and of their bridal cakes.’

It would not have been easy to describe more correctly what he does sing of. The book is full of all those pleasant things of spring and summer, full of young love, happy nature, and the joy of mere existence. As far as flowers are concerned, the atmosphere is full of them. One is pelted with roses and daffodils from every page, and no one dares enter the sacred precincts without a crown of blossoms on his hair. Herrick’s sun might be that stray Venus of Botticelli’s, which rises, rosy and dewy, from a sparkling sea, blown at by the little laughing winds, and showered upon with violets and lilies of no earthly growth. He tells us that for years and years his muse was content to stay at home, or, straying from village to village, to pipe to handsome young shepherds and girls of flower-sweet breath, but that at last she became ambitious to try her skill at Court, and so came into print in London. In other words, these little poems circulated widely in manuscript long before they were published" (p. 182). All true so far as it goes ; but beyond the 'simple sights' and transfiguring the humblest 'flowers,' there is a subtle light, sometimes pure as the white light, sometimes purpled ; and pensive thoughtfulness and tender meditativeness born of imagination—not an imagination grand as Dante's or Milton's, but of kin with Spenser in his 'gentle' mood, and infinitely above your modern word-painter whose realism is a bootless effort to transform the pen into a brush. It matters not what Herrick describes—he gives you its very "form and pressure," and over it, as the seven-fold rainbow breaking into ineffable fragments under its load of rain, or before the blast of the wind ; and better than saint's nimbus, you have the 'final touch' in epithet or in break of music, that differentiates the Poet from the Versifier. Even when it is the artificial—not nature—he sings of, there is this presence of the Poet's imaginativeness. Thus in his "Bracelet of Pearls : to Silvia," you have not only nicest and daintiest, not coarse workmanship, but the suggestion of a whole sphere of living romance, and that by one name linking on to the great Past. Again let us read :

“I Brake thy Bracelet ’gainst my will ;
 And, wretched, I did see Thee discomposèd then, and still
 Art discontent with me.

One jemme was lost ; and I will get
 A richer pearle for thee,
 Then ever, dearest Silvia, yet
 Was drunk to Antonie.

Or, for revenge, I’le tell thee what
 Thou for the breach shalt do ;
 First, crack the strings, and after that,
 Cleave thou my heart in two.”

(Vol. II. pp. 230-1.)

I do not deem it expedient to enlarge on this ; but if the Reader will turn to “A Country Life : to his Brother, M. Tho: Herrick” (Vol. I. pp. 57-64), and to “The Hock-Cart or Harvest-home, to the Earl of Westmoreland” (Vol. I. pp. 175-8), the former being on Horatian wings—one of Herrick’s best-sustained and noblest flights, and the latter deliciously fresh and vivid, and with a matchless flavour of dear old England—he will discover abundant evidence of that imaginativeness that suffuses his realism which I am now insisting upon. Then in his “Panegerick to Sir Lewis Pemberton” (Vol. II. p. 71) he will find the same speciality, and humour and vigour besides.

Finally here, "No one has ever known better than Herrick how to seize, without effort, and yet to absolute perfection, the pretty points of modern pastoral life. Of all these poems of his, none surpasses 'Corinna's going a-Maying,' which has something of Wordsworth's faultless instinct and delicate perception.¹ The picture given here of the slim boys and the girls in green gowns going out singing into the corridors of blossoming whitethorn, when the morning sky is radiant in all its 'fresh-quilted colours,' is ravishing, and can only be compared for its peculiar charm with that other where the maidens are seen at sunset, with silvery naked feet and dishevelled hair crowned with honeysuckle, bearing cowslips home in wicker baskets. Whoever will cast his eye over the pages of Hesperides will meet with myriads of original and charming passages of this kind :

' Like to a solemn sober stream
Bankt all with lilies, and the cream
Of sweetest cowslips filling them.'

the 'cream of cowslips' being the rich yellow antlers of water-lilies. Or thus, comparing a bride's breath to the faint, sweet odour of the earth :—

¹ I venture to add that Herrick's "Christian Militant" (Vol. II. p. 40) may take its place beside Wordsworth's "Happy Warrior."

‘ A savour like unto a blessed field
 When the bedabbled morn
 Washes the golden ears of corn.’

[I intercalate that in l. 1 the allusion is Biblical, viz. to Genesis xxvii. 27.] Or thus, a sketched interior :—

‘ Yet can thy humble roof maintain a choir
 Of singing crickets by the fire,
 And the brisk mouse may feed herself with crumbs,
 Till that the green-eyed kitling comes.’

“Nor did the homeliest details of the household escape him. At Dean Prior his clerical establishment consisted of Prudence Baldwin, his ancient maid ; of a cock and hen, a goose, a tame lamb, a cat, a spaniel, and a pet pig, learned enough to drink out of a tankard ; and not only did the genial Vicar divide his loving attention between the various members of this happy family, but he was wont, a little wantonly one fears, to gad about to wakes and wassailings, and to increase his popular reputation by showing off his marvellous learning in old rites and ceremonies. These he has described with loving minuteness, and not these only, but even the little acts of cookery do not escape him. Of all his household poems not one is more characteristic and complete than the ‘ Bride-cake,’ which we remember naving had recited to us years ago with immense gusto, at the making of a great pound cake, by a friend now widely enough known as a charming follower of Herrick's poetic craft :—

‘ The Bride-cake.

This day, my Julia, thou must make
 For Mistress Bride, the wedding cake ;
 Knead but the dough, and it will be
 To paste of almonds turned by thee,
 Or kiss it, but once or twice,
 And for the bride-cake there'll be spice.’ ”

(Mr. Gosse, as before, pp. 184-5.)

What a vision of Julia in her radiant beauty all rosy under such a compliment has the most prosaic reader in “The Bride-cake.” And so it is throughout. Not one of even the ‘household poems’ is without its touch of imaginative realism.

2. His realistic imaginativeness. I refer here mainly to his Poems of ‘Fairy,’ wherein you have not such thin bodiless Impersonations as in COLLINS’ Ode to the Passions, and even in Gray (if I may dare the heresy), but substantive and living. On this Mr. Gosse (as before) writes finely, though in one place mistakenly, as we shall see :—“ Before we turn to more general matters, there is one section of the Hesperides that demands a moment's attention, that namely, devoted to the description of Fairyland and its inhabitants. We have seen that it was, probably, the performance of Ben Jonson's pretty masque of 'Oberon' that set Herrick dreaming about that misty land where elves sit eating butterflies' horns round little mushroom tables, or quaff draughts

' Of pure seed-pearl of morning dew,
Brought and besweetened in a blue,
And pregnant Violet.'

And with him the poetic literature of Fairyland ended. He was its last laureate, for the Puritans thought its rites, though so shadowy, superstitious, and frowned upon their celebration, while the whole temper of the Restoration, gross and dandified at the same time, was foreign to such pure play of the imagination. But some of the greatest names of the great period had entered its sacred bounds and sung its praises. Shakespeare had done it eternal honour in Midsummer Night's Dream, and Drayton had written an elaborate epic (?) The Court of Faerie. Jonson's friend, Bishop Corbet, had composed fairy ballads that had much of Herrick's lightness about them. It was these literary traditions that Herrick carried with him into the West ; it does not seem that he collected any fresh information about the mushroom world in Devonshire ; we read nothing of river-wraiths or pixies in his poems. He adds, however, a great deal of ingenious fancy to the stores he received from his elders, and his fairy-poems, all written in octo-syllabic verse, as though forming parts of one projected work, may be read with great interest as a kind of final compendium of all that the poets of the 17th century imagined about fairies" (pp. 186).

Mr. Gosse is again strangely wrong as to the source of Herrick's 'Fairy' poems. Misled by the title—and the mere title or one word 'Oberon' never could suggest such poems—he assigns to Jonson his inspiration. But Jonson's 'Oberon' has nothing whatever on Fairies or Fairy-land ; nor indeed were such dainty things at all in his way. One is indeed puzzled at the absence of the 'Fairies' in 'Oberon' until it is found that Jonson's 'Oberon' is a prince of sixteen. Herrick's splendid praise of 'Rare Ben' and occasional touches, as in his "Delight in Disorder" (Vol. I. 46) assure us that he was his willing subject ; but in not one bit could he have been indebted to him for his 'Fairy' creations. For them it is a pleasure to think of Drayton's Nymphidia and Shakespeare's Midsummer's Night Dream and

Romeo and Juliet. Thither and not at all in Jonson's spectacular 'Oberon' must we look for Herrick's preparative reading and impress.¹

Let the reader turn and return on these 'Fairy' poems. Let him note their quaintness, their apt names, their sly humour, their fantastique of exploit, their oddity of invention, their drollery of feasting, their jets of tricky wit, their quizzical hitting of modern foibles through superstitious rites (the Poet's pen transfixing the vinegar-faced fool as with a needle), their ripple of soft laughter, their swift changefulness (as of peacock's crest, or humming-bird's breast, or dove's neck), their ingenuous credulities. I know not that anywhere we can turn to Poems of Imagination so 'compact,' and at the same time so airy, so real-seeming and yet of subtlest imagination. It is well to read the whole group successively but together, viz. "The Fairie Temple; or Oberon's Chappell" (Vol. I. pp. 156-163), and "Oberon's Feast" (Vol. II. pp. 24-27), and "Oberon's Palace" (Vol. II. pp. 104-9), and "The Beggar" (Vol. II. pp. 202-3), and "The Hagg" (Vol. II. pp. 205-6).²

¹ See before on Herrick's reading of Marlowe and Greene and Shirley.

² Even in Thomas Randolph's Amyntas (1638) there are oddi-

His "Epithalamiums" and other marriage and birthday poems have the same speciality of realistic imaginativeness. You have the actual 'fair ladies' and 'brave men,' but there is a splendour of imagination prodigally lavished on the use and wont of 'good wishes.' Of the Epithalamiums Mr. Gosse thus speaks:—"The epithalamium is a form of verse which had a very bright period of existence in England, and which has long been completely extinct. [Revived gorgeously by Dante G. Rossetti, as in a quieter way by Coventry Patmore earlier.] Its theme and manner gave too much opportunity to lavish adulation on the one hand, and unseemly inuendo on the other, to suit the preciser manners of our more reticent age, but it flourished for the brief period contained between 1600 and 1650, and produced some exquisite masterpieces. The 'Epithalamium' and 'Prothalamion' of Spenser struck the keynote of a fashion that Drayton, Ben Jonson, [Donne] and ties of 'Fairy' possessions that might have been admitted into "Oberon's Palace," e.g.:—

Do. A curious Parke.

Pal'd round about with Pick-teeth.

Io. Besides a house made all of mother of Pearle;

An Ivory Tenniscourt.

Dor. A nut-meg Parlour.

Io. A Saphyre dary-roome.

Dor. A Ginger Hall." (1640 ed. p. 34.)

others adorned, and of which Herrick was the last, and far from the least ardent votary. His confidential muse was delighted at being asked in to arrange the ceremonies of a nuptial feast, and described the bride and her surroundings with a world of pretty extravagance. Every admirer of Herrick should read the 'Nuptial Ode on Sir Clipsey Crew and his Lady.' It is admirably fanciful, and put together with consummate skill. It opens with a choral out-burst of greeting to the bride :—

‘What’s that we see from far? the spring of day
Bloom’d from the east, or fair jewelled May Blown out of April? or some new Star filled with glory to our view
Reaching at heaven,
To add a nobler planet to the seven?’

Less and less dazzled, he declares her to be some goddess floating out of Elysium in a cloud of tiffany. He leaves the church treading upon scarlet and amber, and spicing the chafed air with fumes of Paradise. Then they watch her coming towards them down the shining street, whose very pavement breathes out spikenard. But who is this that meets her? Hymen with his fair white feet, and head with marjoram.

crowned, who lifts his torch, and, behold ! by his side the bridegroom stands, flushed and ardent. Then the maids shower them with shamrock and roses, and so the dreamy verses totter under their load of perfumed words, till they close with a benediction over the new married couple, and a peal of maiden laughter over love and its flower-like mysteries" (p. 186). Fit companion for the Clipseby Crew "Nuptial Ode" is the "Epithalamie to Sir Thomas Southwell and his Ladie" (Vol. I. pp. 90-99) which holds its own even beside Donne's.

Another group of Poems that illustrate his realistic imaginativeness is what may be called his verse-gifts—of which he must have been lavish—to friends and neighbours. These were evidently flung off at the moment ; but the most careless (as a rule) reveal the inspired Singer. His celebrations of his own numerous family of brothers and sisters—his guardian-uncle, Sir William Herrick, notably absent, as the old ' curmudgeon ' (Scotice) deserved—and his mother's circle of relatives and kinsmen, are charming. Among the former, as though to favour the Poet, was his sweet-named sister ' Mercy.' Among the latter, men of mark in the ' city ' and State, and otherwise—as the Soames and Stones and the like. A careful study of these will reward, for they will be found not exaggerate, but true, imaginative, but realistic. I should scarcely know where to hold my hand if I began quotation from these Poems. I therefore will not begin ; but I cannot withhold his own favourite, his "Lilly in a Christal," which in various ways still further exemplifies the present speciality. In this instance the Poet was not as so often wrong in his high and preferring estimate.

"The Lilly in a Christal.

You have beheld a smiling Rose
 When Virgins hands have drawn
 O'r it a Cobweb-Lawne :
 And here, you see, this Lilly shows,
 Tomb'd in a Christal stone,
 More faire in this transparent case,
 Then when it grew alone ; [than
 And had but single grace.

You see how Creame but naked is ;
 Nor daunces in the eye
 Without a Strawberrie :
 Or some fine tincture, like to this,
 Which draws the sight thereto,
 More by that wantoning with it ;
 Then when the paler hieu [than
 No mixture did admit.

You see how Amber through the streams
More gently stroaks the sight,
With some conceal'd delight ;
Then when he darts his radiant beams
Into the boundlesse aire :
Where either too much light, his worth
Doth all at once impaire,
Or set it little forth.

Put Purple grapes, or Cherries in-
To Glasse, and they will send
More beauty to commend
Them, from that cleane and subtile skin,
Then if they naked stood, [than
And had no other pride at all,
But their own flesh and blood,
And tinctures naturall.

Thus Lillie, Rose, Grape, Cherry, Creame,
And Straw-berry do stir
More love, when they transfer
A weak, a soft, a broken beame ;
Then if they sho'd discover [than
At full their proper excellence ;
Without some Scean cast over,
To juggle with the sense.

Thus let this Christal'd Lillie be
A Rule, how far to teach,
Your nakednesse must reach :
And that, no further, then we see

Those glaring colours laid
 By Arts wise hand, but to this end
 They sho'd obey a shade ;
 Lest they too far extend.

So though y'are white as Swan, or Snow,
 And have the power to move
 A world of men to love :
 Yet, when your Lawns & Silks shal flow ;
 And that white cloud divide
 Into a doubtful Twi-light ; then,
 Then will your hidden Pride
 Raise greater fires in men."

(Vol. I. p. 129-31.)

I must content myself with two other examples of his realistic imaginativeness as distinguished from his imaginative realism—a distinction that it may be assumed will be admitted after our remarks and illustrations—namely, his "Amber Bead" and "Upon her Feet." Take them both :—

"The Amber Bead.

I saw a Flie, within a Beade
 Of Amber cleanly burièd :
 The Urne was little, but the room
 More rich then Cleopatra's Tombe." [than

(Vol. II. p. 280.)

One does not think so much, on reading this little snatch, of Martial and his epigram (Book IV. 32) which is elsewhere recalled by Herrick himself ("Upon a Flie": Vol. II. p. 140) as of the lines attributed to no less than Milton in our day by Professor Morley. For my part I cannot accept the illustrious authorship; but it is interesting to find an echo of our Poet in its close, as thus:—

“For so this little wanton elf
Most gloriously enshrined itself:—
A tomb whose beauty might compare
With Cleopatra’s sepulchre.”

Perhaps Martial was the source common to each, viz. his ‘Viper in Amber’ (B. IV. 56); and the point is, that the renowned Queen Cleopatra died by a ‘viper’ (Shakespeare’s ‘worm’) and had a tomb (with Anthony) finished by Augustus, that long remained a world’s wonder.¹ Now for

¹ In respect to the viper, Paley and Stone observe: “This must be taken as a poetic hyperbole for some small creeping thing. The point of the epigram, indeed, turns on its being a real snake; but this is hardly possible. The ancients were aware of the true nature of amber. See Pliny.” These excellent scholars are mistaken. A piece of amber has been found in Jutland that weighed twenty-seven pounds; and in the Royal Mineral Cabinet at Berlin

Upon her feet.

“ Her pretty feet
 Like snails did creep
 A little out, and then,
 As if they started at Bo-Beep,
 Did soon draw in agen.” (Vol. II. p. 153.)

I must pronounce this as truer and finelier wrought than Sir John Suckling's every-where-known comparison to mice, thus :—

“ Her feet beneath her petticoat,
 Like little mice, stole in and out,
 As if they feared the light :
 But oh ! she dances such a way
 No sun upon an Easter day
 Is half so fine a sight.”

It was daring in Herrick to write down what he himself had really seen, the quick movement—as of insects antennæ—of the snail's ‘horns’ if in the slightest touched, whether by a hindering ‘bent’ or falling dewis another piece weighing $13\frac{1}{2}$ pounds. It is $13\frac{3}{4}$ inches long, $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches broad, 5 inches and five-eighths high on the one side, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches on the other. Similar large pieces of gum-copal, with insects, &c., imbedded, are found in Africa. See Livingstone's “Last Journals,” I. pp. 29, 182.

drop, or sound of human voice—for self-evidently that was what the Poet had in recollection. I feel perfectly satisfied that it originated with our Poet's actual observation, and independent of Suckling's ballad, albeit none would more relish the famous ballad when it reached him, along with his own poems, in "Wit's Recreations" of 1640. The fact of prior publication (not necessarily prior composition) of the "Wedding," and nevertheless "Upon her feet" being given in Hesperides, assures us that Herrick knew his own originality. You have only to get over the association with the word and thing 'snail,' and stoop to see the strange beauty of the little creature, ay, even in its track as it innocently 'creeps' along glisteningly, and, above all, its human-eye-like sensitiveness to touch or sound, to clap hands over Herrick's unique comparison of the 'pretty feet' of "Mistresse Susanna Southwell."

3. His exquisiteness and brightness of fancy. These are such specialities of Herrick's Poems that no one can miss them—unless, like a blind man trampling over flowers, he is eyeless and earless, and heartless as well. His many Epitaphs and Memorial-verses first of all, strike us for their delicacy and tenderness, in short, for their unsurpassed exquisiteness. As less known than others, I ask the Reader to dwell on this:—

“ An Epitaph upon a Virgin.

Here a solemne Fast we keepe,
 While all beauty lyes asleep
 Husht be all things; no noyse here,
 But the toning of a teare :
 Or a sigh of such as bring Cowslips for her covering.” (Vol. II. p. 113.)

Then how dainty and subtle and original-fancied is his “Impossibilities to his Friend,” as thus :—

“ My faithful friend, if you can see
 The Fruit to grow up, or the Tree :
 If you can see the colour come
 Into the blushing Peare, or Plum :
 If you can see the water grow
 To cakes of Ice, or flakes of Snow :
 If you can see, that drop of raine
 Lost in the wild sea, once againe :
 If you can see, how Dreams do creep
 Into the Brain by easie sleep :
 Then there is hope that you may see
 Her love me once, who now hates me.”

(Vol. I. p. 137.)

The conclusion is somewhat de trop, but the imagery for the ‘impossibilities,’ of the ‘colour’ coming into the plum, of the ‘ice,’ and of ‘dreams,’ seems to me super-lately fine. Horace has nothing to equal, much less surpass, "His Poetrie his Pillar." The light-hearted Latin poet knew little of the pathos of this unsurpassable little Poem, if his shout of 'exegi' tell us he had the Poet's lofty self-estimate. Let the Reader again 'dwell' on this, and mark the exquisiteness of the opening, and how the softness dilates into strength and gives us a glimpse of Egypt and its thousands-year'd 'pyramids.'

" His Poetrie his Pillar.

Onely a little more
I have to write,
Then Ile give o're,
And bid the world Good-night.

'Tis but a flying minute,
That I must stay,
Or linger in it ;
And then I must away.

O time that cut'st down all !
And scarce leav'st here
Memoriall
Of any men that were.

How many lye forgot
In Vaults beneath ?
And piece-meale rot
Without a fame in death ?

Behold this living stone,
 I reare for me,
 Ne'r to be thrown
 Downe, envious Time by thee.

Pillars let some set up,
 (If so they please)
 Here is my hope,
 And my Pyramides." (Vol. I. p. 146.)

Of the same in kind and in elements as exquisitely done as "His Poetrie His Pillar," and reminding us that he should scarce have thanked his kinsman for the erection of the recent great monument, but have preferred a yew or beech to have flung their greenness and dropped their cones and nuts in season over his grave, is his

"To Laurels.

A funerall stone,
 Or Verse I covet none,
 But onely crave
 Of you, that I may have
 A sacred Laurel springing from my grave :
 Which being seen,
 Blest with perpetuall greene,
 May grow to be
 Not so much call'd a tree,
 As the eternall monument of me." (Vol. I. p. 50.)

It were easy to multiply examples and proofs of his exquisiteness of thinking and feeling and workmanship. I can only tarry to illustrate his brightness of fancy as in combination with his exquisiteness. Even when he is pensive and ‘melancholy,’ there is this colour and brightness. I invite the Student to read and re-read this :—

“To Blossoms.

Faire pledges of a fruitfull Tree,
Why do yee fall so fast ?” &c.

(Vol. II. p. 124.)

Homelier—as was fitting—but all radiant with the glow of gratitude that burned in his ‘thankful heart,’ is his “Thanksgiving to God, for his home,” wherein too there are touches of exquisite perfectness, and the whole such a poem as inevitably makes us love even to-day the genial old Vicar in his lowly contentment and open-handed bounty. Here it is:—

“Lord, Thou hast given me a cell
Wherein to dwell,” &c.

(Vol. III. pp. 135-8.)

Next take his peerless “To Daffodils,” than which surely there is no flower-poem at once so weighty and so sweet, so lovely and also impressive, consummate in its art and enduring in its charm :—

“ To Daffadills. ”

1. Faire Daffadills, we weep to see
 You haste away so soone :
 As yet the early-rising Sun
 Has not attain'd his Noone.
 Stay, stay,
 Untill the hasting day
 Has run
 But to the Even-song ;
 And, having pray'd together, we
 Will go with you along.

2. We have short time to stay, as you,
 We have as short a Spring ;
 As quick a growth to meet Decay,
 As you, or any thing.
 We die,
 As your hours doe, and drie
 Away,
 Like to the Summers raine ;
 Or as the pearles of Mornings dew
 Ne'r to be found againe.”

(Vol. II. p. 35.)

Finally : There is his “ To Anthea ”—one of various to this ‘ fair lady,’ which, starting from the mere grass as starts the lark, lifts us up like the lark into the blinding summer sky, and fills even that vast cathedral with melody :—

“To Anthea, who may command him any thing.

Bid me to live, and I will live
Thy Protestant to be :
Or bid me love, and I will give
A loving heart to thee.

A heart as soft, a heart as kind,
A heart as sound and free,
As in the whole world thou canst find,
That heart Ile give to thee.

Bid that heart stay, and it will stay,
To honour thy Decree :
Or bid it languish quite away,
And't shall doe so for thee.

Bid me to weep, and I will weep,
While I have eyes to see :
And having none, yet I will keep
A heart to weep for thee.

Bid me despaire, and Ile despaire,
Under that Cypresse tree :
Or bid me die, and I will dare
E'en Death, to die for thee.

Thou art my life, my love, my heart,
The very eyes of me :
And hast command of every part,
To live and die for thee." (Vol. II. pp. 6-7.)

As distinguished from complete Poems, there are lavishly scattered over Hesperides lines and couplets and bits that equally show Herrick's exquisiteness and brightness. Two recur on the instant. The first is of Tears—"Teares are the noble language of the eye" (Vol. I. p. 100). The other I will quote because a parallel in a Master of his art, our living Poet-Laureate,—who by the way, in our occasional foot-notes, is seen to have studied Herrick appreciatively—is a typical instance of the ancient Poet's still more exquisite instinct in his choice of words. In his lines "To Dianeme" he thus sang :—

"If thou compos'd of gentle mould
Art so unkind to me ;
What dismall Stories will be told
Of those that cruell be ?" (Vol. II. p. 285.)

Compare Tennyson :—

"Gently comes the world to those That are cast in gentle mould."

Surely 'cast' here completely spoils the idea? And so everywhere, nearly, you come on unexpected felicities, as Mr. Gosse thus admirably and weightily, and with fine insight sums up:—"We have now rapidly concluded the two volumes on which Herrick claims his place among the best English lyrical poets. Had he written twenty instead of two, he could not have impressed his strong poetic individuality more powerfully on our literature than he has done in the Hesperides. It is a storehouse of lovely things, full of tiny beauties of varied kind and workmanship, like a box full of all sorts of jewels, ropes of seed pearl, opals set in old-fashioned shifting settings, antique gilt trifles sadly tarnished by time, here a ruby, here an amethyst, and there a shiny diamond, priceless and luminous, flashing light from all its facets, and dulling the faded jewellery with which it is so promiscuously huddled. What is so very precious about the book is the originality and versatility of the versification. There is nothing too fantastic for the author to attempt, at least; there is one poem written in rhyming triplets, each line having only two syllables [Vol. II. p. 127]. There are clear little trills of sudden song, like the lines to the "Lark"; there are chance melodies that seem like mere wantonings of the air upon a wind-harp; there are such harmonious endings, as this, 'To Music':—

' Fall on me like a silent dew,
Or like those maiden showers
Which, by the peep of day, do show
A baptism o'er the flowers.
Melt, melt my pains
With thy soft strains,
That, having ease me given,
With full delight
I leave this light
And take my flight
For heaven.'

With such poems as these, and with the delicious songs of so many of Herrick's predecessors and compeers before them, it is inexplicable upon what possible grounds the critics of the eighteenth century can have founded their astonishing dogma, that the first master of English versification was Edmund Waller, whose poems, appearing some fifteen years after the Hesperides, are chiefly remarkable for their stiff and pedantic movement, and the brazen clang, as of stage armour, of the dreary heroic couplets in which they shut. Where Waller is not stilted, he owes his excellence to the very source from which the earlier lyrists took theirs—a study of nature and a free but not licentious use of pure

English. But not one of his poems, except 'Go, lovely Rose,' is worth the slightest of those delicate warbles that Herrick piped out when the sun shone on him, and the flowers were fresh" (p. 189). C

4. His allusive reading. I prefer 'reading' to 'learning'; for there are proofs that 'learning' was not Herrick's forte. His career at the University was probably too much interrupted by 'escapes' to town and mingling with the gatherings of which Ben Jonson was sovereign, to admit of steady and full acquirements such as a College furnishes. The most that can be said is that he was fairly well-read in the Greek and Roman classics, and some of the Fathers—nothing more. But his miscellaneous reading must have been of the type of Robert Burton's or Thomas Fuller's. In his "To Live Merrily" (Vol. I. p. 138) we have a vivid enumeration of the ancient Poets he loved; and I give it here in full that there may follow on it Mr. Gosse's remarks on his obligation to the classics:—

"To live merrily, and to trust to Good Verses.

Now is the time for mirth,
Nor cheek, or tongue be dumbe :
For with the flowrie earth,
The golden pomp is come.

The golden Pomp is come ;
For now each tree do's weare
(Made of her Pap and Gum)
Rich beads of Amber here.

Now raignes the Rose, and now
Th' Arabian Dew besmeares
My uncontrollèd brow,
And my retortèd haire.

Homer, this Health to thee,
In Sack of such a kind,
That it wo'd make thee see,
Though thou wert ne'r so blind.

Next, Virgil, Ile call forth,
To pledge this second Health
In Wine, whose each cup's worth
An Indian Common-wealth.

A Goblet next Ile drink
To Ovid ; and suppose,
Made he the pledge, he'd think
The world had all one Nose.

Then this immense cup
Of Aromatike wine,
Catullus, I quaffe up
To that Terce Muse of thine.

Wild I am now with heat ;
O Bacchus ! coole thy Raies !
Or frantick I shall eate
Thy Thyrse, and bite the Bayes.

Round, round, the roof do's run ;
And being ravisht thus,
Come, I will drink a Tun
To my Propertius.

Now, to Tibullus, next,
This flood I drink to thee :
But stay ; I see a Text,
That this presents to me.

Behold, Tibullus lies
Here burnt, whose smal return
Of ashes, scarce suffice
To fill a little Urne.

Trust to good Verses then ;
They onely will aspire,
When Pyramids, as men,
Are lost, i'th'funerall fire.

And when all Bodies meet
In Lethe to be drown'd ;
Then onely Numbers sweet,
With endless life are crown'd."

(Vol. I. pp. 138-41.)

With this in recollection, Mr. Gosse (as before) writes :—“ It is an interesting speculation to consider from what antique sources Herrick, athirst for the pure springs of pagan beauty, drank the deep draughts of his inspiration. Ben Jonson it was, beyond doubt, who first introduced him to the classics, but his mode of accepting the ideas he found there, was wholly his own. In the first place, one must contradict a foolish statement that all the editors of Herrick have repeated, sheep-like from one another, namely, that Catullus was his great example and model. In the last edition of the Hesperides I find the same old blunder : ‘ There is no collection of poetry in our language which more nearly resembles the Carmina of Catullus.’ In reality, it would be difficult to name a lyric poet with whom he has less in common than with the Veronese, whose eagle-flights into the very noonday-depths of passion, swifter than Shelley’s, as flaming as Sappho’s, have no sort of fellowship with the pipings of our gentle and luxurious babbler by the flowery brooks. In one of his poems, ‘ To Live Merrily,’ where he addresses the various classical poets, and where, by the way, he tries to work himself into a great exaltation about Catullus, he does not even mention the one that he really took most from of form and colour. No one carefully reading the Hesperides can fail to be struck with the extraordinary similarity they bear to the Epigrams of Martial, and the parallel will be found to run throughout the writings of the two poets, for good and for bad, the difference being that Herrick is as much a rural as Martial an urban poet. But in the incessant references to himself and his book, the fondness for gums and spices, the delight in the picturesqueness of private life, the art of making a complete and gem-like poem in the fewest possible lines, the curious mixture of sensitiveness and utter want of sensibility, the trick of writing confidential little poems to all sorts of friends, the tastelessness that mixes up obscene couplets with delicate odes 'De Hortis Martialis' or 'To Anthea'; in all those and many more qualities one can hardly tell where to look for a literary parallel more complete. As far as I know, Herrick mentions Martial but once, and then very slightly. He was fond of talking about the old poets in his verse, but never with any critical cleverness. The best thing he says about any of them is said of Ovid in a pretty couplet. In a dream he sees Ovid lying at the feet of Corinna, who presses

With ivory wrists his laureate head, and steeps
His eyes in dew of kisses while he sleeps.

How much further Herrick's learning proceeded it is difficult to tell. Doubtless he knew some Greek ; he mentions Homer and translates from Anacreon. The English poets of that age, learned as many of them were, do not seem to have gone much further than Rome for their inspiration. Chapman is, of course, a great exception. But none of them, as all the great French poets of the Renaissance, went directly to the Anthology. Perhaps Herrick had read the Planudian Anthology, Theocritus and Anacreon. The little piece called 'Leander's Obsequies' seems as though it must be a translation of the epigram of Antipater of Thessalonica. Curious to reflect that at the very time that the Hesperides was printed, Salmasius, soon to be hunted to death by the implacable hatred of Milton, [?] was carrying about with him in his restless wanderings the MS. of his great discovery, the inestimable Anthology of Constantine Cephalas. One imagines with what sympathetic brotherliness the Vicar of Dean Prior would have gossiped and glowed over the new storehouse of Greek song. That the French poets of the century before were known to Herrick is to me extremely doubtful. One feels how much there was in such a book as La Bergerie of Remy Belleau, in which our poet would have felt the most unfeigned delight, but I find no distinct traces of their style in his; and unless the Parisian editions of the classics influenced him, I cannot think that he brought any honey, poisonous or other, from France. His inspiration was Latin; that of Ronsard and Jodelle essentially Greek. It was the publication of the Anthology in 1531, and of Henry Estienne's Anacreon in 1554, that really set the Pleiad in movement, and founded l'école gallo-grecque. It was the translation of Ovid, Lucan, Seneca, and Virgil that gave English Elizabethan poetry the startword."

(pp. 189-91.)

I fear I must repeat the (alleged) "foolish statement" of my editorial predecessors as to Herrick's indebtedness to Catullus. The foot-notes go to show frequent reminiscences and adaptations of the poet of Verona ('adopted' is his own word); and without traversing the high praise of his "eagle flights" and "very noonday-depths of passion, swifter than Shelley's, as flaming as Sappho's," it has been shown earlier that there was infinitely more of passion in our Poet than is ordinarily supposed, and than is supposed by Mr. Gosse, so that it is, I humbly think, a mistake to generalize on the "pipings of our gentle and luxurious babbler by the flowery brooks." The Carmina of Catullus, alike in their lyrical fervour and intensity, find more than "fellowship" in much of the Hesperides. Certes for once that Martial is suggested, Catullus is three times. More than this—it is in the offensive Epigrams that had better been spared bodily that Herrick goes to Martial. Startled by Mr. Gosse's paradox, I have taken pains to re-read good old Farnaby's natty edition of the Epigrammata, and my original impression has been confirmed that, except in instances of all but direct translation, and almost wholly in the unsavoury Epigrams, Martial exercised but slight influence, and all of it, unhappily, sinister. On the other hand, there are in Hesperides notable indebtedness to Catullus in what is most imperishable, e.g. "To Anthea" (in first eight lines : Vol. I. p. 40) : "Kissing Usurie" (Vol. I. p. 49) : "The Vision" (ibid, p. 86) : "Epithalamie to Sir Thomas Southwell and his Ladie" (ibid, p. 90-9, et alibi) : "Corinna going a Maying" (ibid, p. 116) : "An Ode to Master Endymion Porter upon his Brothers death" (ibid, p. 124) : "Lips Tongueless" (ibid, pp. 141-2) : "A request to the Graces" (Vol. III. p. 13). Besides these specific places, the student will again and again catch the notes of the Carmina, often the more assuredly from the peculiar turn given to the thought or image. Apart from the Epigrams, which one must constantly remember are the mere "farcing buckram" of the Book, five or six faint echoes of Martial seem to me to sum up Herrick's obligations to him.¹

'Allusive reading' rather than assimilative is what I discover in Herrick's Poems. Certain of his words and turns of phrase make you think of others, and others keep ringing in your memory as you read; but when you recall them, you begin to suspect coincidence rather than knowledge, and o' times are amused to find that Herrick is the precursor not follower. It may interest to give a few examples. In the place I have quoted Milton in

¹ Including those in the Index of Names, the following it is believed give references to every Epigram in Martial to which in the slightest way Herrick alludes; most are very slightly indeed remembered: B. I, The Author to his Book (3), To Cæsar (4), To Decianus (8), To Julius (15), To Aelia (19), To Flaccus (57), Of Mannea (83): B. II, To Postumus (10)—perhaps the name of Wickes ('Posthumus') was taken from this and others kindred; To Pannicus (36), To Cæcilianus (37), To Olus (68), To Quintilian (90): B. III, On Sabdidus (17): B. IV, On Cleopatra his wife (22), To Domitian (27), To Hippodamus (31), On a Bee enclosed in Amber (59): B. V, To his Readers (2), To Regulus (10): B. VI, To Marcianus (70): B. VII, To his Book (84), On Papius (94): B. VIII, To a friend (14): B. XI, To his Readers (16): B. XIII—occasional dishes are recalled. The fingers of a single hand will sum up actual indebtedness to Martial. Catullus and Horace and Anacreon furnish a much more pervading element.

“When I thy singing next shall heare
Ile wish I might turne all to eare.” (Vol. I., p. 38.)

Hook's Amanda—a sorry affair as a whole, but with some few glorious things in it—has the same odd fancy :—

“Sing on sweet Chauntresse soul of melodie ;
Closely attentive to thy harmonie :
The Heavens check't and stop't their rumbling spheres,
And all the world turn'd itself into eares.” (p. 19.)

Nothing could be more unhappy than ‘rumbling’ applied to the great silent ‘spheres,’ and there is a dash of the grotesque in the huge impersonation of ‘the world’—“turn'd into eares.” Still, the idea is there, and as Hook's Poems circulated long in Manuscript, it is quite possible it was original to him. William Cartwright in his “Young Lord to his Mistress who had taught him a Song,” has it also :—

“Whose Sounds do make me wish I were Either all Voice, or else all Eare.”

(Poems 16, p. 208.)

The conceit in "Electra's Tears," that from them sprang sweet flowers, is frequent before and after. None has used it with more graciousness than SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, as thus :—

" My Grave with Flowers let Virgins strow ;
Which, if thy Teares fall near them,
May so transcend in Scent and Show,
As thou wilt shortly weare them.

Such Flowers how much will Florists prize,
Which on a Lover growing,
Are water'd with his Mistress eyes,
With pity ever flowing.
A Grave so deckt, will, though thou art
Yet fearful to come nie me.
Provoke thee straite to break thy heart,
And lie down boldly by me.

Then ev'ry where all Bells shall ring,
All Light to Darkness turning,
Whilst ev'ry Quire shall sadly sing,
And Natures self weare mourning.
Yet we hereafter may be found,
By destinies right placing,
Making, like Flowers, Love under Ground,
Whose Rootes are still embracing."

(Works folio p. 318.)

In the lines "To Oenone" we have this appeal :—

"For shame or pitty now encline,
To play a loving part ;
Either to send me kindly thine,
Or give me back my heart."

(Vol. II. p. III.)

Compare this with SIR JOHN SUCKLING (Remains : 1659, p. 6) :—

"I prethee send me back my heart,
Since I can not have thine :
For if from yours you will not part,
Why then should'st thou have mine ?"

His "Dreame" (Vol. II., p. 84) is of a slighter build than Cartwright's, as thus:—

"I dream'd I saw my self lye dead,
And that my bed my coffin grew :
Silence and Sleep this strange sight bred,
But wak'd I found I liv'd anew.
Looking next morn on your bright face,
Mine Eyes bequeath'd mine Heart fresh pain,
A Dart rush'd in with every Grace,
And so I kill'd my self again :
O Eyes, what shall distressèd Lovers do
If open you can kill, if shut you view."

(Poems, as before, p. 213.)

Again, "Upon Electra" :—

"When out of bed my love doth spring,

'Tis but as day a-kindling :

But when she's up and fully drest,

'Tis then broad Day throughout the East."

(Vol. II., p. 86.)

I am willing to believe that Herrick may have thought here of Chaucer :—

"Up roos the sonne, and up rose Emelye."

(Knight's Tale : Vol. I., p. 163, Bell.)

Or Davenant again :—

"Awake, awake, break through your Vailes of Lawne !

Then draw your Curtains and begin the Dawne."

(As before, p. 320.)

Daintier than all is Spenser's Una, who "made a sunshine in a shady place" (F.Q. b.I. c. 3). Herrick's, as Sidney's "bean blossoms" and their rich fragrance is one of several like favourites in the Hesperides. So too Suckling addressing Herrick's Countess of Carlisle, as did Cartwright and Waller and others, sings :—

"Didst thou not find the place inspir'd,

And flow'rs as if they had desir'd

No other Sun, start from their beds,
 And for a sight steal out their heads ?
 Heardst thou not musick when she talk't ?
 And didst not find that as she walkt
 She threw rare perfumes all about
 Such as bean-blossoms newly out.
 Or chafèd spices give ?——

“ Upon my Lady Carliles walking in Hampton Court Garden.” (1646, p. 26.)

The “ Apron of Flowers ” (Vol. II., p. 249) has a fine parallel in a Poet who is too little known, Thomas Stanley, as thus :—

“ Favonius the milder breath o' th' Spring,
 When proudly bearing on his softer wing
 Rich odours, which from the Panchean groves
 He steals, as by the Phenix pyre he moves,
 Profusely doth his sweeter theft dispencc
 To the next Roses blushing innocence,
 But from the grateful Flower, a richer scent
 He back receives then he unto it lent.
 Then laden with his odours richest store,
 He to thy Breath hasts ! to which these are poor ;
 Which whilst the amorous wind to steal essaies,
 He, like a wanton Lover 'bout thee playes, &c.”

(Poems 1651, p. 6.)

It were easy to add almost ad infinitum to such parallels. They practically leave Herrick's originality untouched. Of his anticipations of later Poets the most noteworthy are these two :—

“ A good death.

For truth I may this sentence tell
No man dies ill, that liveth well.”

(Vol. III. p. 66.)

and

“ Sins loath'd, and yet lov'd.

Shame checks our first attempts ; but then 'tis prov'd,
Sins first dislik'd, are after that belov'd.”

(Vol. III. p. 156.)

The first has been re-written by Pope, thus :—

“ For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight ;
He can't be wrong whose life is in the right.”

(Essay on Man, ep. iii. l. 305.)¹

The second also by him, thus :—

“ Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated, needs but to be seen ;
Yet, seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.”

(Essay on Man, ep. ii. l. 217.)

¹ Better still Cowley on Crashaw :—

“ His faith, perhaps, in some nice tenets might Be wrong ; his life, I'm sure was in the right.”

Finally here, if the Reader will turn to "The Country Life" (Vol. II. pp. 212-15) and then to "L'Allegro," I shall be indeed mistaken if it be not conceded that Milton remembered it to advantage therein.

5. His Sacred Verse. I am aware that it is usual to regard Noble Numbers as an infinite falling off from Hesperides; nor would I dispute the verdict on his Sacred Verse, taken as a whole. None the less is it true that there are things in Noble Numbers that only a man of unique genius could have written. Dr. George Macdonald, in "Antiphon," seems to me to hold the scales evenly, and to bring out specialities worth bringing out. It is a joy to let such a Critic speak for one, as thus (not omitting repetitions of prior given facts):—"We now come to a new sort, both of man and poet—still a clergyman. It is an especial pleasure to write the name of Robert Herrick among the poets of religion, for the very act records that the jolly careless Anacreon of the church, with his head and heart crowded with pleasures, threw down at length his wine-cup, tore the roses from his head, and knelt in the dust.

"Nothing bears Herrick's name so unrefined as the things Dr. Donne wrote in his youth; but the impression made by his earlier poems is of a man of far shallower nature, and greatly more absorbed in the delights of the passing hour. In the year 1648, when he was fifty-seven years of age, being prominent as a Royalist, he was ejected from his living by the dominant Puritans; and in that same year he published his poems, of which the latter part and later written is his Noble Numbers, or religious poems. We may wonder at his publishing the Hesperides along with them, but we must not forget that, while the manners of a time are never to be taken as a justification of what is wrong, the judgment of man concerning what is wrong will be greatly influenced by those manners—not necessarily on the side of laxity. It is but fair to receive his own testimony concerning himself, offered in these two lines printed at the close of his Hesperides :

‘To his Book’s end this last line he’d have plac’t,
Jocond his Muse was, but his Life was chast.’¹

¹ Herrick no doubt was thinking of Ovid (Trist. II. 353-4).

Crede mihi, mores distant a carmina nostri;

Vita veracunda est, Musa jocosa, mihi;”

and also perhaps of Martial (I. v.) “Lasciva est nobis pagina, vita proba est.” Cartwright was severe on the Poet’s apology—for certainly it was intended—when he wrote of Jonson:—“No need to make good count’nance Ill, and use the plea of strict life for a looser muse” (Poems, as before, p. 314).

“We find the same artist in the Noble Numbers as in the Hesperides, but hardly the same man. However far he may have been from the model of a clergyman in the earlier period of his history, partly, no doubt, from the society to which his power of song made him acceptable, I cannot believe that these later poems are the results of mood, still less the result of mere professional bias, or even sense of professional duty.

“In a good many of his poems he touches the heart of truth ; in others, even those of epigrammatic form, he must be allowed to fail in point as well as in meaning. As to his art-forms, he is guilty of great offences, the result of the same passion for lawless figures and similitudes which Dr. Donne so freely indulged. But his verses are brightened by a certain almost childishly quaint and innocent humour ; while the tenderness of some of them rises on the reader like the aurora of the coming sun of George Herbert. I do not forget that even if some of his poems were printed in 1639 [1635], years before that George Herbert had done his work and gone home : my figure stands in relation to the order I have adopted. Some of his verse is homelier than even George Herbert’s homeliest. One of its most remarkable traits is a quaint thanksgiving for the commonest things by name —not the less real that it is sometimes even queer.

For instance:

' To God.

God gives not onely corne, for need,
But likewise sup'rabundant seed ;
Bread for our service, bread for shew ;
Meat for our meales, and fragments too :
He gives not poorly, taking some
Between the finger, and the thumb ;
But, for our glut, and for our store,
Fine flowre prest down, and running o're.'

“ Here is another, delightful in its oddity. We can fancy the merry yet gracious poet chuckling over the vision of the child and the fancy of his words.

' A Grace for a Child.

Here a little child I stand,
Heaving up my either hand ;
Cold as Paddocks though they be,
Here I lift them up to Thee,
For a Benizon to fall
On our meat, and on us all. Amen.'

(Vol. III. pp. 158-9.)

“ I shall now give two or three of his longer poems, which are not long, and then a few of his short ones.

The best known is the following, but it is not so well known that I must therefore omit it.

' His Letanie, to the Holy Spirit.

1. In the houre of my distresse,
When temptations me oppresse,' &c.

' The White Island : or place of the Blest.

In this world (the Isle of Dreames)
While we sit by sorrowes streames,' &c.

' To Death.

Thou bid'st me come away,
And I'le no longer stay,' &c.

' Eternitie.

1. O Yeares ! and Age ! Farewell :
Behold I go,
Where I do know
Infinite to dwell.
2. And these mine eyes shall see
All times, how they Are lost i' th' Sea
Of vast Eternitie.

3. Where never Moone shall sway
 The Starres ; but she
 And Night, shall be Drown'd in one endlesse Day.

' The goodnesse of his God.

When Winds and Seas do rage
 And threaten to undo me,
 Thou dost their wrath asswage,
 If I but call unto Thee.

A mighty storm last night
 Did seek my soule to swallow,
 But by the peep of light
 A gentle calm did follow.

What need I then despaire,
 Though ills stand round about me ;
 Since mischiefs neither dare
 To bark, or bite without Thee ?'

' To God.

Lord, I am like to Misletoc
 Which has no root, and cannot grow,
 Or prosper, but by that same tree
 It clings about ; so I by Thee.
 What need I then to feare at all,
 So long as I about Thee craule ?
 But if that Tree sho'd fall, and die,
 Tumble shall heav'n, and down will I.'

“Here are now a few chosen from many that—to borrow a term from Crashaw—might be called Divine Epigrams.

| | |
|-------------------------------|---------------------|
| ‘ God, when He’s angry,’ &c. | (Vol. III. p. 121.) |
| ‘ God can’t be wrathful,’ &c. | („ p. 215.) |
| ‘ ’Tis hard to find God,’ &c. | („ p. 122.) |
| ‘ God’s rod doth watch,’ &c. | („ p. 125.) |
| ‘ A man’s transgression,’ &c. | („ p. 151.) |
| ‘ God, when He takes,’ &c. | („ p. 156.) |
| ‘ Humble we must be,’ &c. | („ p. 156.) |
| ‘ God Who’s in Heaven,’ &c. | („ p. 188.) |
| ‘ The same who crowns,’ &c. | („ p. 189.) |
| ‘ God is so potent,’ &c. | („ p. 191.) |
| ‘ Paradise is,’ &c. | („ p. 191.) |
| ‘ Heaven is not given,’ &c. | („ p. 203.) |

One more for the sake of Martha, smiled at by so many because they are incapable either of her blame or her sister’s praise.

‘ The repetition of the name, made known
No other than Christ’s full affection.’

(Vol. III. p. 191.)

And so farewell to the very lovable Robert Herrick.” (pp. 163-171). Turning back on these “good words,” it may be that some, reading his “Letanie” for the first time, or reading it afresh, may be disposed to wonder if not to condemn its levities, and if disposed to be harsh, might even say that the ass's ear persists in peeping out of Herrick's cleanest night-cap. But in bits such as these in his "Letanie"—

*"When the artlesse doctor sees =without skill
No one hope, but of his fees,
And his skill runs on the lees ;
Sweet Spirit, comfort me !
.....
When the tapers now burne blew,
And the comforters are few,
And that number more then true ;
Sweet Spirit, comfort me !"*

there really was no irreverence, nothing save irrepressible humour and sense of the ridiculous side of human nature, and scorn of all unrealities.¹ It is of kin with Sir Thomas More's jest within the gleam of the heads-

¹ 'Art-lesse.' When I put 'without skill' in the margin in its place, I thought of the meaning as = skilllessness or ignorance, and certainly it might well apply to the then country practitioner in Devonshire. My good friend Dr. Nicholson suggests that his skilllessness quoad the patient's state (supposed) is intended, and so = when the doctor's art has become skillless or unable to relieve or save. This seems to be suggested by the 'skill' of third line—which otherwise is contradictory—and yields a finer meaning. There remains the jest on the 'fees,' with its further hint at isolation.

man's axe, and such sallies as have broken from your witty men from stout Gilbert (Raleigh's brother-in-law) to Robert Burns and Sydney Smith. I'd rather have outspoken sincerity than sanctimonious demureness. The incidental mention of George Herbert reminds us that though his contemporary at Cambridge, Noble Numbers shews only one distant echo of "The Temple" in "His Saviour's Words, going to the Crosse" (Vol. III. p. 219) and "Good Friday" (Vol. III. 216). It has a touch of "2. The Sacrifice," just as in "Corinna going a-Maying" there may be heard the sweet urgency of Richard Crashaw in his poem of "The Morning" (Works I. pp. 237-9 in F. W. L.). It is somewhat and inevitably repetitive, but Mr. Gosse's criticism of the sacred Verse must also be given if, in one instance at least, I must again dissent emphatically. Thus he writes :—

"Appended to the Hesperides, but bearing date one year earlier, is a little book of poems, similar to these in outward form, but dealing with sacred subjects. Here our pagan priest is seen, despoiled of his vine-wreath and his thyrsus, doing penance in a white sheet, and with a candle in his hand. That rubicund visage, with its sly eye and prodigious jowl, looks ludicrously out of place in the penitential surplice ;

but he is evidently sincere, though not very deep, in his repentance, and sings hymns of faultless orthodoxy, with a loud and lusty voice, to the old pagan airs. Yet they are not inspiriting reading, save where they are least Christian; there is none of the religious passion of Crashaw, burning the weak heart away in a flame of adoration, none of the sweet and sober devotion of Herbert, nothing, indeed, from an ecclesiastical point of view, so good as the best of Vaughan the Silurist; where the Noble Numbers are most readable is where they are most secular. One sees the same spirit here as throughout the worldly poems; in a charming little Ode to Jesus he wishes the Saviour to be crowned with roses and daffodils, and laid in a neat white osier cradle; in The Present, he will take a rose to Christ, and sticking it in His stomacher, beg for one 'mellifluous kiss.' The epigrams of the earlier volume are replaced in the Noble Numbers by a series of couplets, attempting to define the nature of God, of which none equals in neatness this, which is the last:—

'Of all the good things whatsoe'er we do
God is the Ἀρχὴ and the Τέλος too.'

As might be expected, his religion is as grossly anthropomorphic as it is possible to be. He almost surpasses those mediæval priests of Picardy who brought such waxen images to the Madonna's shrine as no altar had seen since the cult of the Lampsacene, in certain verses on the Circumcision, verses that are more revolting in their grossness than any of those erotic poems—

‘ unbaptised rhymes
Writ in my wild unhallowed times ’— for which he so ostentatiously demands absolution. It is pleasant to turn from these to the three or four pieces that are in every way worthy of his genius. Of these the tenderest is the Thanksgiving, where he is delightfully confidential about his food, thus :—

‘ Lord, I confess, too, when I dine
The pulse is Thine,
And all those other bits, that be Placed there by Thee ;
The worts, the purslain, and the mess
Of water-cress.

.
'Tis thou that crown'st my glittering hearth
With guiltless mirth,
And giv'st me wassail-bowls to drink,
Spiced to the brink.’

And about his house :—

'Like as my parlour, so my hall
 And kitchen's small,
A little buttery, and therein
 A little bin.'

"The wild and spirited Letanie is too well known to be quoted here, but there are two very fine odes in the Noble Numbers that are hardly so familiar. One is the 'Dirge of Jephthah's Daughter,' written in a wonderfully musical and pathetic measure, and full of fine passages, of which this is a fair sample :—

'May no wolf howl, or screech-owl stir
A wing about thy sepulchre!
No boisterous winds or storms come hither
 To starve or wither
Thy soft sweet earth, but, like a spring,
Love keep it ever flourishing.'

"But beyond question the cleverest and at the same time the most odd poem in the Noble Numbers is 'The Widow's Tears; or, Dirge of Dorcas,' a lyrical chorus supposed to be wailed out by the widows over the death-bed of Tabitha. The bereaved ladies disgrace themselves, unfortunately, by the greediness of their regrets, dwelling on the loss to them of the bread—'ay! and the flesh, for and the fish'—that Dorcas was wont to give them ; but the poem has stanzas of marvellous grace and delicacy, and the mètre in which it is written is peculiarly sweet. But truly Herrick's forte did not lie in hymn-writing, nor was he able to refrain from egregious errors of taste, whenever he attempted to reduce his laughing features to a proper clerical gravity. Of all his solecisms, however, none is so monstrous as one almost incredible poem 'To God,' in which he gravely encourages the Divine Being to read his secular poems, assuring Him that

'Thou, my God, may'st on this impure look,
Yet take no tincture from my sinful book.'

For unconscious impiety this rivals the famous passage in which Robert Montgomery exhorted God to 'pause and think.'" (pp. 187-8). The supposed 'solecism' is surely a misapprehension. It is the utterance of penitent humility which discerns imperfection and stain on its best, and rejoices to think of Him who is the Light condescending to look on his Poems forgivingly; and the 'take no tincture' is not a bathetic but a pathetic version of Isaiah's cry: "Wo is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts" (VI. 5).

Accordingly I have enforced it (in loco) with a line from Cowper. ✓

V. His assurance of fame. This is too large an element in the Poetry of Herrick to be left un-noted. Any one who studies the early literature of England must have been struck with the grotesquely impossible expectations of immortality cherished and published by mere Versifiers. You have the most serene self-laudation and accusing committal of their Poems to the next century as distinguished from an ignorant and unsympathetic present time. The contrast between the Hope and its failure has no doubt its ludicrous side, but it has also something of pathos. But when you find not merely aspiration but achievement, not only prediction but the very 'stuff' of the imperishable, you do well to pause and meditate; for no man who could write the "Mad Maid's Song," or "The Primroses fill'd with dew," or other of Herrick's pieces already marked and examined, is to be regarded as an Egotist in joyously and in perfect words singing his assurance of fame, especially when, as in his case, the immortality counted on is unexaggerate and modest, and symbolized by the dew from the sky, not the great dome of the sky itself, or as least and lowliest wild-flowers live securely from age to age, carrying in their bosom the tiny bit of colour, or the censer of fragrance given them by Him who is The Gardener. The pretender's assurance of 'fame' is a tribute as it is a foil to the true man's. It is to be questioned if there can be actuality of possession of capacity above the ordinary and yet unconsciousness of it; and if consciously held, it is simple trueness to the fact to utter it out. Herrick's possession will not be gainsayed; nor his positive guerdons; nor the certainty of an undying memory within his own self-chosen realm of bright and dainty, rural-breathed and divinely simple Poetry, with o' times celestial tones as of the Lark "soaring and singing, singing and soaring," right up to "Heaven's gate." Quotations already made might suffice to confirm his assurance of fame. But the "thirst for fame," as Mr. Gosse shews, "is unsatiable, and his hope of gaining it intense"; his poetry is "his life and his pyramides," a living pillar, never "to be thrown down by envious Time," and it shall be the "honour of great musicians to set his pieces to music when he is dead" (as before, p. 180). Hence it demands more specific exemplification. His anticipation as to 'good musicians' deeming it an 'honour' to 'set' his poems to music, was abundantly fulfilled. Lanier and Wilson, the Lawes and the most famous of the next generation did so; and 'tis pity that to-day the Hesperides is not more searched for worthier words than are furnished for contemporary music. 'At Court' both his sacred and secular pieces were "set to music," and sung at Whitehall and elsewhere. But this was a mere accident of that 'fame' concerning which he cherished an assurance. He 'sang' perfectly, certain that his notes were true. He 'described,' and he was equally certain that he gave back in his poems what he saw. He 'painted' and there could be no question of the genuineness of his colours (as his epithets). He gave 'praise' to another and another who sought a place in his 'Book of the Just,' and he had the seer's burdened eye to discern that it would endure, whatever might become of the personality celebrated. And so throughout.

The most absolute expression of his assurance of fame as a Poet is "His Poetrie his Pillar" (Vol. I., p. 146); but others strike the same key, e.g.

"On himselfe.

Live by thy Muse thou shalt; when others die,
Leaving no Fame to long Posterity:
When Monarchies trans-shifted are, and gone;
Here shall endure thy vast Dominion."

(Vol. II. p. 182.)

"To his Booke.

Thou art a plant sprung up to wither never,
But like a Laurell, to grow green for ever."

(Vol. I. p. 171.)

Nor must his before-mentioned hope through musicians be omitted:—

"Upon himself.

Thou shalt not All die; for while Love's fire shines

Upon his Altar, men shall read thy lines;
And learn'd Musicians shall to honour Herricks
Fame, and his Name, both set, and sing his Lyrics."

(Vol. II. p. 66.)

Still more characteristic is his

"Poetry perpetuates the Poet.

Here I my selfe might likewise die,
And utterly forgotten lye,
But that eternall Poetrie
Repullulation gives me here
Unto the thirtieth thousand yeere,
When all now dead shall re-appeare."

(Vol. II. p. 273.)

Finer and deeper still is his "To live merrily, and to trust to good verses":—

“ Trust to good Verses then ;
They onely will aspire,
When Pyramids, as men,
Are lost, i'th'funerall fire.

And when all Bodies meet
In Lethe to be drown'd ;
Then onely Numbers sweet,
With endless life are crown'd.”

(Vol. I. p. 140.)

These must suffice. The assurance is positive, but, I repeat, is modest. It is as the Poet of Love's altar-fire and as 'sweet' he grounds his Hope. There are behind this—like the horizon stretching away beyond the barest patch of moorland—gnome-words declarative of a 'vast dominion' and of 'eternall' renown ; yet is his self-estimate humble and nicely true to his self-knowledge. I think our dwelling upon it ought to guide to more proportionate recognition of his genius, that is, to the full extent he asserts.

VI. His Portrait. It will be noticed that Mr. Gosse speaks of the “prodigious jowl” of Herrick. This suffices to convince me that he has been taking either the preposterous enlargement by Schiavonetti (in Nott's Selections, 1810), or the equally untrue lesser enlargement of Worthington (Pickering, 1846), or the still more monstrous lithograph in Walford's edition (1869)—coarse and vulgar—as the real likeness of our Poet. None of these has any truth in it, contrariwise, are lying in feature and expression and everything. Lord Dundrennan's woodcut (1823) is an outrage. That in the Library of Old Authors (nominally Mr. Hazlitt's) which reproduces the whole of the original engraving of Hesperides (1648) is a great advance on all the others, or, rather, while it shows conscientious work, the others are not for a moment to be regarded. I was extremely anxious to give one truer still ; and, unless I very much mistake, ours will be accepted as closer to the original than anything hitherto. The engraver (Mr. W. J. Alais) has made it a task of love ; and the admirer of Herrick has now a genuine replica (enlarged) of that Portrait which he himself gave to the world, and which in its most commanding aquiline nose, and twinkling eye under its arched and shaggy pent-house, and slight moustache, and short upper lip, and massive under-jaw, and 'juicy' neck, with much of the voluptuous force of the best type among the Roman emperors, and affluent curls, interprets to us his Book, and unmistakably gives us assurance of a Man, every inch of him. It speaks much for his independence that at a time when prefatory verse-eulogies were the rule, and their absence almost the exception, his Book came out with his own self in it alone, save in the engraved Latin lines underneath his bust-portrait. The I. H. C. of these Lines I take to have been young John Hall, of Cambridge—to whom in turn Herrick addressed a panegyric (Vol. III., pp. 27-8). Curiously enough, even Lord Dundrennan and other after-critics have left uncorrected such plain errors as ‘minor es’ for ‘minores,’ and ‘major es’ for ‘majores,’ which, as Marshall was the engraver, recalls Milton’s Greek, that he caused his unfortunate engraver innocently to place under his portrait. It may fitly close these specialities to give the Verses and our verse-translation :—

“Tempora cinxisset Foliorum densior umbra :
 Debetur Genio Laurea Sylva tuo.
 Tempora et Illa Tibi mollis redimisset Oliva ;
 Scilicet excludis Versibus Arma tuis.
 Admisces Antiqua Novis, Jocunda Severis :
 Hinc Juvenis discat, Fœmina, Virgo, Senex
 Vt solo minores Phœbo, sic majores Unus
 Omnibus Ingenio, Mente Lepore, Stylo.
 Scripsit I. H. C.”

In English take this :—

A denser shade of leaves thy brows should bind ;
 A laurel grove is due to such a mind.

The peaceful olive should those brows entwine,
For arms are banished from such verse as thine.
Old things with new thou blendest, grave with gay :
Hence young and old, mother and maid may say,
Phœbus except, all else thou dost outvie
In style, and beauty, and capacity.

Let Charles Short ("Selections" 1839) and the Retrospective Review, now close these 'critical' observations. The former thus speaks :—"Forgetting his blemishes, and only estimating the character and effusions of his felicitous genius, Herrick may safely be pronounced one of the greatest of the English lyric poets ; alternately gay and serious, lively and tender, descriptive and didactic, his pages also record many curious national customs and traditions ; and if this had been his only merit, he might have deserved thanks at least, and not severe censure. Then again, he makes incursions into fairy-land with infinite success, and these may be truly said to rival even Shakespeare himself" (p. 34). Next, the Retrospective Review (Vol. V. 1822) :—"Herrick is the most joyous and gladsome of the bards, singing like the grasshopper, as if he never would grow old ; he is as fresh as the Spring, as blithe as Summer, and as ripe as Autumn. We know of no English poet who is so abandonné, as the French term it, who so wholly gives himself up to his present feelings, who is so much heart and soul in what he writes, and this not on one subject only, but on all subjects alike. The spirit of song dances in his veins, and flutters around his lips—now bursting into the joyful and hearty voice of the Epicurean, sometimes breathing forth strains soft as the sigh of ‘buried love’; and sometimes uttering feelings of the most delicate pensiveness. His poems resemble a luxuriant meadow, full of king-cups and wild flowers, or a July firmament sparkling with a myriad of stars. His fancy fed upon all the fair and sweet things of nature; it is redolent of roses and geraniums; it is as bright and airy as the thistle-down, or the bubbles which laughing boys blow into the air, where they float in a waving line of beauty. Like the sun, it communicates a delight and gladness to everything it shines upon, and is as bright and radiant as his beams; and yet many of his pieces conclude with the softest touches of sensibility and feeling. Indeed, it is that delicate pathos which is, at the same time, natural and almost playful, which most charms us in the writings of Herrick. And as for his versification, it presents one of the most varied specimens of the rhythmical harmony in the language, flowing with an almost wonderful grace and flexibility” (pp. 157-8). Again: “And now farewell, young Herrick! for young is thy poetry as thy wisdom is old: and mayest thou flourish in immortal youth, thou boon companion and most jocund songster! May thy purest poems be piped from hill to hill, throughout England; and thy spirit, tinged with superstitious lore, be gladdened by the music! May the flowers breath incense to thy fame, for thou hast not left one of them unsung! May the solitary springs and circumambient air murmur thy praises as thou hast warbled theirs! And may those who love well sing, and those who love well, sigh sweet panegyrics to thy memory! Ours shall not be wanting, for we have read thee much, and would fain hope that this our paper, being nearly all made of thy thoughts and language, may be liked as well as one like thee is” (pp. 179-180).

A “sweet singer” of Devonshire (Mortimer Collins) has paid recent tribute to our Poet; and if it be somewhat thin, and if it be an anachronism at this time o’ day to connect ‘hypocrite’ with Oliver Cromwell, and an impertinence to characterize the heroic and most real Christianity of the Puritans and Nonconformists as ‘cant,’ it were pity to lose the little lilt. So “an’ it please thee,” Reader, you have it:—

Herrick.

1.

Strangely quiet are Devon's green glades
Under Apollo's noontide anger ;
And the madid eyes of Devonshire maids [moist (ma-
Are full of a sweet and dreamy languor, didus)
Terribly twaddles the dreary "Times,"—
Little is good that's neoteric ;
So I'll lie on the turf beneath the limes
With a bottle of claret and rare old Herrick.

2.

Rare old Herrick, the Cavalier Vicar
Of pleasant Dean Prior by Totnes Town,—
Rather too wont in foaming liquor
The cares of those troublous times to drown,—
Of wicked wit by no means chary,—
Of ruddy lips not at all afraid ;
If you gave him milk in a Devonshire Dairy
He'd probably kiss the Dairymaid.

3.

But loyal and true to Charles the Martyr,
To his high profession not untrue,
A poet who strained the poet's charter
Beyond its limits a point or two ;
Lover of ruby and amber wine,
Of joyous humour and charming girls,
Hater of cant about things divine,
Of hypocrite Cromwell and all his churls.

4.

None ever touched with so fine a finger
The delicate lyre of English rhyme ;
He loved amid fresh flowers to linger
And he made their fragrance last through time ;
And the daffodil growing in Spring's soft track
Has a beauty mystic and esoteric,
Since its brief bright life, two centuries back,
Was made into verse by our Devonshire Herrick.

5.

Well the poet liked fair London city ;
He polished some of its choicest gems,
And wrote full many a lyric ditty,
In taverns over the sparkling Thames :
For those were the days when the Thames ran clear
Palace and shadowy lawn between,
And bays glittered with stately cheer,
And light feet danced upon Charing green.

6.

London town is another affair
Since Herrick wrote his perfect rhymes ;
But Devon has the same Elysian air
It had in the fine old Cavalier times ;
And he who cares little for all the hysteric
Trash which the " well-informed " reader sees,
Can't do better than study Herrick
With a flask of claret under the trees."
(Summer Songs by Mortimer Collins (1860) p. 114.)

ALEXANDER B. GROSART.

APPENDIX
TO MEMORIAL-INTRODUCTION.

APPENDIX.

A. THE HERRICKS OF BEAUMANOR.

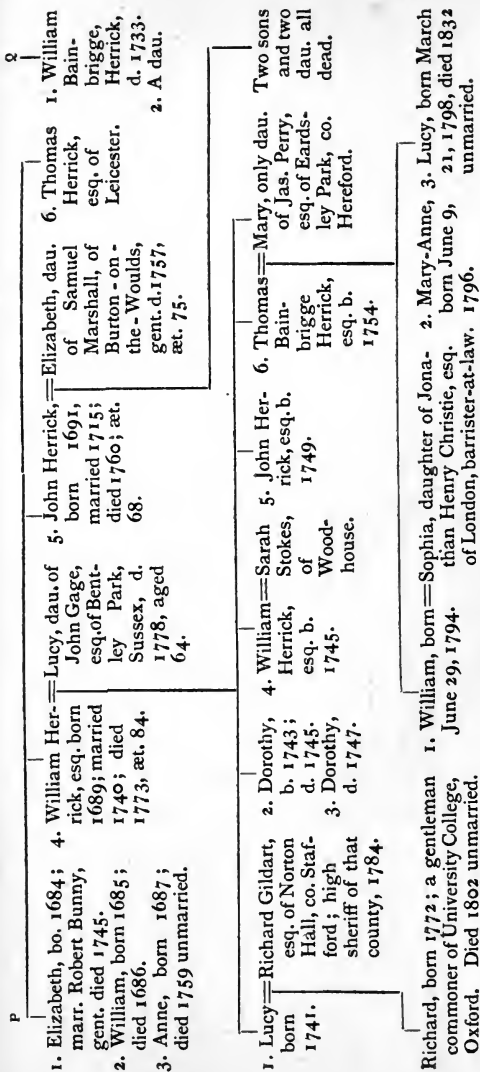

From the relationship to the Poet, it is thought well to give here the pedigree of Herrick of Beaumanor from Nichols' Leicestershire (Vol. III. p. 148), with a few corrections from the Beaumanor copy as in Mr. Hazlitt's edn. of Hesperides. (Vol. II. pp. 502-3.) It is to be regretted that this pedigree did not come within the scope of Mr. Hill's "Market Harborough," etc., as before.

Sir William Herrick, knt. fifth son of John and Mary Eyrick of Leicester; = Joan, dau. of Richard May, esq. of London born 1557; mar. 1596; knighted 1605; M.P. for the borough of Leicester, 1605, 1629; died March 2, 1652-3, in his 96th year.

- | | | | |
|---|--|--|---|
| 1. William Herrick, esq. born 1597; married 1623; d. 1671; æt. 74. | 2. Robert, born 1598; died s.p. 1639. | 5. Elizabeth, b. 1603. Henry, 1604. | 10. Martha, married in 1634 to John Holmstead, esq. of Lynn Norfolk. |
| 3. Richard, born 1600; d. Warden of Manchester in 1667. | 4. Thomas, b. 1602. | 7. Roger, fellow of All Souls 1628-9. | 11. Dorothy, married in 1628 the Rev. James Lancashire. |
| 4. Thomas, b. 1602. | 8. John, 1612. | 9. Mary, d. ætat. 20. | 12. Elizabeth, mar. in 1633 Beaumont Pight, esq. of Beaumanor |

Anne, dau. of William Bainbrigg, esq. = William Herrick, esq. born 1624; = Frances, dau. of Will. Milward, esq. of Chilcot, co. Derb. second wife; d. before 1681.

- | | | | |
|---|---|--|--|
| 1. William Heyrick b. 1650; d. 1705; æt. 55. | 2. John, of the Outwoods in the parish of Loughboro', d. 1724. | 3. Benjamin Herrick, M.D. æt. circa 26, 1681; d. 1720. | 4. Elizabeth, married to John Levesley, esq. of Belton. |
| 2. John, of the Outwoods in the parish of Loughboro', d. 1724. | 3. Benjamin Herrick, M.D. æt. circa 26, 1681; d. 1720. | 4. Elizabeth, married to John Levesley, esq. of Belton. | 1. Thomas, d. 1682, aged 20. |
| 3. Benjamin Herrick, M.D. æt. circa 26, 1681; d. 1720. | 4. Elizabeth, married to John Levesley, esq. of Belton. | 1. Thomas, d. 1682, aged 20. | 2. Frances, d. young, 1664. |
| 4. Elizabeth, married to John Levesley, esq. of Belton. | 1. Thomas, d. 1682, aged 20. | 2. Frances, d. young, 1664. | 3. Mary, b. 1665; m. Will. Lucas, esq. 1666; m. Clifton Tompson, esq. |

With reference to the 'knighthood' of Sir William Herrick, the following quotation from Winwood's Memorials of Affairs of State, 1725 (Vol. II. p. 57) is curious. Samuel Calvert writes to Ralph Winwood on 6th April, 1665: "On Easter Tuesday, one Mr. William Herrick, a goldsmith in Cheapside, was Knighted for making a Hole in the great Diamond the King doth wear. The party little expected the honour, but he did his work so well as won the King to an extraordinary liking of it." The King was James I. G.

B.

RICHARD HEYRICK, OR
HERRICK.

Richard Heyrick (or Herrick) is by far the most notable of the Herricks (the Poet excepted), and as a striking contrast with his cousin, and as, moreover, hitherto overlooked very much, it is most satisfactory to be able to add here the following notices of him, for which I am indebted to my excellent friend W. A. Abram, Esq., of Blackburn, the Historian of Blackburn.

“Richard Heyrick, third son of Sir William Heyrick, of Beaumanor Park, co. Leicester, was born in London the 9th Sept., 1600. After receiving the elements of learning at Merchant Taylor’s school, he entered at All Saints’ College, Oxford; took the degree of M. A. at the age of 20, and four years later, in 1624, was elected a fellow of his College. On the petition of his father, to whom the Royal house was under obligation for pecuniary assistance, Richard Heyrick obtained from Charles the First, in the year 1626, the promise of the reversion of the Wardenship of Manchester

College after the decease of Richard Murray, Knt. By the King's Charter to Christ's College, Manchester, dated 30th Sept., 1635, Richard Heyrick was constituted 'first warder of the said perpetual College.' He came into possession of this appointment, then worth about £700 per annum, at the age of 36. In his ecclesiastical views, Warden Heyrick was a puritan of Presbyterian tendencies in church government, and a vehement hater of Popery and all its works. He preached several set discourses in the Manchester Collegiate Church, during the years 1638-40, against Popery, which exhibit the intensity of his antagonism to the Roman system and its adherents in England. In 1641, he published in duodecimo 'Three Sermons preached at the Collegiate Church, Manchester,' dedicated to the House of Commons; one of the three sermons was preached on the public Fast Day, 8th July, 1640. Warden Heyrick drafted the address of the Puritans of Lancashire to the King, at the outset of the Civil War in 1644, which was subscribed by sixty-four Knights and esquires, fifty-five divines, 740 gentlemen, and 7,000 freeholders and others. The same year, somewhat later on, he was the first in Manchester to subscribe the Solemn League and Covenant. During the war, the Warden stoutly upheld the cause of Parliament, and is said to have given the larger proportion of his official income to provide pay for the forces garrisoning Manchester. In 1646, the sequestration by Parliament included the revenues of the College and Church of Manchester ; but Warden Heyrick took the opportunity of an invitation to preach before the House of Commons to urge an appeal, which was successful, for the restoration of the estate of his College. He was a chief agent in the establishment of the Lancashire Presbytery, Oct., 1646 ; and made a journey to London in that year. In 1649, the Republican soldiers under Col. Thomas Birch broke into the Chapter House of Manchester Collegiate Church, and seized the charters of its endowment, which the Warden vainly essayed to protect. These deeds were sent to London, and were never recovered thereafter. The Commissioners of sequestration granted to Herrick a small stipend of £100 per annum ; but he regarded the College as dissolved, and ceased to use the title of Warden. In 1651, Richard Heyrick was so imprudent as to proceed to London for the purpose of joining with some Presbyterians there in an attempt to excite a revolt against the Republican party then in the ascendant ; the consequence being that after the battle of Worcester Heyrick was arrested in Manchester, taken to London, and imprisoned, along with his son-in-law, Mr. Johnson. Some of his confederates in the scheme of disaffection were sentenced to death ; but friends at court protected Heyrick, and obtained his liberation. Mr. Heyrick is found presiding as Moderator at the synod of the Lancashire Presbytery in October, 1657 ; and in May, 1658, he made a journey to London on church business. On the Restoration in 1660, the College of Manchester was re-instated, and its endowments restored ; but Heyrick was temporarily in danger of being supplanted in the office of Warden by one Dr. Woolley, a royalist partizan. Henry Newcome in his journal writes :—‘ July 2, 1660. I heard of Mr. Heyrick’s going to London ; the cause was his wardenship was claimed by Dr. Wolley, to whom King Charles I. in the beginning of the war had granted it, for Mr. H.’s delinquency ; and so he was forced to go up to look after it.’ Eventually, the old Warden was restored to his function. Heyrick preached the sermon at the Collegiate Church, Manchester, on the Coronation Day of Charles II., Tuesday, April 23, 1661. This discourse was printed by the Manchester Royalists, with an epistle to the preacher prefixed, who was not consulted in the publication. Warden Heyrick conformed, but with some show of reluctance and humiliation, under the Act of Uniformity in 1662. He survived this change in his profession five years, and died, aged 67, Aug. 6th, 1667. Mr. Newcome, his associate, records the event:—"I heard of the sudden and dangerous sickness of poor Mr. Heyrick; insomuch that August 1st [1667], I went on purpose to see him. I found him very ill. We returned to town on the Saturday, August 3rd. August 5th was kept in private on his behalf. I went every day to see him; and on Tuesday in the evening we had a report that he was better, and went up to see him towards evening, and he was declining fast, insomuch that Mrs. Heyrick desired us not to leave her; and we did stay, and was at prayer for him just as he died, about nine at night, on August 6th (Tuesday). . . August 9th (Friday) we buried my old friend and colleague." By his first wife, Hellen, daughter of Thomas Corbit, of Spranston, co. Norfolk, Richard Heyrick had issue a son, Thomas, born Sept. 9th, 1632; and daughters, Mary, married Mr. John Johnson, of Manchester; and Elizabeth, married, April 17th, 1661, Rev. Richard Holbrook, of Salford. His second wife was Anna Maria, daughter of Mr. Erasmus Britton, merchant, of Hamburg; by her he had a son John, born in 1652, and died young; and a daughter Hellen, married Thomas Radcliffe, Esq.

Warden Heyrick's will bears date May 6th, 1661. His memorial in Manchester Collegiate Church is a plate of copper, within an oaken frame, and is fixed over the entrance to the Chapter House.

HESPERIDES.

HESPERIDES: 3
OR,
THE WORKS
BOTH HUMANE & DIVINE
OF
ROBERT HERRICK Esq.

OVID.

Effugient avidos Carmina nostra Rogos.

LONDON,

Printed for John Williams, and Francis Eglesfield, and are to be sold at the Crown and Marygold in Saint Pauls Church-yard. 1648.

TO THE MOST ILLVSTRIOS,
AND Most Hopefull PRINCE,
CHARLES,
Prince of Wales.¹

Ell may my Book come forth like
Publique Day,
When such a Light as You are leads the way:

Who are my Works Creator, and alone
The Flame of it, and the Expansion.
And look how all those heavenly Lamps acquire Light from the Sun, that *inexhausted*² Fire:
So all my Morne, and Evening Stars from You
Have their Existence, and their Influence too.
Full is my Book of Glories; but all These
By You become Immortall Substances.

¹ Afterwards Charles II.

² =inexhaustible.

6

FOr these Transgressions which thou here dost see,
Condemne the Printer, Reader, and not me ;
Who gave them forth good Grain, though he mistook
The Seed ; so sow'd these Tares throughout my Book.

E R R A T A .

PAge 33. line 10. read Rods [for 'rod']. p. 41. l. 19. r. Gotiere [for 'Goteire']. p. 65 l. 12. r. only one [for 'our']. p. 83. l. 28. r. soft [for 'foft']. p. 88. l. 26. r. the flowrie [for 'flowrie' without 'the'] p. 91. l. 29. r. such fears [for 'Flesh-quakes']. p. 136. l. 9. r. to thee the [for 'the' dropped]. p. 155. l. 10. r. washt or's to tell [for 'Washt o're']. p. 166. l. 10. r. his Lachrimæ [for 'Lacrimæ']. p. 181. l. 10. r. Ah woe is me, woe, woe is me [for 'Ah! woe woe woe woe woe is me']. p. 183. l. 9. r. and thy brest [for 'bed'] p. 201. l. 22. r. let chast [for 'yet']. p. 230. l. 21. r. and hauing drunk [for 'havink']. p. 260. l. 26. r. to rise [for 'to kisse'] p. 335. l. 17. r. a wife as [for 'or a wife'].

In the Divine.

Pag. 22. line 14. read where so ere he sees [for 'when he sees'].

Hitherto omitted e.g. by Dundrennan, Singer, Walford, Hazlitt. Dr. Nott adopts and adapts the verses to the errata of his "Selections," (1810). The whole of these errata have been silently corrected in our text.

HESPERIDES.

The Argument of his Book.

SING of Brooks, of Blossomes, Birds, and Bowers :

Of April, May, of June, and July- Flowers.

I sing of May-poles, Hock-carts,⁴ Wassails,⁵ Wakes,⁶
Of Bride-grooms, Brides, and of their Bridall-cakes.

I write of Youth, of Love, and have Accessse

By these, to sing of cleanly-Wantonnesse.

⁴ Harvest-home cart: the last loaded in the harvest. So Hock-tide or festival. It is curiously mixed up with the history of the Danes in England. See Bailey, s. v. "The Hock-cart, Vol. I. pp. 172-8

⁵ Wassail or wassel (waes hael A. S. 'be in health')—a liquor made of apples, sugar and ale, which being freely partaken of at Christmas or Twelfth-tide, led to the word meaning = hilarious, if not drunken, bouts. So Shakespeare, "at wakes and wassails" (Love's Labour Lost, v. 2).

⁶ A watch or vigil, ordinarily with a corpse at night.

I sing of Dewes, of Raines, and piece by piece
 Of Balme, of Oyle, of Spice, and Amber-Greece.⁷
 I sing of Times trans-shifting; and I write
 How Roses first came Red, and Lillies White.
 I write of Groves, of Twilights, and I sing
 The Court of Mab, and of the Fairie-King.
 I write of Hell; I sing (and ever shall)
 Of Heaven, and hope to have it after all.

To his Muse.

WHITHER, Mad maiden, wilt thou roame?

Farre safer 'twere to stay at home:
 Where thou mayst sit, and piping please
 The poore and private Cottages.
 Since Coats,⁸ and Hamlets, best agree
 With this thy meaner Minstralsie.

⁷ = Sea-born amber, i.e. amber gris (French)—one of the varieties of amber. See Cotgrave and notes in Marvell and Herbert, s. v. (Fuller Worthies' Library and Aldine Poets).

⁸ = cots, cottages, named in preceding line. Barnfield so spells (Roxburghe Club edn). On the 'lore' of the word 'cote,' see H. Leo in his treatise on Saxon Names of Places (Rectitudines Singularum Personarum), translated by B. Williams: London, 1852, p. 55. Dr. Nott, in his "Selections" (1810), on ll. 19-20 onward, annotates: 'Thus, too, Petrarch addresses and concludes his 26th Canzone:

O poverella mia, come se' rozza;
 Credo che tel corioschi;
 Rimanti in questi hoschi.

There with the Reed, thou mayst expresse
The Shepherds Fleecie happinesse :
And with thy Eclogues intermixe
Some smooth, and harmlesse Beucolicks.⁹
There on a Hillock thou mayst sing
Unto a handsome Shephardling ;¹
Or to a Girle (that keeps the Neat)²
With breath more sweet then Violet.
There, there, (perhaps) such Lines as These May take the simple Villages.
But for the Court, the Country wit
Is despicable unto it.
Stay then at home, and doe not goe
Or flie abroad to seeke for woe.
Contempts in Courts and Cities dwell ;
No Critick haunts the Poore mans Cell :
Where thou mayst hear thine own Lines read
By no one tongue, there, censurèd.
That man's unwise will search for Ill,
And may prevent it, sitting still.

⁹ = pastoral songs or poems (bucolics).

¹ Herrick affects such diminutives : see Glossarial Index, s. v.

² = oxen or cows.

To his Booke.

WHILE thou didst keep thy *Candor*³ undefil'd,
 Deerely I lov'd thee ; as my first-borne child :
 But when I saw thee wantonly to roame
 From house to house, and never stay at home ;
 I brake my bonds of Love, and bad thee goe,
 Regardlesse whether well thou sped'st, or no.
 On with thy fortunes then, what e're they be ;
 If good I'le smile, if bad I'le sigh for Thee.

Another.

TO read my Booke the Virgin shie
 May blush, (while *Brutus*⁴ standeth by ;)
 But when He's gone, read through what's writ,
 And never staine a cheeke for it.

Another.

WHO with thy leaves shall wipe (at need)
 The place, where swelling Piles do breed :
 May every Ill, that bites, or smarts,
 Perplexe him in his hinder-parts.

³ = sincerity or integrity : metaphorically whiteness, as being unpublished and so unhandled and unsoiled. See Glossarial-Index, s. v.

⁴ Brutus and Cato are common-places of examples of severe virtue, as in "When he would have his verses read," (l. 10) p. 6.

To the soure Reader.

IF thou dislik'st the Piece thou light'st on first ;
 Thinke that of All, that I have writ, the worst :
 But if thou read'st my Booke unto the end,
 And still do'st this, and that verse, reprehend :
 O Perverse man ! If All disgustfull be,
 The Extreame Scabbe take thee, and thine, for me.

To his Booke.

COME thou not neere those men, who are like Bread
 O're-leven'd ; or like Cheese o're-renetted.⁵

When he would have his verses read.

IN sober mornings, doe not thou rehearse
 The holy incantation of a verse ;
 But when that men have both well drunke,⁶ and fed,
 Let my Enchantments then be sung, or read.
 When Laurell spirts 'ith' fire,⁷ and when the Hearth
 Smiles to it selfe, and guilds the roofe with mirth ;

⁵ From rennet, the maw of a calf, used for making curds in curds and cream and cheese.

⁶ St. John, ii., 10.

⁷ Folk-lore.

When up the *Thyrse*⁸ is rais'd, and when the sound
 Of sacred *Orgies*⁹ flies, A round, A round ;¹
 When the Rose raignes, and locks with ointments shine,
 Let rigid Cato read these Lines of mine.

Upon Julias Recovery.

DROOP, droop no more, or hang the head,
 Ye Roses almost witherèd ;
 Now strength, and newer Purple get,
 Each here declining Violet.
 O Primroses ! let this day be
 A Resurrection unto ye ;
 And to all flowers ally'd in blood,
 Or sworn to that sweet Sister-hood :
 For Health on Julia's cheek hath shed
 Clarret, and Creame comminglèd.
 And those her lips doe now appeare
 As beames² of Corrall, but more cleare.

⁸ A Favelin twind with Ivy. H. [And headed with pine-cones—used in the rites and orgies of Bacchus.]

⁹ Songs to Bacchus. H.
 'around, around.'

¹ = a call to dance 'a round,' not
² = branches or twigs.

To Silvia to wed.

LET us (though late) at last (my Silvia) wed ;
 And loving lie in one devoted bed.
 Thy Watch may stand, my minutes fly poste haste ;
 No sound calls back the yeere that once is past.
 Then sweetest Silvia, let's no longer stay ;
True love, we know, precipitates delay.
 Away with doubts, all scruples hence remove ;
No man at one time, can be wise, and love.

The Parliament of Roses to Julia.

I DREAMT the Roses one time went
 To meet and sit in Parliament :
 The place for these, and for the rest
 Of flowers, was thy spotlesse breast :
 Over the which a State³ was drawne
 Of Tiffanie,⁴ or Cob-web Lawne ;⁵
 Then in that Parly,⁶ all those powers
 Voted the Rose, the Queen of flowers.
 But so, as that her self should be
 The maide of Honour unto thee.

³ = canopy. ⁴ = thin silk or fine gauze. ⁵ = lawn as delicately wrought as a spider's web.

⁶ Diminutive of Parliament (cf. l. 2): Parley = conference and discussion between enemies, while war is suspended.

No Bashfulness in begging.

TO get thine ends, lay bashfulness aside ;
Who feares to aske, doth teach to be deny'd.

The Frozen Heart.

I FREEZE, I freeze, and nothing dwels
 In me but Snow, and ysicles.
 For pitties sake, give your advice,
 To melt this snow, and thaw this ice ;
 I'le drink down Flames, but if so be Nothing but love can supple me ;
 I'le rather keepe this frost, and snow,
 Then to be thaw'd, or heated so.

To Perilla.

AH, my Perilla ! do'st thou grieve to see
 Me, day by day, to steale away from thee ?
 Age cals me hence, and my gray haire bid come,
 And haste away to mine eternal home ;
 'Twill not be long (Perilla) after this,
 That I must give thee the supremest kisse :
 Dead when I am, first cast in salt, and bring
 Part of the creame from that Religious Spring;⁷

⁷ = sacred fountain : 'creame.' Qu : foam or froth? See Brand under "Wells and Fountains."

With which (Perilla) wash my hands and feet ;
 That done, then wind me in that very sheet
 Which wrapt thy smooth limbs (when thou didst implore
 The Gods protection, but the night before)
 Follow me weeping to my Turfe, and there
 Let fall a Primrose, and with it a teare :
 Then lastly, let some weekly-strewings⁸ be Devoted to the memory of me :
 Then shall my Ghost not walk about, but keep
 Still in the coole, and silent shades of sleep.

A Song to the Maskers.

- 1 COME down, and dance ye in the toyle
 Of pleasures, to a Heate ;
 But if to moisture, Let the oyle
 Of Roses be your sweat.
- 2 Not only to your selves assume
 These sweets, but let them fly ;
 From this, to that, and so Perfume
 E'ne all the standers by.

⁸ = of flowers on the grave. See Brand s. v. for a full account.

3 As Goddess *Isis*⁹ (when she went,
Or glided through the street)
Made all that touch't her, with her scent,
And whom she touch't, turne sweet.

To Perenna.

WHEN I thy Parts runne o're, I can't espie
In any one, the least indecencie :¹
But every Line and Limb diffusèd thence,
A faire, and unfamiliar excellence :
So, that the more I look, the more I prove,
Ther's still more cause, why I the more should love.

Treason.

THE seeds of Treason choake up as they spring,
He Acts the Crime, that gives it Cherishing.

Two Things Odious.

TWO of a thousand things, are disallow'd,
A lying Rich man, and a Poore man proud.

⁹ Cf. "Love perfumes all paths" onward : l. 7, mythical.

¹ = inelegance or disorder. So Milton, "Over thy decent shoulders drawn" (Il Penseroso, l. 36).

To his Mistresses.

HELPE me ! helpe me ! now I call
 To my pretty Witchcrafts all ;
 Old I am, and cannot do
 That, I was accustom'd to.
 Bring your Magicks, Spels, and Charmes,
 To enflesh my thighs, and armes :
 Is there no way to beget
 In my limbs their former heat ?
Æson had (as Poets faine)²
 Baths that made him young againe :
 Find that Medicine (if you can)
 For your drie-decrepid man :
 Who would faine his strength renew,
 Were it but to pleasure you.

The Wounded Heart.

COME bring your sampler,³ and with Art,
 Draw in't a wounded Heart :
 And dropping here, and there :
 Not that I thinke, that any Dart,

² Ovid. Met. vii. 163, 250, &c.

³ Fine canvas on which ornamental wool-work, and sometimes in silk, was wrought with the needle.

Can make your's bleed a teare :
 Or peirce it any where ;
 Yet doe it to this end : that I,
 May by
 This secret see,
 Though you can make
 That Heart to bleed, your's ne'r will ake
 For me.

No Loathsomnesse in love.

WHAT I fancy, I approve,
No Dislike there is in love :

Be my Mistresse short or tall,
 And distorted there-withall :
 Be she likewise one of those,
 That an Acre hath of Nose :
 Be her forehead, and her eyes
 Full of incongruities :
 Be her cheeks so shallow too,
 As to shew her Tongue wag through :
 Be her lips ill hung, or set,
 And her grinders black as jet ;
 Ha's she thinne haire, hath she none,
 She's to me a Paragon.⁴

⁴ =equal, or compeer, i. e., the peerless or pattern one. See Glossarial Index s. v.

To Anthea.

IF, deare Anthea, my hard fate it be
 To live some few-sad-howers after thee :
 Thy sacred Corse with Odours I will burne ;
 And with my Lawrell crown thy Golden Vrne.
 Then holding up (there) such religious Things,
 As were (time past) thy holy Filitings :⁵
 Nere to thy *Reverend Pitcher*⁶ I will fall
 Down dead for grief, and end my woes withall :
 So three in one small plat⁷ of ground shall ly,
Anthea, Herrick, and his Poetry.

The Weeping Cherry.

I SAW a Cherry weep, and why ?
 Why wept it ? but for shame,
 Because my Julia's lip was by,
 And did out-red the same.
 But, pretty Fondling,⁸ let not fall
 A teare at all for that :
 Which Rubies, Corralls, Scarlets, all
 For tincture,⁹ wonder at.

⁵ = binding with fillets or bandages, and in the fillets themselves as bindings, there were bands.

⁶ = that from which she made libations and sacrificed.

⁷ = small piece of ground : sometimes ' plot.'

⁸ = foolish little thing.

⁹ = colour or hue.

Soft Musick.

THE mellow touch of musick most doth wound
 The soule, when it doth rather sigh, then sound.

The Difference betwixt Kings and Subjects.

TWIXT Kings and Subjects ther's this mighty odds,
 Subjects are taught by Men ; Kings by the Gods.

His Answer to a Question.

SOME would know
 Why I so
 Long still doe tarry,
 And ask why
 Here that I
 Live, and not marry ?
 Thus I those
 Doe oppose ;
 What man would be here,
 Slave to Thrall,
 If at all
 He could live free here ?

Upon Julia's Fall.

JVLIA was carelesse, and withall,
 She rather took,¹ then ² got a fall :
 The wanton Ambler chanc'd to see
 Part of her leggs sinceritie : ³
 And ravish'd thus, It came to passe,
 The Nagge (like to the Prophets Asse,)
 Began to speak, and would have been
 A telling what rare sights h'ad seen :
 And had told all ; but did refraine,
 Because his Tongue was ty'd againe.

Expences Exhaust.

LIVE with a thrifty, not a needy Fate ;
Small shots ⁴ paid often, waste a vast estate.

Love what it is.

LOVE is a circle that doth restlesse move
 In the same sweet eternity of love.

¹ i. e. she might be said to have merited it.

² = than—and so throughout as placed in the margin.

³ = pureness.

⁴ = debts.

Presence and Absence.

WHEN what is lov'd is Present, love doth spring ;
But being absent, Love lies languishing.⁵

No Spouse but a Sister.

A BACHELOUR I will Live as I have liv'd still,
And never take a wife
To crucifie my life :
But this I'll tell ye too,
What now I meane to doe ;
A Sister (in the stead
Of Wife) about I'll lead ;⁶
Which I will keep embrac'd,
And kisse, but yet be chaste.

The Pomander⁷ Bracelet.

TO me my Julia lately sent
A Bracelet richly Redolent :
The Beads I kist, but most lov'd her
That did perfume the Pomander.

⁵ Allusion to the flower Love-Lies-Bleeding.

⁶ 1 Corinthians, ix. 5.

⁷ = Pomme d'ambre (French), i. e. an amber apple (and sometimes a pear) having been the form of a silver case within which the

The shooe tying.

ANTHEA bade me tye her shooe ;
 I did ; and kist the Instep too :
 And would have kist unto her knee,
 Had not her Blush rebukèd me.

The Carcanet.⁸

INSTEAD of Orient Pearls, of Jet,
 I sent my Love a Karkanet :
 About her spotlesse neck she knit
 The lace,⁹ to honour me, or it :
 Then think how wrapt¹ was I to see
 My Jet t'enthrall such Ivorie.

ball of various scents, mainly ambergris, was enclosed, having holes pierced throughout, for escape of the perfume. A pomander bracelet was made of these balls, &c. Such balls were supposed to be useful against infection so late as 1610. The Plague that year being in Oxford, George Radcliffe (afterwards Sir George) wrote that his tutor "had sent him out of town, if he had desired it, and made him a Pomander" (Churton's Life of Dean Nowell, pp. 21-2). Becon named a rare little book of his "The Pomander of Prayers," (1578).

⁸ The carcanet was a gold or other ornamental chain, or necklace, worn round the neck. Carcan originally signified an iron collar to confine malefactors to a post. Nicot, in his Grand Dictionnaire, defines it, ornement d'or qu'on imst au col des demoiselles. N.

⁹ = the string of the carcanet or necklace.

¹ = rapt, enraptured.

His sailing from Julia.

WHEN that day comes, whose evening sayes I'm gone

Unto that watrie Desolation :

Devoutly to thy *Closet-gods*² then pray,

That my wing'd Ship may meet no Remora.³

Those Deities which circum-walk the Seas,

And look upon our dreadfull passages,

Will from all dangers, re-deliver me,

For one drink offering, pourèd out by thee.

Mercie and Truth live with thee ! and forbear

(In my short absence) to unsluce⁴ a teare :

But yet for Loves-sake, let thy lips doe this,

Give my dead picture one engendring kisse :

Work that to life, and let me ever dwell

In thy remembrance (Julia). So farewell.

How the Wall-flower came first, and why so called.

WHY this Flower is now call'd so,
List' sweet maids, and you shal know.

² = lares, of whom Herrick is so fond.

³ = hindrance : from the small fish or worm called a sea-lamprey or suckstone, of which it was long a Vulgar Error that by attaching itself to a ship's bottom it arrested its motion. See Bailey, s. v.

⁴ = lift the sluice to make way for a tear.

Understand, this First-ling⁵ was Once a brisk and bonny Lasse,
 Kept as close as Danae was :
 Who a sprightly *Springall*⁶ lov'd,
 And to have it fully prov'd,
 Up she got upon a wall,
 Tempting down to slide withall :
 But the silken twist unty'd,
 So she fell, and bruis'd, she dy'd.
 Love, in pittty of the deed,
 And her loving-lucklesse speed,
 Turn'd her to this Plant, we call
 Now, The Flower of the Wall.

Why Flowers change colour.

THESE fresh beauties (we can prove)
 Once were Virgins sick of love,
 Turn'd to Flowers. Still in some
 Colours goe, and colours come.

To his Mistresse objecting to him neither Toying or Talking.

YOU say I love not, 'cause I doe not play
 Still with your curles, and kisse the time away.

⁵ = first produce or offspring. G. ⁶ = a youth or stripling.

You blame me too, because I can't devise
 Some sport, to please those Babies⁷ in your eyes :
 By Loves Religion, I must here confesse it,
 The most I love, when I the least expresse it.
Small griefs find tongues:⁸ Full Casques⁹ are ever found
 To give, (if any, yet) but little sound.
Deep waters noyse-lesse are ; And this we know,
That chiding streams betray small depth below.¹
 So when Love speechlesse is, she doth expresse
 A depth in love, and that depth, bottomlesse.
 Now since my love is tongue-lesse, know me such,
 Who speak but little, 'cause I love so much.

⁷ = the tiny face-reflection in the pupil of the eyes. This sportive conceit, says Dr. Nott, was imagined perhaps before, and certainly since Herrick wrote.

See where little Cupid lies
 Looking babies in the eyes.
 Thus in our looks some propagation lies,
 For we make babies in each others eyes.

LITTLE, alias MOORE.

⁸ A common-place from classical times. The greatest of all is in Shakespeare: "The grief that does not speak, whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break" (Macbeth iv. 3).

⁹ = casks or barrels. ¹ A classical common-place from Ovid onward, and frequent in the Elizabethan poets.

Upon the losse of his Mistresses.

I HAVE lost, and lately, these
 Many dainty Mistresses :
 Stately Julia, prime of all ;
Sapho next, a principall :
 Smooth Anthea, for a skin
 White, and Heaven-like Chrystalline :
 Sweet Electra, and the choice
Myrha, for the Lute, and Voice.
 Next, Corinna, for her wit,
 And the graceful use of it :
 With Perilla : All are gone ;
 Onely Herrick's left alone,
 For to number sorrow by
 Their departures hence, and die.

The Dream.

ME thought (last night) Love in an anger came,
 And brought a rod, so whipt me with the same :
Mirtle the twigs were, meerly to imply,
 Love strikes, but 'tis with gentle crueltie.
 Patient I was : Love pitifull grew then,
 And stroak'd the stripes, and I was whole agen.
 Thus like a Bee, Love-gentle stil doth bring Hony to salve, where he before did sting.

The Vine.

I DREAM'D this mortal part of mine
 Was Metamorphoz'd to a Vine ;
 Which crawling one and every way,
 Enthralld my dainty Lucia.
 Me thought, her long small legs & thighs
 I with my Tendrils did surprize ;
 Her Belly, Buttocks, and her Waste
 By my soft *Nerv'lits*² were embrac'd :
 About her head I writhing³ hung,
 And with rich clusters (hid among
 The leaves) her temples I behung :
 So that my Lucia seem'd to me
 Young Bacchus ravisht by his tree.⁴
 My curls about her neck did craule,
 And armes and hands they did enthral :
 So that she could not freely stir,
 (All parts there made one prisoner).
 But when I crept with leaves to hide
 Those parts, which maids keep unesp'y'd,
 Such fleeting pleasures there I took,
 That with the fancie I awook ;
 And found (Ah me !) this flesh of mine
 More like a Stock, then like a Vine.

² = diminutive of nerves.³ = entwining.⁴ Ivy, the vine—one of many myths concerning Dionysius.

To Love.

I'M free from thee ; aud thou no more shalt heare
 My puling Pipe to beat against thine eare :
 Farewell my shackles, (though of pearle they be)
 Such precious thraldome ne'r shall fetter me.
 He loves his bonds, who when the first are broke,
 Submits his neck unto a second yoke.

On himselfe.

YOUNG I was, but now am old,
 But I am not yet grown cold ;
 I can play, and I can twine
 'Bout a Virgin like a Vine :
 In her lap too I can lye
 Melting, and in fancie die :
 And return to life, if she
 Claps my cheek, or kisseth me ;
 Thus, and thus it now appears
 That our love out-lasts our yeeres.

*Love's play at Push-pin.*⁵

LOVE and my selfe (beleeve me) on a day
 At childish Push-pin (for our sport) did play :
 I put, he pusht,⁶ and heedless of my skin,
 Love prickt my finger with a golden pin :

⁵ A child-game, with pins 'pushed' alternately. ⁶ I placed, he pushed.

Since which, it festers so, that I can prove
 'Twas but a trick to poyson me with love :
 Little the wound was ; greater was the smart ;
 The finger bled, but burnt was all my heart.

The Rosarie.

ONE ask'd me where the roses grew ?
 I bade him not goe seek ;
 But forthwith bade my Fulia shew
 A bud in either cheek.⁷

Upon Cupid.

OLD wives have often told, how they Saw Cupid bitten by a flea :
 And thereupon, in tears half drown'd,
 He cry'd aloud, Help, help the wound :
 He wept, he sobb'd, he call'd to some
 To bring him Lint, and Balsamum,
 To make a Tent,⁸ and put it in,
 Where the *Stiletto*⁹ pierc'd the skin:
 Which being done, the fretfull paine
 Asswag'd, and he was well again.

⁷ Cf. 'The Rock of Rubies' onward.

⁸ = plug for a wound.

⁹ = stiletto or dagger.

The Parcæ, or, Three dainty Destinies.

*The Armilet.*¹

THREE lovely Sisters working were

(As they were closely set)

Of soft and dainty Maiden-haire,²

A curious Armelet.

I smiling, ask'd them what they did?

(Faire Destinies all three)

Who told me, they had drawn a thred

Of Life, and 'twas for me.

They shew'd me then, how fine 'twas spun :

And I reply'd thereto,

I care not now how soone 'tis done,

Or cut, if cut by you.

Sorrows succeed.

WHEN one is past, another care we have,

Thus woe succeeds a woe ; as wave a wave.

¹ = armlet : armilla, a bracelet worn on the wrist or arm.

² = A fern so called, found on walls and ruins, with an inner play on the hair of a maiden.

Cherry-pit.

JULIA and I did lately sit
 Playing for sport, at Cherry-pit :³
 She threw ; I cast ; and having thrown,
 I got the Pit, and she the Stone.

To Robin Red-brest.

L AID out for dead, let thy last kindnesse be
 With leaves and mosse-work for to cover me :
 And while the Wood-nimphs my cold corps inter,
 Sing thou my Dirge, sweet-warbling Chorister !
 For Epitaph, in Foliage, next write this,
Here, here the Tomb of Robin Herrick is.

Discontents in Devon.

MORE discontents I never had
 Since I was born, then here ;
 Where I have bee'n, and still am sad,
 In this dull Devon-shire :
 Yet justly too I must confesse ;
 I ne'r invented such
 Ennobled numbers for the Presse,
 Then where I loath'd so much.

³ A child-game, in which they threw cherry-stones into a small hole: "play at cherry-pit" (Twelfth Night, iii. 4).

To his Paternall Country.

O EARTH ! Earth ! Earth ! heare thou my voice, and be

Loving, and gentle for to cover me :
Banish'd from thee I live ; ne'r to return,
Unlesse thou giv'st my small Remains an Urne.

Cherrie-ripe.

C HERRIE-ripe, Ripe, Ripe, I cry,
Full and faire ones ; come and buy :

If so be, you ask me where
They doe grow ? I answer, There,
Where my Fulia's lips doe smile ;
There's the Land, or Cherry-Ile :
Whose Plantations fully show
All the yeere, where Cherries grow.

To his Mistresses.

P UT on your silks ; and piece by piece
Give them the scent of Amber-Greece :⁴
And for your breaths too, let them smell
Ambrosia-like, or Nectarell ;⁵
While other Gums their sweets perspire,
By your owne jewels set on fire.

⁴ See Glossarial Index, 2 v.

⁵ Probably a new-coined adjective from nectar = nectar-like.

To Anthea.

NOW is the time, when all the lights wax dim ;
 And thou (Anthea) must withdraw from him
 Who was thy servant. Dearest, bury me
 Under that Holy-oke, or Gospel-tree :⁶
 Where (though thou see'st not) thou may'st think upon
 Me, when thou yeerly go'st Procession :
 Or for mine honour, lay me in that Tombe
 In which thy sacred Reliques shall have roome.
 For my Embalming (Sweetest) there will be
 No Spices wanting, when I'm laid by thee.

The Vision to Electra.

I DREAM'D we both were in a bed
 Of Roses, almost smotherèd :
 The warmth and sweetnes had me there
 Made lovingly familiar ;
 But that I heard thy sweet breath say,
 Faults done by night, will blush by day :
 I kist thee (panting), and I call
 Night to the Record ! that was all.
 But ah ! if empty dreames so please,
 Love, give me more such nights as these.

⁶ At the processions or perambulations of the parish, the Gospel was read at certain trees, thence called 'Gospel trees.' See Brand (ed. Hazlitt) i. 112.

Dreames.

HERE we are all, by day : By night w'are hurl'd
By dreames, each one, into a sev'ral world.

Ambition.

IN man, Ambition is the common'st thing ;
Each one, by nature, loves to be a king.

His request to Julia.

JULIA, if I chance to die
Ere I print my Poetry ;
I most humbly thee desire
To commit it to the fire :
Better 'twere my Book were dead,
Then to live not perfected.

Money gets the masterie.

FIGHT thou with shafts of silver, and o'rcome,
When no force else can get the masterdome.

The Scar-fire.⁷

WATER, water I desire,
Here's a house of flesh on fire :

⁷ = a fright by fire : query—a beacon of alarm (as of invasion).

Ope' the fountains and the springs,
 And come all to Buckittings :⁸
 What ye cannot quench, pull downe ;
 Spoile a house, to save a towne :
 Better 'tis that one shu'd fall,
 Then by one to hazard all.

Upon Silvia, a Mistresse.

WHEN some shall say, Faire once my Silvia was ;
 Thou wilt complaine, False now's thy Looking-glasse :
 Which renders that quite tarnisht, which was green ;
 And Priceless⁹ now, what Peerless once had been :
 Upon thy Forme more wrinkles yet will fall,
 And comming downe, shall make no noise at all.

*Cheerfulnesse in Charitie : or,
 The sweet Sacrifice.*

TIS not a thousand Bullocks thies
 Can please those Heav'nly Deities,
 If the Vower don't express
 In his Offering, Cheerfulness.

⁸ = filling of buckets.

⁹ = valueless.

Once poore, still penurious.

GOES the world now, it will with thee goe hard :
 The fattest Hogs we grease the more with Lard.
To him that has, there shall be added more ;
Who is penurious, he shall still be poore.

Sweetnesse in Sacrifice.

'TIS not greatness they require,
 To be offer'd up by fire :
 But 'tis sweetness that doth please
Those Eternall Essences.

Steame in Sacrifice.

IF meat the Gods give, I the steame
 High-towring wil devote to them :
 Whose easie natures like it well,
 If we the roste have, they the smell.

Upon Julia's Voice.

SO smooth, so sweet, so silv'ry is thy voice,
 As, could they hear, the Damn'd would make no noise ;
 But listen to thee, (walking in thy chamber)
 Melting melodious words to Lutes of Amber.¹

¹ Amber was used to adorn musical instruments : here used by stress of rhyme.

Againe.

WHEN I thy singing next shall heare,
 Ile wish I might turne all to eare,²
 To drink in Notes, and Numbers ; such
 As blessed soules cann't heare too much :
 Then melted down, there let me lye
 Entranc'd, and lost confusedly ;
 And by thy Musique stricken mute,
 Die and be turn'd into a Lute.

All things decay and die.

ALL things decay with Time : The Forrest sees
 The growth, and down-fall of her aged trees ;
 That Timber tall, which three-score lusters stood
 The proud Dictator of the State-like wood :³
 I meane (the Sovereigne of all Plants) the Oke
 Droops, dies, and falls without the cleavers stroke.

The succession of the foure sweet months.

FIRST, April, she with mellow showrs
 Opens the way for early flowers ;
 Then after her comes smiling May,
 In a more rich and sweet aray ;

² Cf. Milton "all ear to hear" (P. L. IV. l. 410).

³ Cf. Keats, "those green-robed senators of mighty woods."

Next enters June, and brings us more
 Jems, then those two, that went before :
 Then (lastly) July comes, and she
 More wealth brings in, then all those three.

No Shipwrack of Vertue. To a friend.

THOU sail'st with others in this Argus here ;
 Nor wrack or *Bulging*⁴ thou hast cause to feare :
 But trust to this, my noble passenger ;
 Who swims with Vertue, he shall still be sure
 (Ulysses-like) all tempests to endure ;
 And 'midst a thousand gulfs to be secure.

Upon his Sister-in-Law, Mistresse

Elizab : Herrick.

FIRST, for Effusions⁵ due unto the dead,
 My solemne Vowes have here accomplishèd :
 Next, how I love thee, that my griefe must tell,
 Wherein thou liv'st for ever. Deare farewell.

Of Love. A Sonet.

HOW Love came in, I do not know,
 Whether by th' eye, or eare, or no ;

⁴ Originally bilging, from bilge or the lower part of a ship, where it swells out.

⁵ = outpourings.

Or whether with the soule it came
 (At first) infused with the same ;
 Whether in part 'tis here or there,
 Or, like the soule, whole every where :
 This troubles me : but I as well
 As any other, this can tell ;
 That when from hence she does depart,
 The out-let then is from the heart.

To Anthea.⁶

AH my Anthea ! Must my heart still break ?
 (Love makes me write, what shame forbids to speak.)

Give me a kisse, and to that kisse a score ;
 Then to that twenty, adde an hundred more :
 A thousand to that hundred : so kisse on,
 To make that thousand up a million.
 Treble that million, and when that is done,
 Let's kisse afresh, as when we first begun.
 But yet, though Love likes well such Scenes as these,
 There is an Act that will more fully please :
 Kissing and glancing, soothing, all make way
 But to the acting of this private Play :
 Name it I would ; but being blushing red,
 The rest Ile speak, when we meet both in bed.

⁶ Imitation of Catullus in the first eight lines.

*The Rock of Rubies : and
The quarrie of Pearls.⁷*

SOME ask'd me where the Rubies grew ?
And nothing I did say :
But with my finger pointed to
The lips of Julia.
Some ask'd how Pearls did grow, and where ?
Then spoke I to my Girle,
To part her lips, and shew'd them there
The Quarelets⁸ of Pearl.

Conformitie.

CONFORMITY was ever knowne
A foe to Dissolution :
Nor can we that a ruine call,
Whose crack gives crushing unto all.

TO THE KING, Upon his comming with his Army into the West.⁹

WELCOME, most welcome to our Vowes and us,
Most great, and universall Genius !

⁷ Cf. 'The Rosarie' before.

⁸ A 'quarrel' is anything squared, glass, stone, tile, &c. (Fr: Quarreau, verb quarrer, to square). A stone-quarry in various English counties is called a 'quarrel.'

⁹ The King pursued Essex into Cornwall in August, 1644, where he forced him to capitulate—a brief success in abounding disaster.

The Drooping West, which hitherto has stood
 As one, in long-lamented-widow-hood,
 Looks like a Bride now, or a bed of flowers,
 Newly refresh't, both by the Sun, and showers.
 War, which before was horrid, now appears
 Lovely in you, brave Prince of Cavaliers !
 A deale of courage ¹ in each bosome springs
 By your accesse ; (O you the best of Kings !)
 Ride on with all white² Omens ; so that where,
 Your Standard's up, we fix a Conquest there.

Upon Roses.

UNDER a Lawne, then skyes more cleare,
 Some ruffled Roses nestling were :
 And snugging³ there, they seem'd to lye
 As in a flowrie Nunnery :
 They blush'd, and look'd more fresh then flowers [than Quickned of late by Pearly showers ;
 And all, because they were possest
 But of the heat of Julia's breast :
 Which as a warme, and moistned spring,
 Gave them their ever flourishing.

¹ See Glossarial Index, s. v.

² = auspicious. See Glossarial Index, s. v.

³ Snug—to lie close, to snudge.

To the King and Queene, upon their unhappy distances.⁴

W^OE, woe to them, who (by a ball of strife)
Doe, and have parted here a Man and Wife :
CHARLS the best Husband, while MARIA strives
To be, and is, the very best of Wives :
Like Streams, you are divorc'd ; but 't will come, when
These eyes of mine shall see you mix agen.
Thus speaks the Oke,⁵ here ; C. and M. shall meet,
Treading on Amber, with their silver-feet :
Nor wil't be long, ere this accomplish'd be ;
The words found true, C. M. remember me.

Dangers wait on Kings.

A^S oft as Night is banish'd by the Morne,
So oft, we'll think, we see a King new born.

*The Cheat of Cupid : or,
The ungentle guest.⁶*

O^NE silent night of late,
When every creature rested,

⁴ The Queen's absence from England is doubtless merely intended, but there were rumours of domestic strife and consequent coldness, or 'distances.' ⁵ = the oracular tree, as the oaks of Dodona.

⁶ Anacreon : Ode 3 imitated.

Came one unto my gate,
And knocking, me molested.

Who's that (said I) beats there,
And troubles thus the Sleepie?
Cast off (said he) all feare,
And let not Locks thus keep ye.

For I a Boy am, who
By Moonlesse nights⁷ have swerved ;⁸
And all with shows wet through,
And e'en with cold half starved.

I pittifull arose,
And soon a Taper lighted ;
And did my selfe disclose
Unto the lad benighted.

I saw he had a Bow,
And Wings too, which did shiver ;
And looking down below,
I spy'd he had a Quiver.

I to my Chimney's shine
Brought him (as Love professes)

⁷ " In the hush of moonless nights," Tennyson.

⁸ = strayed or roved.

And chaf'd his hands with mine,
 And dry'd his dropping Tresses :

But when he felt him warm'd,
 Let's try this bow of ours,
 And string, if they be harm'd,
 Said he, with these late showers.

Forthwith his bow he bent,
 And wedded string and arrow,
 And struck me, that it went
 Quite through my heart and marrow.

Then laughing loud, he flew
 Away, and thus said flying,
 Adieu, mine Host, Adieu,
 Ile leave thy heart a dying.

To the reverend shade of his religious Father.

THAT for seven Lusters I did never come
 To doe the Rites to thy Religious Tombe ;
 That neither haire was cut, or true teares shed
 By me, o'r thee, (*as justments*⁹ to the dead)

⁹ From the Latin justa, funeral obsequies: query—a coinage of Herrick?

Forgive, forgive me ; since I did not know
 Whether thy bones had here their Rest, or no.¹
 But now 'tis known, Behold ; behold, I bring
 Unto thy Ghost th' Effusèd Offering :
 And look, what Smallage,² Night-shade, Cypresse, Yew,
 Unto the shades have been, or now are due,
 Here I devote ;³ And something more then so ;
 I come to pay a Debt of Birth I owe.
 Thou gav'st me life (but Mortall) ; For that one
 Favour, Ile make full satisfaction ;
 For my life mortall, Rise from out thy Herse,
 And take a life immortall from my Verse.

Delight in Disorder.

A SWEET disorder in the dresse
 Kindles in cloathes a wantonnesse :
 A Lawne about the shoulders thrown
 Into a fine distraction :
 An erring⁴ Lace, which here and there
 Enthralls the Crimson Stomacher :

¹ Herrick was a baby of a year old only when his father died ; but on this somewhat enigmatical celebration of him see our Memorial-Introduction. Line 2nd 'seven Lusters' is = 35 years, i. e. 1626 for date of composition.

² Herb. See Glossarial Index, s. v. ³ = dedicate or consecrate.

⁴ = wandering.

A Cuffe neglectfull, and thereby
 Ribbands to flow confusedly :
 A winning wave (deserving Note)
 In the tempestuous petticoate :
 A carelesse shooe-string, in whose tye
 I see a wilde civility :⁵
 Doe more bewitch me, then when Art [than
 Is too precise in every part.

To his Muse.

WERE I to give thee Baptime,⁶ I wo'd chuse
 To Christen thee, the Bride, the Bashfull
Muse,

Or Muse of Roses : since that name does fit
 Best with those Virgin-verses thou hast writ :
 Which are so cleane, so chast, as none may feare
Cato the Censor, sho'd he scan each here.

Upon Love.

LOVE scorch'd my finger, but did spare
 The burning of my heart ;

⁵ = good manners, easiness. Milton has "civil-suited morn." (Il Penseroso, l. 122) : later Dryden, "the sweet civilities of life." See Memorial-Introduction for Ben Jonson's song in The Silent Woman, "Still to be neat, still to be drest," &c.

⁶ = baptism. Query : from the French Baptême ?

To signifie, in Love my share
 Sho'd be a little part.

Little I love ; but if that he
 Wo'd but that heat recall :
 That joynt to ashes sho'd be burnt,
 Ere I wo'd love at all.

To Dean-bourn, a rude River in Devon : by which sometimes he lived.

DEAN-BOURN, farewell ; I never look to see
Deane, or thy watry incivility.

Thy rockie bottome, that doth teare thy streams,
 And makes them frantick, ev'n to all extreames ;
 To my content, I never sho'd behold,
 Were thy streames silver, or thy rocks all gold.
 Rockie thou art ; and rockie we discover
 Thy men ; and rockie are thy wayes all over.
 O men, O manners ; There and ever knowne
 To be A Rockie Generation !
 A people currish ; churlish as the seas ;
 And rude (almost) as rudest Salvages :⁷
 With whom I did, and may re-sojourne when Rockes turn to Rivers, Rivers turn to Men.

⁷ = savages or uncivilized.

Kissing Usurie.

BIANCHHA, Let Me pay the debt

I owe thee for a kisse
Thou lend'st to me ;
And I to thee
Will render ten for this :

If thou wilt say,
Ten will not pay
For that so rich a one ;
Ile cleare the summe,
If it will come
Unto a Million.

He must of right,
To th'utmost mite,
Make payment for his pleasure ;⁸
By this, I guesse,
Of happinesse
Who has a little measure.

⁸ By Hazlitt and others the commencement is put first in this stanza. Dr. Nott annotates—These lines breathe of Catullus and Secundus. See of the former Carmen 5 ; and of the latter Basiam 6.

To Julia.

HOW rich and pleasing thou, my Julia art,
 In each thy dainty, and peculiar part !
 First, for thy Queen-ship on thy head is set
 Of flowers a sweet commingled Coronet :
 About thy neck a Carcanet⁹ is bound,
 Made of the Rubie, Pearle, and Diamond :
 A golden ring, that shines upon thy thumb :¹
 About thy wrist, the rich Dardanium.²
 Between thy Breasts (then Doune of Swans more white)
 There playes the Saphire with the Chrysolite.
 No part besides must of thy selfe be known,
 But by the Topaze, Opal, Calcedon.

To Laurels.

A FUNERALL stone,
 Or Verse I covet none,
 But onely crave
 Of you, that I may have
 A sacred Laurel springing from my grave :
 Which being seen,
 Blest with perpetuall greene,

⁹ = chain for the neck, as before.

¹ Rings used to be, oddly enough, worn on the thumb.

² A Bracelet, from Dardanus so call'd. H.

May grow to be
 Not so much call'd a tree,
 As the eternall monument of me.

His Cavalier.

GIVE me that man, that dares bestride
 The active sea-horse, & with pride,
 Through that huge field of waters ride :³

Who, with his looks too, can appease
 The ruffling winds and raging Seas,
 In mid'st of all their outrages.

This, this a virtuous man can doe,
 Saile against Rocks, and split them too ;
 I ! and a world of Pikes passe through.

Zeal required in Love.

I'LE doe my best to win, when'ere I woove :
That man loves not, who is not zealous too.

The Bag of the Bee.

ABOUT the sweet bag of a Bee,
 Two Cupids fell at odds ;

³ Cf. Byron of the Sea in close of Childe Harold :—

“I was as it were a child of thee,
 And trusted to thy billows far and near,
 And laid my hands upon thy mane.”

And whose the pretty prize shu'd be,
They vow'd to ask the Gods.

Which Venus hearing, thither came,
And for their boldness stript them :
And taking thence from each his flame ;
With rods of Mirtle whipt them.

Which done, to still their wanton cries,
When quiet grown sh'ad seen them,
She kist, and wip'd thir dove-like* eyes ;
And gave the Bag between them.⁴

Love kill'd by Lack.

LET me be warme ; let me be fully fed :
Luxurious Love by Wealth is nourishèd.

Let me be leane, and cold, and once grown poore,
I shall dislike, what once I lov'd before.

To his Mistresse.

CHOOSE me your Valentine :⁵
Next, let us marry :

⁴ This little elegant composition is likewise found in a collection of poetry entitled, Wit a sporting in a Pleasant Grove of new Fancies, by H. B. 1657. N.

⁵ No chronicle affords us any satisfactory information respecting the rites of Saint Valentine, a Roman bishop beheaded under the

Love to the death will pine,
If we long tarry.

Promise, and keep your vows,
Or vow ye never :
Loves doctrine disallows
Troth-breakers ever.

You have broke promise twice
(Deare) to undoe me ;
If you prove faithlesse thrice,
None then will woe you.

To the generous Reader.

SEE, and not see ; and if thou chance t'espie
Some Aberrations in my Poetry ;
Wink at small faults, the greater, ne'rthelesse
Hide, and with them, their Father's nakedness.
Let's doe our best, our Watch and Ward to keep :
Homer himself, in a long work, may sleep.⁶

emperor Claudius, whose festival is observed on the 14th of February. There is a rural tradition, that about this period birds chuse their mates ; and it is a very ancient custom, on the day of the festival, for young people, particularly among the lower orders, to select Valentines, or sweethearts, by drawing of lots. N. See Brand s. n. Chaucer and Lydgate celebrate the festival.

⁶ Quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus. Horace: Art. Poet., l. 359.

To Criticks.

I LE write, because Ile give
 You Criticks means to live :
 For sho'd I not supply
 The Cause, th'effect wo'd die.

Duty to Tyrants.

GOOD princes must be pray'd for : for the bad
 They must be borne with, and in rev'rence had.
 Doe they first pill⁷ thee, next, pluck off thy skin ?
Good children kisse the rods, that punish sin.
 Touch not the Tyrant ; Let the Gods alone
 To strike him dead, that but usurps a Throne.

Being once blind, his request to Biancha.

WHEN age or Chance has made me blind,
 So that the path I cannot find :
 And when my falls and stumblings are
 More then the stones i'th' street by farre :
 Goe thou afore ; and I shall well
 Follow thy Perfumes by the smell :
 Or be my guide ; and I shall be
 Led by some light that flows from thee.
 Thus held, or led by thee, I shall
 In wayes confus'd, nor slip or fall.

⁷ = strip or peel : hence to spoil, to take away.

Upon Blanch.

BLANCH swears her Husband's lovely ; when a scald
 Has blear'd his eyes : Besides, his head is bald.
 Next, his wilde eares, like Lethern wings full spread,
 Flutter to flie, and beare away his head.

No want where there's little.

TO Bread and Water none is poore ;
 And having these, what need of more ?
 Though much from out the Cess⁸ be spent,
Nature with little is content.

Barly-Break : or, Last in Hell.⁹

WE two are last in Hell : what may we feare
 To be tormented, or kept Pris'ners here ?
 Alas ! If kissing be of plagues the worst,
 We'll wish, in Hell we had been Last and First.

The Definition of Beauty.

BEAUTY, no other thing is, then a Beame
 Flasht out between the Middle and Extreame.

⁸ = the count or accompt, i. e. the (total of the) income.

⁹ A country game, celebrated finely by Sidney : Poems in Fuller Worthies' Library, ii. 36 et seq.

To Dianeme.

DEARE, though to part it be a Hell,
 Yet Dianemè, now farewell :
 Thy frown (last night) did bid me goe ;
 But whither, onely Grief do's know.
 I doe beseech thee, ere we part,
 (If mercifull, as faire thou art ;
 Or else desir'st that Maids sho'd tell Thy pittie by Loves-Chronicle)
 O Dianemè, rather kill
 Me, then to make me languish stil !
 'Tis cruelty in thee to'th'height,
 Thus, thus to wound, not kill out-right :
 Yet there's a way found (if thou please)
 By sudden death to give me ease :
 And thus devis'd, doe thou but this,
 Bequeath to me one parting kisse :
 So sup'rabundant joy shall be
 The Executioner of me.

To Anthea lying in bed.

SO looks Anthea, when in bed she lyes,
 Orecome, or halfe betray'd by Tiffanies :¹

¹ = fine silk or gauze, as before.

Like to a Twi-light, or that simpring² Dawn,
 That Roses shew, when misted o're with Lawn.
 Twilight is yet, till that her Lawnes give way ;
 Which done, that Dawne, turnes then to perfect day.

To Electra.

MORE white then whitest Lillies far,
 Or Snow, or whitest Swans you are :
 More white then are the whitest Creames, [than
 Or Moone-light tinselling the streames :
 More white then Pearls, or Juno's thigh ;
 Or Pelops Arme of Yvorie.
 True, I confesse ; such Whites as these
 May me delight, not fully please :
 Till, like Ixion's cloud³ you be
 White, warme, and soft to lye with me.

A Country-life: to his Brother,

M. Tho: Herrick.⁴

THRICE, and above, blest (my soules halfe) art thou,
 In thy both Last, and Better Vow :

² = pleasant—as a smile : deteriorated since.

³ = the cloud in which Juno lay with him.

⁴ See Memorial-Introduction on this brother.

Could'st leave the City, for exchange, to see
 The Countries sweet simplicity :
 And it to know, and practice ; with intent
 To grow the sooner innocent :
 By studying to know vertue ; and to aime
 More at her nature, then her name : [than
 The last is but the least ; the first doth tell
Wayes lesse to live, then to live well :
 And both are knowne to thee, who now can'st live
Led by thy conscience ; to give
 Justice to soone-pleas'd nature ; and to show,
 Wisdome and she together goe,
 And keep one Centre : This with that conspires,
To teach Man to confine desires :
 And know, that Riches have their proper stint,⁵
 In the contented mind, not mint.
 And can'st instruct, that those who have the itch
 Of craving more, are never rich.
 These things thou know'st to'th'height, and dost prevent
 That plague ; because thou art content
 With that Heav'n gave thee with a warie hand,
 (More blessed in thy Brasse,⁶ then Land)

⁵ = quantity.

⁶ = cash : a vulgarism since.

To keep cheap Nature even, and upright ;
 To coole, not cocker ⁷ Appetite.

Thus thou canst tearcely ⁸ live to satisfie
The belly chiefly ; not the eye :

Keeping the barking stomach wisely quiet,
 Lesse with a neat,⁹ then needfull diet. [than

But that which most makes sweet thy country life,
 Is, the fruition of a wife :

Whom (stars consenting with thy Fate) thou hast
 Got, not so beautifull, as chast :

By whose warme side thou dost securely sleep
 (While Love the Centinell doth keep)

With those deeds done by day, which n'er affright
 Thy silken slumbers in the night.

Nor has the darknesse power to usher in
 Feare to those sheets, that know no sin.

But still thy wife, by chast intentions led,
 Gives thee each night a Maidenhead.

The Damaskt medowes, and the peebley streames
 Sweeten, and make soft your dreames : ¹

The Purling springs, groves, birds, and well-weav'd ?
 Bows, ?

With fields enamelèd with flowers,

⁷ = pamper.

⁸ = cleanly.

⁹ = elegant.

¹ Intentionally a syllable short, as in others following.

Present their shapes ; while fantasie discloses
Millions of Lillies mixt with Roses.

Then dream, ye heare the Lamb by many a bleat
Woo'd to come suck the milkie Teat :

While Faunus in the Vision comes to keep,
From rav'ning wolves, the fleecie sheep.

With thousand such enchanting dreams, that meet
To make sleep not so sound, as sweet :

Nor can these figures so thy rest endear,
As not to rise when Chantidere

Warnes the last Watch ; but with the Dawne dost rise

To work, but first to sacrifice ;

Making thy peace with heav'n, for some late fault,
With Holy-meale, and spirting-salt.²

Which done, thy painfull Thumb³ this sentence tells us,

Jove for our labour all things sells us.

Nor are thy daily and devout affaires

Attended with those desp'rate cares,

Th' industrious Merchant has ; who for to find
Gold, runneth to the Western Inde,

And back again, (tortur'd with fears) doth fly,
Untaught to suffer Poverty.

But thou at home, blest with securest ease,

Sitt'st, and beleev'st that there be seas,

² Folk-lore. But cf. Leviticus c. ii. ³ Ibid, but cf. S. Mark
ix. 49.

And watrie dangers ; while thy whiter hap,
 But sees these things within thy Map.
 And viewing them with a more safe survey,
 Mak'st easie Feare unto thee say,
*A heart thrice wall'd with Oke, and brasse, that man
 Had, first, durst plow the Ocean.⁴*

But thou at home without or tyde or gale,
 Canst in thy Map securely saile :
 Seeing those painted Countries ; and so guesse
 By those fine Shades, their Substances :
 And from thy Compasse taking small advice,
 Buy'st Travell at the lowest price.
 Nor are thine eares so deafe, but thou canst heare, (Far more with wonder, then with feare) [than
 Fame tell of States, of Countries, Courts, and Kings ;

And beleieve there be such things :⁵
 When of these truths, thy happyer knowledge lyes,
 More in thine eares, then in thine eyes.
 And when thou hear'st by that too-true-Report,
 Vice rules the Most, or All at Court :
 Thy pious wishes are, (though thou not there)
 Vertue had, and mov'd her Sphere.
 But thou liv'st fearlesse ; and thy face ne'r shewes
 Fortune when she comes, or goes.

⁴ Horace : Illi robur, &c., Odes i. 3.

⁵ See previous note on a lacking syllable.

But with thy equall thoughts, prepar'd dost stand,
 To take her by the either hand :
 Nor car'st which comes the first, the foule or faire ;
 *A wise man ev'ry way lies square.*⁶
 And like a surly Oke with storms perplex ;
 Growes still the stronger, strongly vext.
 Be so, bold spirit ; Stand Center-like, unmov'd ;
 And be not onely thought, but prov'd
 To be what I report thee ; and inure
 Thy selfe, if want comes to endure :
 And so thou dost : for thy desires are Confin'd to live with private Larr :⁷
 Not curious whether Appetite be fed,
 Or with the first, or second bread.
 Who keep'st no proud mouth for delicious cates :
 Hunger makes coorse meats, delicates.
 Can'st, and unurg'd, forsake that Larded fare,
 Which Art, not Nature, makes so rare ;
 To taste boyl'd Nettles, Colworts, Beets, and eate
 These, and sowre herbs, as dainty meat ?

⁶ Tennyson : " four-square to all the winds that blow." Originally quoted by Aristotle (Ethics 1. 11, and Rhetoric iii. 11, 2) from Simonides : traced back to Pythagoras.

⁷ = Household god or house itself. 'Lara' was a later mythical coinage to account for the existence of the Lar. See Glossarial Index s. v.

While soft Opinion makes thy Genius say,
Content makes all Ambrosia.

Nor is it, that thou keep'st this stricter size ⁸
 So much for want, as exercise :

To numb the sence of Dearth, which sho'd sinne
 haste it,

Thou might'st but onely see't, not taste it.

Yet can thy humble roofe maintaine a Quire
 Of singing Crickits by thy fire :

And the brisk Mouse may feast her selfe with crums,
 Till that the green-ey'd Kitling comes.

Then to her Cabbin, blest she can escape
 The sudden danger of a Rape.

And thus thy little-well-kept stock doth prove,
Wealth cannot make a life, but Love.

Nor art thou so close-handed, but can'st spend (Counsell concurring with the end)

As well as spare : still conning o'r this Theame,
 To shun the first, and last extreame.

Ordaining that thy small stock find no breach,
 Or to exceed thy Tether's reach :

But to live round, and close, and wisely true
 To thine owne selfe ; ⁹ and knowne to few.

⁸ = assize.

⁹ "To thine own self be true" (Hamlet i. 3).

Thus let thy Rurall Sanctuary be Elizium to thy wife and thee ;
 There to disport your selves with golden measure :
*For seldome*¹ use commends the pleasure.
 Live, and live blest ; thrice happy Paire ; Let Breath,
 But lost to one, be th' others death.
 And as there is one Love, one Faith, one Troth,
 Be so one Death, one Grave to both.²
 Till when, in such assurance live, ye may
 Nor feare, or wish your dying day.

Divination by a Daffadill.

WHEN a Daffadill I see,
 Hanging down his head t'wards me ;
 Guesse I may, what I must be :
 First, I shall decline my head ;
 Secondly, I shall be dead ;
 Lastly, safely buryèd.

¹ = unfrequent.

² "We two will die the self-same day." Tennyson.

To the Painter, to draw him a Picture.

COME, skilfull *Lupo*³, now, and take
 Thy Bice,⁴ thy Vmber,⁵ Pink, and Lake ;⁶
 And let it be thy Pensils strife,
 To paint a Bridgeman⁷ to the life :
 Draw him as like too, as you can,
 An old, poore, lying, flatt'ring man :
 His cheeks be-pimpled, red and blue ;
 His nose and lips of mulbrie hiew.
 Then for an easie fansie ; place
 A Burling⁸ iron for his face :
 Next, make his cheeks with breath to swell,
 And for to speak, if possible :
 But do not so ; for feare, lest he
 Sho'd by his breathing, poyson thee.

³ Martial? ⁴ A painting colour, either green or blue. Bailey s. v.

⁵ A dark and yellowish colour, so called from umbra, a shadow.

⁶ A darker colour and not so rich as carmine—further removed from vermilion than carmine.

⁷ Query—a real name of some (now forgotten) parishioner? It is a Devonshire name, usually misprinted here 'bridgeman.'

⁸ = pincers or nippers.

Upon Cuffe. Epig.

CUFFE comes to church much ; but he keeps his bed

Those Sundayes onely, whenas Briefs⁹ are read.
This makes Cuffe dull ; and troubles him the most,
Because he cannot sleep i'th' Church, free-cost.

Upon Fone a School-master. Epig.

FONE says, those mighty whiskers he do's weare
Are twigs of Birch, and willow, growing there :
If so, we'll think too (when he do's condemne Boyes to the lash) that he do's whip with them.

A Lyrick to Mirth.

WHILE the milder Fates consent,
Let's enjoy our merriment :
Drink, and dance, and pipe, and play ;
Kisse our *Dollies*¹ night and day :
Crown'd with clusters of the Vine ;
Let us sit, and quaffe our wine.

⁹ = letters-patent or licence for a collection for some charitable object.

¹ = sweet-hearts : deteriorated to prostitutes provincially, albeit a 'dolly-mop' is still distinct from the open prostitute. Burns uses it in his "Jolly Beggars," under the form of 'doxy,'

"His doxy lay within his arm" (l. 18).

Call on Bacchus ; chaunt his praise ;
 Shake the Thyrse, and bite the Bayes :
 Rouze Anacreon from the dead ;
 And return him drunk to bed :
 Sing o're Horace ; for ere long
 Death will come and mar the song :
 Then shall *Wilson*² and *Gotiere*³
 Never sing, or play more here.

*To the Earle of Westmerland.*⁴

WHEN my date's done, and my gray age must die ;
 Nurse up, great Lord, this my posterity :
 Weak though it be ; long may it grow, and stand,
 Shor'd⁵ up by you, (Brave Earle of Westmerland.)

² A celebrated composer and musician. See Memorial-Introduction.

³ In the errata this is corrected from 'Goteire' to Gotiere': query—guitar? (See Glossarial Index, s. v.) Certainly no composer of the name is known, albeit spelling his name Goutire, Dr. Nott describes him as "a celebrated musical composer and lutanist, much in favour with Charles the First." Probably in its variants it is the French form of Walter. A friend informs me 'Cutierrer' is a common Spanish name.

⁴ This was Mildmay Fane, second Earl of Westmoreland. He succeeded to the title on the death of his father, on 23rd March, 1628-9; was twice married: died 12th Feb., 1665-6, and was buried at Apthorpe co., Northampton. He was a Poet—as noticed onward.

⁵ = propped.

Against Love.

WHEN ere my heart, Love's warmth, but entertaines,

O Frost ! O Snow ! O Haile ! forbid the Banes.⁶
 One drop now deads a spark ; but if the same
 Once gets a force, Floods cannot quench the flame
 Rather then love, let me be ever lost ; [than
 Or let me 'gender with eternall frost.

Upon Julia's Riband.

AS shews the Aire, when with a Rain-bow grac'd ;
 So smiles that Riband 'bout my Julia's waste :⁷
 Or like——Nay 'tis that *Zonulet*⁸ of love,
 Wherein all pleasures of the world are wove.

The frozen Zone : or, Julia disdainfull.

WHITHER? Say, whither shall I fly,
 To slack these flames wherein I frie?⁹
 To the Treasures, shall I goe,
 Of the Raine, Frost, Haile, and Snow ?

⁶ = bans.

⁷ = waist. See Glossarial Index s. v. ⁸ Diminutive of zone.

⁹ Often used as Herrick does by Crashaw : deteriorated since.

Shall I search the under-ground,
 Where all Damps and Mists are found ?
 Shall I seek (for speedy ease)
 All the floods, and frozen seas ?
 Or descend into the deep,
 Where eternall cold does keep ?
 These may coole ; but there's a Zone
 Colder yet then any one :
 That's my Julia's breast : where dwels
 Such destructive Ysicles ;
 As that the Congelation will
 Me sooner starve, then those can kill.

An Epitaph upon a sober Matron.

WITH blamelesse carriage, I liv'd here,
 To' th' (almost) sev'n and fortieth yeare.
 Stout sons I had, and those twice three ;
 One onely daughter lent to me :
 The which was made a happy Bride,
 But thrice three Moones before she dy'd.
 My modest wedlock, that was known
 Contented with the bed of one.

*To the Patron of Poets, M. End : Porter.*¹

LET there be Patrons ; Patrons like to thee,
 Brave Porter ! Poets ne'r will wanting be :
Fabius, and Cotta, Lentulus, all live
 In thee, thou Man of Men ! who here do'st give
 Not onely subject-matter for our wit,
 But likewise Oyle of Maintenance to it :
 For which, before thy Threshold, we'll lay downe
 Our Thyse, for Scepter ; and our Baies for Crown.
 For to say truth, all Garlands are thy due ;
 The Laurell, Mirtle, Oke, and Ivie too.

The sadnesse of things for Sapho's sicknesse.

LILLIES will languish ; Violets look ill ;
 Sickly the Prim-rose ; Pale the Daffadill :
 That gallant Tulip will hang down his head,
 Like to a Virgin newly ravishèd.
 Pansies will weep ; and Marygolds will wither ;
 And keep a Fast, and Funerall together,
 If Sapho droop ; Daisies will open never,
 But bid Good-night, and close their lids for ever.

¹ One of the Wits of the period, but more famous for the many verse and prose tributes paid him by contemporaries. He seems to have been a kind of more prudent Benlowes, though not like him, a poet. See Memorial-Introduction.

Leanders Obsequies.

WHEN as Leander young was drown'd,
 No heart by love receiv'd a wound ;
 But on a Rock himselfe sate by,
 There weeping sup'rabundantly.
 Sighs numberlesse he cast about,
 And all his Tapers thus put out :
 His head upon his hand he laid ;
 And sobbing deeply, thus he said,
 Ah, cruell Sea ! and looking on't,
 Wept as he'd drowne the Hellespont.
 And sure his tongue had more exprest,
 But that his teares forbad the rest.

Hope heartens.

NONE goes to warfare, but with this intent ;
 The gaines must dead the feare of detriment.

Foure things make us happy here.

HEALTH is the first good lent to men ;
 A gentle disposition then :
 Next, to be rich by no by-ways ;
 Lastly, with friends t'enjoy our dayes.²

² From a Greek Scolion, doubtfully ascribed to Simonides : cf. Fragments, &c.

*His parting from Mrs. Dorothy Keneday.*³

WHEN I did goe from thee, I felt that smart,
 Which Bodies do, when Souls from them depart.
 Thou did'st not mind it ; though thou then might'st see Me turn'd to tears ; yet did'st not weep for me.
 'Tis true, I kist thee ; but I co'd not heare
 Thee spend a sigh, t'accompany my teare.
 Me thought 'twas strange, that thou so hard sho'dst prove,
 Whose heart, whose hand, whose ev'ry part spake love.
 Prethee (lest Maids sho'd censure thee) but say
 Thou shed'st one teare, whenas I went away ;
 And that will please me somewhat : though I know,
 And Love will swear't, my Dearest did not so.

*The Teare sent to her from Stanes.*⁴

I. GLIDE, gentle streams, and beare
 Along with you my teare
 To that coy Girle ;
 Who smiles, yet slayes
 Me with delayes ;
 And strings my tears as Pearle.

³ See Memorial-Introduction on this friend.

⁴ See Memorial-Introduction : = Stains, the royal residence.

-
2. See ! see, she's yonder set,
Making a Carkanet
 Of Maiden-flowers !
 There, there present
 This Orient,
And Pendant Pearle of ours.
 3. Then say, I've sent one more
Jem to enrich her store ;
 And that is all
 Which I can send,
 Or vainly spend,
For tears no more will fall.
 4. Nor will I seek supply
Of them, the spring's once drie ;
 But Ile devise,
 (Among the rest)
 A way that's best
How I may save mine eyes.
 5. Yet say ; sho'd she condemne
Me to surrender them ;
 Then say ; my part
 Must be to weep
 Out them, to keep
A poore, yet loving heart.

6. Say too, She wo'd have this ;
 She shall : Then my hope is,
 That when I'm poore,
 And nothing have
 To send, or save ;
 I'm sure she'll ask no more.

Upon one Lillie, who marryed with a maid call'd Rose.

WHAT times of sweetnesse this faire day fore-shows,
 Whenas the Lilly marries with the Rose !
 What next is lookt for ? but we all sho'd see
 To spring from these a sweet Posterity.

An Epitaph upon a child.

VIRGINS promis'd when I dy'd,
 That they wo'd each Primrose-tide,
 Duely, Morne and Ev'ning, come,
 And with flowers dresse my Tomb.
 Having promis'd, pay your debts,
 Maids, and here strew Violets.

Upon Scobble. Epig.

SCOBBLE⁵ for Whoredome whips his wife ; and cries,

He'll slit her nose ; But blubb'ring, she replies,
Good Sir, make no more cuts i'th' outward skin,
One slit's enough to let Adultry in.

The Houre-glasse.

THAT Houre-glasse, which there ye see

With Water fill'd, (Sirs, credit me)

The humour was, (as I have read)

But Lovers tears inchristallèd.

Which, as they drop by drop doe passe

From th' upper to the under-glasse,

Do in a trickling manner tell,

(By many a watrie syllable)

That Lovers tears in life-time shed,

Do restless run when they are dead.

⁵ This is a Devonshire name—Scobell. In the Dean Priory Register we read : Jeffery Scobble th' elder buried the fifth day of February, 1654 : he had a son named Ellis baptized in 1632. See Memorial-Introduction on Devonshire names introduced by Herrick in his Epigrams.

His Fare-well to Sack.

FAREWELL thou Thing, time-past so knowne, so deare

To me, as blood to life and spirit : Neare,
Nay, thou more neare then kindred, friend, man, wife,
Male to the female, soule to body : Life [than

To quick [our] action,⁶ or the warme soft side
Of the resigning, yet resisting Bride.

The kisse of Virgins ; First-fruits of the bed ;
Soft speech, smooth touch, the lips, the Maiden-head :
These, and a thousand sweets, co'd never be
So neare, or deare, as thou wast once to me.

+ O thou the drink of Gods, and Angels ! Wine
That scatter'st Spirit and Lust ; whose purest shine,
+ More radiant then the Summers Sun-beams shows ;
Each way illustrious, brave ; and like to those Comets we see by night ; whose shagg'd⁷ portents
Fore-tell the comming of some dire events :
Or some full flame, which with a pride aspires,
Throwing about his wild, and active fires.

⁶ The meaning is that sack is to the male life to quick, i. e. make lively his action—to the bride it is life to make quick or give life to 'her soft side.' Hence a distinctive pronoun is required, and I venture to fill in 'our.' These early Poets allowed themselves licence of speech on things about which silence had been golden.

⁷ = shaggy, hairy.

'Tis thou, 'bove⁸ Nectar, O Divinest soule !
 (Eternall in thy self) that canst controule
 That, which subverts whole nature, grief and care ;
 Vexation of the mind, and damn'd Despaire.
 'Tis thou, alone, who with thy Mistick Fan,⁹ Work'st more then Wisdome, Art, or Nature can, [than
 To rouze the sacred madnesse ; and awake
 The frost-bound-blood, and spirits ; and to make Them frantick with thy raptures, flashing through
 The soule, like lightning, and as active too.
 'Tis not Apollo can, or those thrice three Castalian sisters, sing, if wanting thee.
Horace, Anacreon both had lost their fame,
 Hadst thou not fill'd them with thy fire and flame.
Phæbean splendour ! and thou Thespian spring !
 Of which, sweet Swans must drink, before they sing
 Their true-pac'd Numbers, and their Holy-Layes,
 Which makes them worthy Cedar,¹ and the bayes.
 But why ? why longer doe I gaze upon
 Thee with the eye of admiration ?

⁸ I print 'bove for 'above.'

⁹ = the mystica vannus Iacchi of the 1st Georgic.

¹ Used for caskets ; or the oil used to preserve MSS. See Glossarial Index.

Since I must leave thee ; and enforc'd, must say
 To all thy witching beauties, Goe, Away.
 But if thy whimpring looks doe ask me why ?
 ✕ Then know, that Nature bids thee goe, not I.
 'Tis her erroneous self has made a braine
 Uncapable of such a Sovereigne,
 As is thy powerfull selfe. Prethee not smile ;
 Or smile more inly ; lest thy looks beguile
 My vowes denounc'd in zeale, which thus much show thee,
 That I have sworn, but by thy looks to know thee.
 Let others drink thee freely ; and desire
 Thee and their lips espous'd ; while I admire,
 And love thee ; but not taste thee. Let my Muse
 Faile of thy former helps ; and onely use
 Her inadult'rate strength : what's done by me
 Hereafter, shall smell of the Lamp,² not thee.

Upon Glasco. Epig.

GLASCO had none, but now some teeth has got ;
 Which though they furre,³ will neither ake, or rot.

² The classical common-place.

³ =grow foul. Cf. Martiall frequentier.

Six teeth he has, whereof twice two are known
 Made of a Haft, that was a Mutton-bone.
 Which not for use, but meerly for the sight,
 He weares all day, and drawes those teeth at night.

*Upon Mrs. Eliz : Wheeler, under the name of Amarillis.*⁴

SWEET Amarillis, by a Spring's
 Soft and soule-melting murmurings,
 Slept ; and thus sleeping, thither flew
 A Robin-red-brest ; who at view,
 Not seeing her at all to stir,
 Brought leaves and mosse to cover her :
 But while he, perking,⁵ there did prie
 About the Arch of either eye ;
 The lid began to let out day ;
 At which poore Robin flew away :
 And seeing her not dead, but all disleav'd ;
 He chirpt for joy, to see himself disceav'd.

⁴ The lady complimented in this poem was probably a relation by marriage. Herrick's first cousin, Martha, the seventh daughter of his uncle Robert, married Mr. John Wheeler. N. See Memorial-Introduction and onward. ⁵ = to hold, or toss up the head, pertly.

The Custard.

FOR second course, last night, a Custard came
 To th'board, so hot, as none co'd touch the same :
Furze, three or foure times with his cheeks did blow
 Upon the Custard, and thus coolèd so ;
 It seem'd by this time to admit the touch :
 But none co'd eate it, 'cause it stunk so much.

To Myrrha hard-hearted.

FOLD now thine armes; and hang the head,
 Like to a Lillie witherèd :
 Next, look thou like a sickly Moone ;
 Or like Focasta in a swoone.⁶
 Then weep, and sigh, and softly goe,
 Like to a widdow drown'd in woe :
 Or like a Virgin full of ruth,
 For the lost sweet-heart of her youth :
 And all because, Faire Maid, thou art
 Insensible of all my smart ;
 And of those evill dayes that be
 Now posting on to punish thee.
 The Gods are easie, and condemne
 All such as are not soft like them.

⁶ Probably some (forgotten) Play is referred to.

The Eye.

MAKE me a heaven ; and make me there
 Many a lesse and greater spheare.
 Make me the straight, and oblique lines ;
 The Motions, Latians,⁷ and the Signes.
 Make me a Chariot, and a Sun ;
 And let them through a Zodiac run :
 Next, place me Zones, and Tropicks there ;
 With all the Seasons of the Yeare.
 Make me a Sun-set ; and a Night :
 And then present the Mornings-light
 Cloath'd in her Chamlets⁸ of Delight.
 To these, make Clouds to poure downe raine ;
 With weather foule, then faire againe.
 And when, wise Artist, that thou hast,
 With all that can be, this heaven grac't ;
 Ah ! what is then this curious skie,
 But onely my Corinna's eye ?

*Upon the much lamented, Mr. J. Warr.*⁹

WHAT Wisdome, Learning, Wit, or Worth,
 Youth, or sweet Nature, co'd bring forth,

⁷ In full—translations, or local motions.

⁸ = camlet : originally made of camel's hair and silk : camelot.

⁹ Not known.

Rests here with him ; who was the Fame,
 The Volumne of himselfe, and Name.
 If, Reader, then thou wilt draw neere,
 And doe an honour to thy teare ;
 Weep then for him, for whom laments
 Not one, but many Monuments.

Upon Gryll.

G*RYLL* eats, but ne're sayes Grace ; To speak the troth,

Gryll either keeps his breath to coole his broth ;
 Or else because Grill's roste do's burn his Spit,
Gryll will not therefore say a Grace for it.

The suspition upon his over-much familiarity with a Gentlewoman.

AND must we part, because some say,
 Loud is our love, and loose our play,
 And more then well becomes the day? [than
 Alas for pittty ! and for us
 Most innocent, and injur'd thus
 Had we kept close, or play'd within,
 Suspition now had been the sinne,
 And shame had follow'd long ere this,
 T'ave plagu'd, what now unpunisht is.
 But we as fearlesse of the Sunne,
 As faultlesse ; will not wish undone,

What now is done : since where no sin
Unbolts the doore, no shame comes in.
Then, comely and most fragrant Maid,
Be you more warie, then afraid [than
Of these Reports ; because you see
The fairest most suspected be.
The common formes have no one eye,
Or care of burning jealousie
To follow them : but chiefly, where
Love makes the cheek, and chin a sphere
To dance and play in : (Trust me) there
Suspicion questions every haire.
Come, you are faire ; and sho'd be seen
While you are in your sprightfull green :
And what though you had been embrac't
By me,—were you for that unchast ?
No, no, no more then is yond' Moone,
Which shining in her perfect Noone ;
In all that great and glorious light,
Continues cold, as is the night.
Then, beauteous Maid, you may retire ;
And as for me, my chast desire
Shall move t'wards you ; although I see
Your face no more : So live you free
From Fames black lips, as you from me.

Single life most secure.

SUSPICION, Discontent, and Strife,
Come in for Dowrie with a Wife.

The Curse. A Song.

GOE, perjur'd man ; and if thou ere return
To see the small remainders in mine Urne :
When thou shalt laugh at my Religious dust ;
And ask, Where's now the colour, forme and trust
Of Womans beauty ? and with hand more rude
Rifle the Flowers which the Virgins strew'd :
Know, I have pray'd to Furie, that some wind
May blow my ashes up, and strike thee blind.

The wounded Cupid. Song.¹

CUPID as he lay among
Roses, by a Bee was stung.
Whereupon in anger flying
To his Mother, said thus crying ;
Help ! O help ! your Boy's a dying.
And why, my pretty Lad, said she ?
Then blubbering, replyèd he,

¹ Imitation of Anacreon : Od. 40.

A wingèd Snake has bitten me,
 Which Country people call a Bee.
 At which she smil'd ; then with her hairs
 And kisses drying up his tears :
 Alas ! said she, my Wag ! if this
 Such a pernicious torment is :
 Come tel me then, how great's the smart
 Of those, thou woundest with thy Dart !

To Dewes. A Song.

I BURN, I burn ; and beg of you
 To quench, or coole me with your Dew.
 I frie² in fire, and so consume,
 Although the Bile be all perfume.
 Alas ! the heat and death's the same ;
 Whether by choice, or common flame :
 To be in Oyle of Roses drown'd,
 Or water ; where's the comfort found ?
 Both bring one death ; and I die here,
 Unlesse you coole me with a Teare :
 Alas ! I call ; but ah ! I see
 Ye coole, and comfort all, but me.

² See Glossarial Index s. v.

Some comfort in calamity.

TO conquer'd men, some comfort 'tis to fall
By th'hand of him who is the Generall.

The Vision.

SITTING alone (as one forsook)
Close by a Silver-shedding Brook ;
With hands held up to Love, I wept ;
And after sorrowes spent, I slept :
Then in a Vision I did see
A glorious forme appeare to me :
A Virgins face she had ; her dresse
Was like a sprightly Spartanesse.
A silver bow with green silk strung,
Down from her comely shoulders hung :
And as she stood, the wanton Aire
Dangled the ringlets of her haire.
Her legs were such Diana shows,
When tuckt up ³ she a-hunting goes ;
With Buskins shortned to descric
The happy dawning of her thigh :
Which when I saw, I made accesse
To kisse that tempting nakednesse :

³ Cf. Hymn to Ceres (erroneously) ascribed to Homer, 176, and Catullus Nupt. Pel. et Thet., 128.

But she forbad me, with a wand
 Of Mirtle she had in her hand :
 And chiding me, said, Hence, Remove,
Herrick, thou art too coorse to love.

Love me little, love me long.

YOU say, to me-wards your affection's strong ;
 Pray love me little, so you love me long.
 Slowly goes farre : the meane is best : Desire
 Grown violent, do's either die, or tire.

Upon a Virgin kissing a Rose.

'T WAS but a single Rose,
 Till you on it did breathe ;
 But since (me thinks) it shows
 Not so much Rose, as Wreathe.

Upon a Wife that dyed mad with Jealousie.

IN this little Vault she lyes,
 Here, with all her jealousies :
 Quiet yet ; but if ye make
 Any noise, they both will wake,
 And such spirits raise, 'twill then
 Trouble Death to lay agen.

*Upon the Bishop of Lincolne's Imprisonment.*⁴

NEVER was Day so over-sick with showres,
 But that it had some intermitting houres.
 Never was night so tedious, but it knew
 The Last Watch out, and saw the Dawning too.
 Never was Dungeon so obscurely deep,
 Wherein or Light, or Day, did never peep.
 Never did Moone so ebbe, or seas so wane,
 But they left Hope-seed to fill up againe.
 So you, my Lord, though you have now your stay,
 Your Night, your Prison, and your Ebbe ; you may Spring up afresh ; when all these mists are spent,
 And Star-like, once more, guild⁵ our Firmament.
 Let but That Mighty Cesar speak, and then,
 All bolts, all barres, all gates shall cleave ; as when
 That Earth-quake shook the house, and gave the stout Apostles, way (unshackled) to goe out.⁶
 This, as I wish for, so I hope to see ;
 Though you (my Lord) have been unkind to me :⁷

⁴ This 'imprisoned' Bishop was the Statesman-Bishop Williams. He was elected Bishop of Lincoln 3rd Aug., 1621, and consecrated 11th Nov: translated to York in 1641.

⁵ = gild.

⁶ Acts of the Apostles, c. xvi.

⁷ See Memorial-Introduction.

To wound my heart, and never to apply,
 (When you had power) the meanest remedy :
 Well ; though my griefe by you was gall'd,⁸ the more ;
 Yet I bring Balme and Oile to heal your sore.

Disswasions from Idlenesse.

CYNTHIUS pluck ye by the eare,
 That ye may good doctrine heare.
 Play not with the maiden-haire ;⁹
 For each Ringlet there's a snare.
 Cheek, and eye, and lip, and chin ;
 These are traps to take fooles in.
 Armes, and hands, and all parts else,
 Are but Toiles, or Manicles
 Set on purpose to enthrall
 Men, but Slothfulls most of all.
 Live employ'd, and so live free
 From these fetters ; like to me
 Who have found, and still can prove,
*The lazie man the most doth love.*¹

⁸ = to fret or rub.

⁹ See Glossarial Index s. v.

¹ Thus the great master of Love's art : Cedit amor rebus ; res age, tutus eris. Ovid. Remed. Amor. v. 151. N.

Upon Strut.

STRUT, once a Fore-man of a Shop we knew ;
 But turn'd a Ladies Usher now, ('tis true :)
 Tell me, has Strut got ere a title more ?
 No ; he's but Fore-man, as he was before.

An Epithalamie to Sir Thomas Southwell and his Ladie.²

I.

NOW, now's the time ; so oft by truth
 Promis'd sho'd come to crown your youth.
 Then Faire ones, doe not wrong
 Your joyes, by staying long :
 Or let Love's fire goe out,
 By lingring thus in doubt :
 But learn, that Time once lost,
 Is ne'r redeem'd by cost.

Then away ; come, Hymen guide
 To the bed, the bashfull Bride.

² There appears to have been two Sir Thomas Southwells: one settled in Ireland, and too early for this 'Epithalamie,' The other was knighted 21st July, 1615, and died in 1642. His relict, Mary, administered to his estate 16th December, 1642, when he was described as of Angleton, in Sussex (= Hangleton, near Brighton). She died almost immediately after, as on 30th January following,

II.

Is it (sweet maid) your fault, these holy Bridall-Rites goe on so slowly ?

Deare, is it this you dread,
The losse of Maiden-head ?
Beleeve me ; you will most Esteeme it when 'tis lost :
Then it no longer keep,
Lest Issue lye asleep.

Then away ; come, Hymen guide
To the bed, the bashfull Bride.

III.

These Precious-Pearly-Purling³ teares,
But spring from ceremonious feares.

And 'tis but Native shame,
That hides the loving flame :
And may a while controule
The soft and am'rous soule ;
But yet, Loves fire will wast
Such bashfulnesse at last.

Then away ; come, Hymen guide
To the bed, the bashfull Bride.

Sir Matthew Menes, K. B., administered to his estate, the relict Mary being dead. This 'Epithalamie' must have been written early.

³ See Glossarial Index s. v.

IV.

Night now hath watch'd her self half blind ;
 Yet not a Maiden-head resign'd !
 'Tis strange, ye will not flie
 To Love's sweet mysterie.
 Might yon Full-Moon the sweets
 Have, promis'd to your sheets ;
 She soon wo'd leave her spheare,
 To be admitted there.
 Then away ; come, Hymen guide
 To the bed, the bashfull Bride.

V.

On, on devoutly, make no stay ;
 While *Domiduca*⁴ leads the way :
 And Genius who attends
 The bed for luckie ends :⁵
 With Juno goes the houres,
 And Graces strewing flowers.
 And the boyes with sweet tune sing,
Hymen, O Hymen bring

⁴ A coined word, I presume, for the paranympha pronuba, or bride-maid attending the bride. N. Dr. Nott is mistaken: it is one of the eight nymphal names of Juno. Cf. Ben Jonson's Masque of Hymen, and his notes thereon.

⁵ = the power that begets, the lingam deity.

Home the Turtles; Hymen guide
To the bed, the bashfull Bride.

VI.

Behold! how Hymens Taper-light
Shews you how much is spent of night.

See, see the Bride-grooms Torch

Halfe wasted in the porch.

And now those Tapers five,

That shew the womb shall thrive:

Their silv'rie flames advance,

To tell all prosp'rous chance

Still shall crown the happy life

Of the good man and the wife.⁶

VII.

Move forward then your Rosie feet,

And make, what ere they touch, turn sweet.⁷

⁶ Borne by the Quinque Cerei in Roman marriages, and supposed by some to represent the highest number of births at one time. Throughout Herrick combines classical customs with English, even when speaking of home festivities and evening merriments and drinking.

⁷ "The meadows your walks have left so sweet,"—Tennyson: and again, "Her feet have touched the meadows and left the daisies rosy" (Maud). Earlier in Herrick's great friend:

"Where she went the flowers took thickest root,

As she had sow'd them with her odorous foot."

(Sad Shepherd i. 1).

May all, like flowrie Meads
 Smell, where your soft foot treads ;
 And every thing assume
 To it, the like perfume :
 As Zephrus when he 'spires
 Through Woodbine, and Sweet-bryers.
 Then away ; come Hymen, guide
 To the bed, the bashfull Bride.

VIII.

And now the yellow Vaile,⁸ at last,
 Over her fragrant cheek is cast.
 Now seems she to expresse
 A bashfull willingnesse :⁹
 Shewing a heart consenting ;
 As with a will repenting.
 Then gently lead her on
 With wise suspicion :
 For that, Matrons say, a measure
 Of that Passion sweetens Pleasure.

⁸ Saffron, the colour appropriated to marriage, and in which Hymen is always supposed to be dressed.

⁹ Tardet ingenuus pudor : Catullus. Epithal. Julie et Manlii.

Transfer omine cum bono

Limen aureolos pedes. Idem. N.

IX.

You, you that be of her neerest kin,
Now o're the threshold force her in.¹

But to avert the worst ;
Let her, her fillets first
Knit to the posts²: this point
Remembring, to anoint
The sides : for 'tis a charme
Strong against future harme :

And the evil deads, the which
There was hidden by the Witch.

X.

O Venus! thou, to whom is known
The best way how to loose the Zone
Of Virgins ! Tell the Maid,
She need not be afraid :
And bid the Youth apply
Close kisses, if she cry :
And charge, he not forbears
Her, though she woee with teares.

¹ The wife in Roman marriages was lifted over the threshold, for which various differing reasons were alleged.

² A custom in Roman marriages, as is the anointing with its supposed averting power.

Tel them, now they must adventer,
 Since that Love and Night bid enter.

XI.

No Fatal Owle the Bedsted keeps,
 With direful notes to fright your sleeps :
 No Furies, here about,
 To put the Tapers out,
 Watch, or did make the bed :
 'Tis Omen full of dread :
 But all faire signs appeare
 Within the Chamber here.
Funo here, far off, doth stand
 Cooling sleep with charming wand.

XII.

Virgins, weep not ; 'twill come, when,
 As she, so you'l be ripe for men.
 Then grieve her not, with saying
 She must no more a Maying :
 Or by Rose-buds devine,
 Who'l be her Valentine.³
 Nor name those wanton reaks⁴
 Y'ave had at Barly-breaks.

³ St. Valentine's day, Feb. 14th—the name drawn by lot thereon.
 See Glossarial Index s. v.

⁴ = pranks.

But now kisse her, and thus say,
Take time Lady while ye may.

XIII.

Now barre the doors, the Bride-groom puts
The eager Boyes to gather Nuts.⁵

And now, both Love and Time
To their full height doe clime :

O ! give them active heat

And moisture, both compleat :

Fit Organs for encrease,

To keep, and to release

That, which may the honour'd Stem
Circle with a Diadem.⁶

XIV.

And now, Behold ! the Bed or Couch
That ne'r knew Brides, or Bride-grooms touch,
Feels in it selfe a fire ;
And tickled with Desire,

⁵ The ceremony of throwing nuts at a wedding, which boys scrambled for, was of Athenian origin. Besides Catullus, Virgil and many other classic writers mention the custom ; hence nucibus relictis became proverbial, for the renouncing of childhood. See Persius, Sat. i., ver. 10. N. On line preceding : Claudite ostia virgines : Catullus, as before.

⁶ Proverbs xvii. 6.

Pants with a Downie brest,
 As with a heart possest :
 Shrugging as it did move,
 Ev'n with the soule of love.
 And (oh !) had it but a tongue,
 Doves, 'two'd say, yee bill too long.

XV.

O enter then ! but see ye shun
 A sleep, untill the act be done.
 Let kisses, in their close,
 Breathe as the Damask Rose :
 Or sweet, as is that gumme
 Doth from *Panchaia*⁷ come.
 Teach Nature now to know,
 Lips can make Cherries grow
 Sooner, then she, ever yet,
 In her wisdome co'd beget.

XVI.

On your minutes, hours, dayes, months, years,
 Drop the fat blessing of the sphears.
 That good, which Heav'n can give
 To make you bravely live ;

⁷ See Glossarial Index s. v.

Fall, like a spangling dew,⁸
 By day, and night on you.
 May Fortunes Lilly-hand
 Open at your command ;
 With all luckie Birds to side
 With the Bride-groom, and the Bride.

XVII.

Let bounteous Fate your spindles full
 Fill, and winde up with whitest wooll.⁹
 Let them not cut the thred
 Of life, untill ye bid.
 May Death yet come at last ;
 And not with desp'rate hast :
 But when ye both can say,
 Come, Let us now away.
 Be ye to the Barn then born,
 Two, like two ripe shocks of corn.

⁸ Cf. "The benediction of these covering heavens
 Fall on your heads like dew,"

(Cymb., v. 5, ll. 350-1 : cf. Henry VIII., iv. 2, l. 133.)

⁹ Cf. Ben Jonson's Hue and Cry after Cupid :—
 [James coming]

"That was reserved until the Parcae spun
 Their whitest wool ; and then his thread begun."

Tears are Tongues.

WHEN Fulia chid, I stood as mute the while,
 As is the fish, or tonguelesse Crocodile.¹
 Aire coyn'd to words, my Fulia co'd not heare ;
 But she co'd see each eye to stamp² a teare :
 By which, mine angry Mistresse might descry,
 Teares are the noble language of the eye.
 And when true love of words is destitute,
 The Eyes by tears speak, while the Tongue is mute.³

[Epitaph] Upon a young mother of many children.

LET all chaste Matrons, when they chance to see
 My num'rous issue: Praise, and pittie me.
 Praise me, for having such a fruitfull wombe :
 Pity me too, who found so soone a Tomb.

To Electra.

I LE come to thee in all those shapes
 As Jove did, when he made his rapes :
 Onely, Ile not appeare to thee,
 As he did once to Semele.

¹ Long a vulgar error.

² = Coin—there being a parallelism with former line.

³ Cf. Sidney 'dumb eloquence,' and Daniel 'silent rhetoric' in Memorial-Introduction.

Thunder and Lightning Ile lay by,
 To talk with thee familiarly.
 Which done, then quickly we'll undresse
 To one and th'others nakednesse.
 And ravisht, plunge into the bed,
 (Bodies and souls comminglèd)
 And kissing, so as none may heare,
 We'll weary ⁴ all the Fables ⁵ there.

His wish.

IT is sufficient if we pray
 To Jove, who gives, and takes away :
 Let him the Land and Living finde ;
 Let me alone to fit the mind.

His Protestation to Perilla.

NOONE-DAY and Midnight shall at once be scene :

Trees, at one time, shall be both sere and greene :
 Fire and water shall together lye
 In one-self-sweet-conspiring sympathie :
 Summer and Winter shall at one time show
 Ripe eares of corne, and up to th'eaes in snow :

⁴ = wear out or exhaust.

⁵ i. e. told of Jove's amours.

Seas shall be sandlesse ; Fields devoid of grasse ;
 Shapelesse the world (as when all Chaos was)
 Before, my deare Perilla, I will be False to my vow, or fall away from thee.

Love perfumes all parts.

IF I kisse Anthea's brest,
 There I smell the Phenix nest :
 If her lip, the most sincere ⁶
 Altar of Incense, I smell there.
 Hands, and thighs, and legs, are all Richly Aromaticall.
 Goddesses Isis can't transfer
 Musks and Ambers more from her : ⁷
 Nor can Juno sweeter be,
 When she lyes with Jove, then she. [than

To Julia.

PERMIT me, Julia, now to goe away ;
 Or by thy love, decree me here to stay.
 If thou wilt say, that I shall live with thee :
 Here shall my endless Tabernacle be :
 If not, (as banisht) I will live alone
 There, where no language ever yet was known.

⁶ = pure.

⁷ See Glossarial Index s. v.

On himselfe.

LOVE-SICK I am, and must endure
 A desp'rate grief, that finds no cure.
 Ah me! I try; and trying, prove,
No Herbs have power to cure Love.
 Only one Sovereign salve, I know,
 And that is Death, the end of Woe.

Vertue is sensible of suffering.

THOUGH a wise man all pressures can sustaine;
 His vertue still is sensible of paine:
 Large shoulders though he has, and well can beare,
 He feeles when Packs⁸ do pinch him; and the where.

The cruell Maid.

AND,⁹ Cruell Maid, because I see
 You scornfull of my love, and me:
 Ile trouble you no more; but goe
 My way, where you shall never know
 What is become of me: there I
 Will find me out a path to die;
 Or learne some way how to forget
 You, and your name, for ever ~~Y~~ yet

⁸ = loads. ⁹ Unusual to begin with 'And.' In our own generation Dibdin starts off with "And have you not heard of a jolly young waterman," &c. See Glossarial Index s. v.

Ere I go hence ; know this from me,
 What will, in time, your Fortune be :
 This to your coynesse I will tell ;
 And having spoke it once, Farewell.
 The Lillie will not long endure ;
 Nor the Snow continue pure :
 The Rose, the Violet, one day
 See, both these Lady-flowers decay :
 And you must fade, as well as they.
 And it may chance that Love may turn,
 And (like to mine) make your heart burn
 And weep to see't ; yet this thing doe,
 That my last Vow commends to you :
 When you shall see that I am dead,
 For pittie let a teare be shed ;
 And (with your Mantle o're me cast)
 Give my cold lips a kisse at last :
 If twice you kisse, you need not feare,
 That I shall stir, or live more here.
 Next, hollow out a Tombe to cover
 Me ; me, the most despisèd Lover :
 And write thereon, This, Reader, know,
*Love kill'd this man.*¹ No more but so.

¹ Huic misero fatum dura puella fuit. Propertius : Eleg. I. Lib. 2, ver. ult. N.

To Dianeme.

SWEET, be not proud of those two eyes,
 Which Star-like sparkle in their skies :
 Nor be you proud, that you can see
 All hearts your captives; yours, yet free :
 Be you not proud of that rich haire,
 Which wantons with the Love-sick aire :
 Whenas that Rubie, which you weare,
 Sunk from the tip of your soft eare,
 Will last to be a precious Stone,
 When all your world of Beautie's gone.

TO THE KING,

To cure the Evill.²

TO find that Tree of Life, whose Fruits did feed,
 And Leaves did heale, all sicke of humane seed :
 To finde Bethesda, and an Angel there,
 Stirring the waters,³ I am come ; and here,
 At last, I find, (after my much to doe)
 The Tree, Bethesda, and the Angel too :

² Scrofula being 'the King's evil' the reference is to scrofulous disease of the joints and limbs. See line 8. It is astonishing and humiliating how long this superstitious belief in the royal touch lingered. Originally it held a noble tradition. ³ St. John, c. v.

And all in Your Blest Hand, which has the powers
 Of all those suppling-healing herbs and flowers.
 To that soft Charm, that Spell, that Magick Bough,
 That high Enchantment I betake me now :
 And to that Hand, (the Branch of Heavens faire Tree)
 I kneele for help ; O ! lay that hand on me,
 Adorèd Cesar ! and my Faith is such,
 I shall be heal'd, if that my KING but touch.
 The Evill is not Yours : my sorrow sings,
 Mine is the Evill, but the Cure, the KINGS.

His misery in a Mistresse.

WATER, Water I espie :

Come, and coole ye ; all who frie⁴
 In your loves ; but none as I.

Though a thousand showres be Still a falling, yet I see
 Not one drop to light on me.

Happy you, who can have seas
 For to quench ye, or some ease
 From your kinder Mistresses.

I have one, and she alone,
 Of a thousand thousand known,
 Dead to all compassion.

⁴ See Glossarial Index s. v.

Such an one, as will repeat
Both the cause, and make the heat
More by Provocation great.

Gentle friends, though I despaire
Of my cure, doe you beware
Of those Girles, which cruell are.

Upon Jollies wife.

FIRST, Jollies wife is lame ; then next, loose-hipt :
Squint ey'd, hook-nos'd ; and lastly, Kidney-lipt.

To a Gentlewoman objecting to him his gray haire.

AM I despis'd, because you say,
And I dare sweare, that I am gray ?
Know, Lady, you have but your day :
And time will come when you shall weare
Such frost and snow upon your haire ;
And when (though long, it comes to passe)
You question with your Looking-glasse ;
And in that sincere⁵ Christall seek,
But find no Rose-bud in your cheek :
Nor any bed to give the shew
Where such a rare Carnation grew.

⁵ = truth-telling.

Ah! then too late, close in your chamber keeping,
 It will be told
 That you are old ;
 By those true teares y'are weeping.

To Cedars.

IF 'mongst my many Poems, I can see
 One, onely, worthy to be washt by thee :⁶
 I live for ever ; let the rest all lye
 In dennes of Darkness, or condemn'd to die.

Upon Cupid.

LOVE, like a Gypsie, lately came ;
 And did me much importune
 To see my hand ; that by the same
 He might fore-tell my Fortune.

He saw my Palme ; and then, said he,
 I tell thee, by this score here ;
 That thou, within few months, shalt be
 The youthfull Prince D'Amour here.

⁶ From Horace

..... " carmina fingi

Posse linenda cedro...." (Epist. ad Pis. 332: vi. ll. 331-2).

Cf. "A Dirge..... Bernard Stuart," and Glossarial Index s. v.
 But could the Bible-use of 'cedar' be intended? See Leviticus xiv.
 4: Num. xix. 6.

I smil'd ; and bade him once more prove,⁷
 And by some crosse-line show it ;
 That I co'd ne'r be Prince of Love,
 Though here the Princely Poet.⁸

How Primroses came green.

VIRGINS, time-past, known were these,
 Troubled with Green-sicknesses,
 Turn'd to flowers : Stil the hieu,
 Sickly Girles, they beare of you.

*To Jos : Lo : Bishop of Exeter.*⁹

WHOM sho'd I feare to write to, if I can Stand before you, my learn'd Diocesan?
 And never shew blood-guiltinesse, or feare
 To see my Lines Excathedrated here.
 Since none so good are, but you may condemne ;
 Or here so bad, but you may pardon them.
 If then, (my Lord) to sanctifie my Muse
 One onely Poem out of all you'l chuse ;
 And mark it for a Rapture nobly writ,
 'Tis Good Confirm'd ; for you have Bishop't it.

⁷ = try.

⁸ See Memorial-Introduction.

⁹ The illustrious and venerable Joseph Hall: born 1574: died 1656. His "Satires" are still quick as well as his "Meditations" &c. &c.

Upon a black Twist, rounding the Arme of the Countesse of Carlile.¹

I SAW about her spotlesse wrist,
Of blackest silk, a curious twist ;
Which, circumvolving gently, there
Enthrall'd her Arme, as Prisoner.
Dark was the Jayle ; but as if light
Had met t'engender with the night ;
Or so, as Darknesse made a stay
To shew at once, both night and day.

¹ This was most probably Margaret 3rd. d. of Francis Earl of Bedford and lady of James Hay, the 2nd. of that name Earl of Carlisle ; who succeeded his father James 1636 ; she being the then Countess at the time Herrick published his Hesperides. Yet might the poet have written his Lines on the Lady Lucy, 2nd wife of James, 1st earl of Carlisle, who was celebrated for her wit and beauty, and at the time Herrick's book came out must have been about the age of fifty ; she was d. of Henry Percy, 9th earl of Northumberland : her character is found drawn up at the head of A Collection of Letters made by Sir Tobie Mathews, Knight, and dedicated to her ladyship : it is a curious and now rare little book, printed 1660. Waller wrote many elegant verses on this "Bright Carlisle of the court of heaven." N. The latter was all but certainly Herrick's Countess. Davies of Hereford places her among his "Worthy Persons."

One² fancie more ! but if there be Such Freedome in Captivity ;
 I beg of Love, that ever I
 May in like Chains of Darknesse lie.

On himselfe.

I FEARE no Earthly Powers ;
 But care for crowns of flowers :
 And love to have my Beard
 With Wine and Oile besmear'd.
 This day Ile drowne all sorrow ;
 Who knowes to live to morrow ?³

Upon Pagget.

PAGGET, a School-boy, got a Sword, and then
 He vow'd Destruction both to Birch, and Men :
 Who wo'd not think this Yonker⁴ fierce to fight ?
 Yet comming home, but somewhat late, (last night)
 Untrusse, his Master bade him ; and that word
 Made him take up his shirt, lay down his sword.

² Misprinted "I" self-evidently an error for "one" which was probably written as 1 = one fancy more.

³ So Mickle in the well-known Scottish song :

"The present moment is our ain

The neist we never saw."

⁴ = Youngster, youth.

A Ring presented to Julia.

JULIA, I bring
To thee this Ring,⁵

Made for thy finger fit ;
To shew by this,
That our love is
(Or sho'd be) like to it.

Close though it be,
The joynt is free : ·
So when Love's yoke is on,
It must not gall,
Or fret at all
With hard oppression.

But it must play
Still either way ;
And be, too, such a yoke,
As not too wide,
To over-slide ;
Or be so strait to choak.

So we, who beare,
This beame, must reare
Our selves to such a height :

⁵ Probably a gemmal ring.

As that the stay
Of either may
Create the burden light.

And as this round
Is no where found
To flaw, or else to sever :
So let our love
As endless prove ;
And pure as Gold for ever.

To the Detracter.

WHERE others love, and praise my Verses ; still Thy long-black-Thumb-nail marks 'em out for ill :

A fellow take it, or some Whit-flaw⁶ come
For to unslate, or to untile that thumb !
But cry thee Mercy : Exercise thy nailes
To scratch or claw, so that thy tongue not railes :
Some numbers prurient are, and some of these
Are wanton with their itch ; scratch, and 'twill please.

⁶ = Whit-low : a swelling at end of finger next the nail : vulgarly whit-flow or flaw.

Upon the same.

I ASK'T thee oft, what Poets thou hast read,
 And lik'st the best? Still thou reply'st, The dead.
 I shall, ere long, with green turfs cover'd be;
 Then sure thou't like, or thou wilt envie me.

Julia's Petticoat.

THY Azure Robe, I did behold,
 As ayrie as the leaves of gold:
 Which erring⁷ here, and wandring there,
 Pleas'd with transgression ev'ry where: —
 Sometimes 'two'd pant, and sigh, and heave,
 As if to stir it scarce had leave:
 But having got it; thereupon,
 'Two'd make a brave expansion.
 And pounc't⁸ with Stars, it shew'd to me
 Like a Celestiall Canopie.
 Sometimes 'two'd blaze, and then abate,
 Like to a flame growne moderate:
 Sometimes away 'two'd wildly fling;
 Then to thy thighs so closely cling,

⁷ = blowing aside or deviating.

= sprinkled as was dust, before blotting-paper, over writing.

That some conceit did melt me downe,
 As Lovers fall into a swoone :
 And all confus'd, I there did lie
 Drown'd in Delights ; but co'd not die.
 That Leading Cloud, I follow'd still,
 Hoping t'ave seene of it my fill ;
 But ah ! I co'd not : sho'd it move
 To Life Eternal, I co'd love.

To Musick.

BEGIN to charme, and as thou stroak'st mine eares
 With thy enchantment, melt me into tears.
 Then let thy active hand scu'd o're thy Lyre :
 And make my spirits frantick with the fire.
 That done, sink down into a silv'rie straine ;
 And make me smooth as Balme, and Oile againe.

Distrust.

TO safe-guard Man from wrongs, there nothing must
 Be truer to him, than a wise Distrust. [than
 And to thy selfe be best this sentence knowne,
Heare all men speak ; but credit few or none.

Corinna's going a Maying.⁹

GET up, get up for shame, the Blooming Morne
 Upon her wings presents the god unshorne.¹
 See how Aurora throwes her faire
 Fresh-quilted colours² through the aire :
 Get up, sweet Slug-a-bed, and see
 The Dew bespangling Herbe and Tree.
 Each Flower has wept, and bow'd toward the East,
 Above an houre since ; yet you not drest,
 Nay ! not so much as out of bed ?
 When all the Birds have Mattens seyde,
 And sung their thankfull Hymnes : 'tis sin,
 Nay, profanation to keep in,
 Whenas a thousand Virgins on this day,
 Spring, sooner then the Lark, to fetch in May. [than
 Rise ; and put on your Foliage, and be seene
 To come forth, like the Spring-time, fresh and greene ;

⁹ See Memorial-Introduction for parallels. Dr. Nott annotates here : The ceremony of going a Maying, and the May Festivities, were once of great notoriety : though now almost in disuse, or but faintly shadowed in the lower orders of people : they were observed by royalty even. Stowe, quoting Hall, gives an account of Henry VIII's riding a Maying, with his queen, Catharine, to the high ground on Shooter's Hill, accompanied by a train of the nobility.

¹ = Apollo. ² Cf. Milton's 'Nativity,' l. 146, 'tissued clouds.'

And sweet as Flora. Take no care
 For Jewels for your Gowne, or Haire :
 Feare not ; the leaves will strew
 Gemms in abundance upon you :

Besides, the childhood of the Day has kept,
 Against you come, some Orient Pearls unwept :

Come, and receive them while the light
 Hangs on the Dew-locks of the night :
 And Titan on the Eastern hill
 Retires himselfe, or else stands still Till you come forth. Wash, dresse, be briefe in praying :

Few Beads³ are best, when once we goe a Maying.

Come, my Corinna, come ; and comming, marke *
 How each field turns a street ; each street a Parke
 Made green, and trimm'd with trees : see how Devotion gives each House a Bough,
 Or Branch : Each Porch, each doore, ere this,
 An Arke a Tabernacle is Made up of white-thorn neatly enterwove ;

 As if here were those cooler shades of love.⁴

³ = prayers.

⁴ It is an ancient custom in Devon and Cornwall to deck the porches of houses with boughs of sycamore and hawthorn on May-day.

Can such delights be in the street,
 And open fields, and we not see't?
 Come, we'll abroad ; and let's obey
 The Proclamation made for May :
 And sin no more, as we have done, by staying ;
 But my Corinna, come, let's goe a Maying.

There's not a budding Boy, or Girle, this day,
 But is got up, and gone to bring in May.

A deale of Youth,⁵ ere this, is come Back, and with White-thorn laden home.
 Some have dispatcht their Cakes and Creame,
 Before that we have left to dreame :

And some have wept, and woo'd, and plighted Troth,
 And chose their Priest, ere we can cast off sloth :

Many a green-gown⁶ has been given ;
 Many a kisse, both odde and even :
 Many a glance too has been sent

From out the eye, Love's Firmament :
 Many a jest told of the Keyes betraying
 This night, and Locks pickt,⁷ yet w'are not a Maying.

⁵ See Glossarial Index s. v.

⁶ Giving a maid a green gown was, in its purer sense, throwing her on the grass sportively.

⁷ The usual rural tricks of sweathearts, with (unhappily) a double meaning.

Come, let us goe, while we are in our prime ;
And take the harmlesse follie of the time.

We shall grow old apace, and die
Before we know our liberty.

Our life is short ; and our dayes run
As fast away as do's the Sunne :

And as a vapour, or a drop of raine
Once lost, can ne'r be found againe :

So when or you or I are made
A fable, song, or fleeting shade ;
All love, all liking, all delight

Lies drown'd with us in endlesse night.⁸

Then while time serves, and we are but decaying ;
Come, my Corinna, come, let's goe a Maying.

On Julia's breath.

BREATHE, Julia, breathe, and I'le protest,

Nay more, I'le deeply sweare,

That all the Spices of the East

Are circumfusèd⁹ there.

⁸ This concluding stanza is in the same spirit with Catullus's fifth Carmen. N.

⁹ =shed round about.

Upon a Child. An Epitaph.

BUT borne, and like a short Delight,
 I glided by my Parents sight.
 That done, the harder Fates deny'd
 My longer stay, and so I dy'd.
 If pitying my sad Parents Teares,
 You'l spil a tear or two, with theirs :
 And with some flowrs my grave bestrew,
 Love and they'l thank you for't. Adieu.

A Dialogue betwixt Horace and Lydia, Translated¹ Anno 1627, and set by Mr. Ro: Ramsey.²

Hor. WHILE, Lydia, I was lov'd of thee,
 Nor any was preferr'd 'fore me
 To hug thy whitest neck : Then I, [than
 The Persian King liv'd not more happily.

Lyd. While thou no other didst affect,
 Nor Cloe was of more respect ;
 Then Lydia, far-fam'd Lydia,
 I flourish't more then Roman Ilia.

¹ Horace : Carm. III. 9.

² The name of this Composer is not found in any of the musical authorities.

Hor. Now Thracian Cloe governs me,
 Skilfull i' th' Harpe, and Melodie :
 For whose affection, Lydia, I
 (So Fate spares her) am well content to die.

Lyd. My heart now set on fire is
 By Ornithes sonne,³ young Calais ;
 For whose commutuell flames here I
 (To save his life) twice am content to die.

Hor. Say our first loves we sho'd revoke,
 And sever'd, joyne in brazen yoke :
 Admit I Cloe put away,
 And love again love-cast-off Lydia ?

Lyd. Though mine be brighter then the Star ;
 Thou lighter then the Cork by far ; [than Rough as th' Adratick sea, yet I
 Will live with thee, or else for thee will die.

The captiv'd Bee: or, The Little Filcher.

AS Julia once a-slumb'ring lay,
 It chanc't a Bee did flie that way,

³ Me torret face mutua

Thurini Calais filius Ornyti (ll. 14-15.)

(After a dew, or dew-like shower)
 To tipple freely in a flower.
 For some rich flower, he took the lip
 Of Julia, and began to sip ;
 But when he felt he suckt from thence
 Hony, and in the quintessence :
 He drank so much he scarce co'd stir ;
 So Julia took the pilferer.
 And thus surpriz'd (as Filchers use)
 He thus began himselfe t'excuse :
 Sweet Lady-Flower, I never brought Hither the least one theeving thought :
 But taking those rare lips of yours
 For some fresh, fragrant, luscious flowers :
 I thought I might there take a taste,
 Where so much sirrop ran at waste.
 Besides, know this, I never sting⁴
 The flower that gives me nourishing :

⁴ One would almost imagine that Herrick here had in view the caution which Secundus gives the bee, in his Basia : and that the little insect attended to it.

Heu ! non est stimulis compungite molle labellum ;
 Ex oculis stimulos vibrat et illa pareis.
 Credite non ullum patietur vulnus inultum :
 Leniter innocuæ mella legatis apes.

Joan. Sec. Basium, 19. N.

But with a kisse, or thanks, doe pay
 For Honie, that I beare away.
 This said, he laid his little scrip
 Of hony, 'fore her Ladiship :
 And told her, (as some tears did fall)
 That that, he took, and that was all.
 At which she smil'd ; and bade him goe
 And take his bag ; but thus much know,
 When next he came a-pilfring so,
 He sho'd from her full lips derive,
 Hony enough to fill his hive.

Upon Prig.

PRIG now drinks Water, who before drank Beere :
 What's now the cause ? we know the case is cleere :
 Look in Prig's purse, the chev'rell⁵ there tells you
Prig mony wants, either to buy, or brew.

Upon Batt.

BATT he gets children, not for love to reare 'em ;
 But out of hope his wife might die to beare 'em.

⁵ = cheveril leather (purse) made of wild goats' skin : kid.

*An Ode to Master Endymion Porter, upon his Brothers death.*⁶

NOT all thy flushing Sunnes are set,
Herrick, as yet :

Nor doth this far-drawn Hemisphere
Frown, and look sullen ev'ry where.

Daies may conclude in nights ; and Suns may rest,⁷
As dead, within the West ;

Yet the next Morne, re-guild the fragrant East.⁸

Alas for me ! that I have lost

E'en all almost :

Sunk is my sight ; set is my Sun ;

And all the loome of life undone :

The staffe,⁹ the Elme, the prop, the shelt'ring wall
Whereon my Vine did crawle,

Now, now, blowne downe ; needs must the old stock fall.

⁶ See Memorial-Introduction, as before.

⁷ Here we have a beautiful amplification of the three following lines from Catullus :—

Soles occidere, et redire possunt ;
Nobis, cum semel occidit brevis lux,
Nox est perpetua una dormenda.

Carm. 5. N.

⁸ The first stanza is to be supposed as spoken by Porter.

⁹ = support or frame-work.

There's paine in parting ; and a kind of hell,
 When once true-lovers take their last Fare-well.
 What ? shall we two our endlesse leaves take here
 Without a sad looke, or a solemne teare ?
 He knowes not Love, that hath not this truth proved,
Love is most loth to leave the thing beloved.
 Pay we our Vowes, and goe ; yet when we part,
 Then, even then, I will bequeath my heart
 Into thy loving hands : For Ile keep none
 To warme my Breast, when thou my Pulse art gone.
 No, here Ile last, and walk (a harmless shade)
 About this Urne, wherein thy Dust is laid,
 To guard it so, as nothing here shall be
 Heavy, to hurt those sacred seeds of thee.

The Olive Branch.

SADLY I walk't within the field,
 To see what comfort it wo'd yeeld :
 And as I went my private way,
 An Olive-branch before me lay :
 And seeing it, I made a stay.
 And took it up, and view'd it ; then
 Kissing the Omen, said Amen :
 Be, be it so, and let this be
 A Divination unto me :

That in short time my woes shall cease ;
And Love shall crown my End with Peace.

*Upon Much-more.*⁴ Epig.

MUCH-MORE, provides, and hoords up like an Ant ;

Yet Much-more still complains he is in want.
Let Much-more justly pay his tythes ; then try
How both his Meale and Oile will multiply.

To Cherry-blossomes.

YE may simper,⁵ blush, and smile,
And perfume the aire a-while :
But (sweet things) ye must be gone ;
Fruit, ye know, is comming on :
Then, Ah ! Then, where is your grace,
When as Cherries come in place ?

How Lillies came white.

WHITE though ye be ; yet, Lillies, know,
From the first ye were not so :
But Ile tell ye
What befell ye ;

⁴ Like others in these Epigrams, this was no doubt chosen as expressive of a greedy miserly fellow. Ben Jonson has similar character-names in his Epigrams. ⁵ = look pleasant : deteriorated since.

Cupid and his Mother lay
 In a Cloud ; while both did play,
 He with his pretty finger prest
 The rubie niplet of her breast ;
 Out of the which, the creame of light,
 Like to a Dew,
 Fell downe on you,
 And made ye white.

To Pansies.

AH, cruell Love ! must I endure
 Thy many scorns, and find no cure ?
 Say, are thy medicines made to be
 Helps to all others, but to me ?
 Ile leave thee, and to Pansies come ;⁶
 Comforts you'l afford me some :
 You can ease my heart, and doe
 What Love co'd ne'r be brought unto.

*On Gelli-flowers begotten.*⁷

WHAT was't that fell but now
 From that warme kisse of ours ?

⁶ "There is pansies, that's for thoughts," [good thoughts]. Hamlet IV., 5.

⁷ = gilli-flowers : the "Posie of Gilloflower" (1580) of Humph. Gifford has immortalized the name.

Look, look, by Love I vow
They were two Gelli-flowers.

Let's kisse, and kisse agen ;
For if so be our closes
Make Gelli-flowers, then
I'm sure they'l fashion Roses.

*The Lilly in a Christal.*⁸

YOU have beheld a smiling Rose
When Virgins hands have drawn
O'r it a Cobweb-Lawne :
And here, you see, this Lilly shows,
Tomb'd in a Christal stone,
More faire in this transparent case,
Then when it grew alone ; [than
And had but single grace.

You see how Creame but naked is ;
Nor daunces in the eye
Without a Strawberrie :
Or some fine tincture,⁹ like to this,

⁸ See Memorial-Introduction. This was a favourite of Herrick's own. See Glossarial Index under 'christal.'

⁹ = colour, as in heraldic language. See Memorial-Introduction on Herrick's feeling for colour.

Which draws the sight thereto,
 More by that wantoning with it ;
 Then when the paler hieu [than
 No mixture did admit.

You see how Amber through the streams
 More gently stroaks the sight,
 With some conceal'd delight ;
 Then when he darts his radiant beams
 Into the boundlesse aire :
 Where either too much light, his worth
 Doth all at once impaire,
 Or set it little forth.

Put Purple grapes, or Cherries in-
 To Glasse, and they will send
 More beauty to commend
 Them, from that cleane and subtile skin,
 Then if they naked stood, [than
 And had no other pride at all,
 But their own flesh and blood,
 And tinctures naturall.

Thus Lillie, Rose, Grape, Cherry, Creame,
 And Straw-berry do stir
 More love, when they transfer
 A weak, a soft, a broken beame ;

Then if they sho'd discover [than
 At full their proper excellence ;
 Without some Scean cast over,
 To juggle with the sense.

Thus let this Christal'd Lillie be
 A Rule, how far to teach,
 Your nakednesse must reach :
 And that, no further, then we see
 Those glaring colours laid
 By Arts wise hand, but to this end
 They sho'd obey a shade ;
 Lest they too far extend.

So though y'are white as Swan, or Snow,
 And have the power to move
 A world of men to love :
 Yet, when your Lawns & Silks shal flow ;
 And that white cloud divide
 Into a doubtful Twi-light ; then,
 Then will your hidden Pride
 Raise greater fires in men.

To his Booke.

LIKE to a Bride, come forth, my Booke, at last,
 With all thy richest jewels over-cast :

Say, if there be 'mongst many jems here ; one
 Deservelesse of the name of Paragon.¹
 Blush not at all for that ; since we have set
 Some Pearls on Queens, that have been counterfet.

Upon some women.

THOU who wilt not love, doe this ;
 Learne of me what Woman is.
 Something made of thred and thrumme ;²
 A meere Botch of all and some.³
 Pieces, patches, ropes of haire ;
 In-laid Garbage ev'ry where.
 Out-side silk, and out-side Lawne ;
 Sceanes⁴ to cheat us neatly drawne.
 False in legs, and false in thighes ;
 False in breast, teeth, haire, and eyes :
 False in head, and false enough ;
 Onely true in shreds and stuffe.

¹ Herrick, following the French (see Cotgrave s. v.) uses paragon as = peerless one or pattern. Shakespeare has the verb in the sense of to compare as excellent (Ant. & Cl.: i. 5) and also to excel (Othello ii. 1 and cf. Henry VIII., ii. 4). See Glossarial Index s. v.

² = ends of weaver's warps or coarse yarn.

³ = the whole and parts.

⁴ Used as = screen. See Glossarial Index s. v.

Supreme fortune falls soonest.

WHILE leanest Beasts in Pastures feed,
The fattest Oxe the first must bleed.

*The Welcome to Sack.*⁵

SO soft streams meet, so springs with gladder smiles

Meet after long divorcement by the Iles :

When Love (the child of likeness) urgeth on Their Christal natures to an union.

So meet stolne kisses, when the Moonie nights

Call forth fierce Lovers to their wisht Delights :

So Kings & Queens meet, when Desire convinces⁶

All thoughts, but such as aime at getting Princes,

As I meet thee. Soule of my life, and fame !

Eternall Lamp of Love ! whose radiant flame

Out-glares the Heav'ns Osiris ;⁷ and thy gleams

Out-shine the splendour of his mid-day beams.

Welcome, O welcome my illustrious Spouse ;

Welcome as are the ends unto my Vowes :

I !⁸ far more welcome then the happy soile, [than

The Sea-scourg'd Merchant, after all his toile,

⁵ See Memorial-Introduction, on this.

⁶ = conquers.

⁷ The Sun. H. ⁸ = Ay : see Glossarial Index s. v.

Salutes with tears of joy ; when fires betray
 The smoakie chimneys of his Ithaca.
 Where hast thou been so long from my embraces,
 Poore pittied Exile? Tell me, did thy Graces
 Flie discontented hence, and for a time
 Did rather choose to blesse another clime?
 Or went'st thou to this end, the more to move me,
 By thy short absence, to desire and love thee?
 Why frowns my Sweet? Why won't my Saint confer
 Favours on me, her fierce Idolater?
 Why are Those Looks, Those Looks the which have been Time-past so fragrant, sickly now drawn in Like a dull Twi-light? Tell me; and the fault
 Ile expiate with Sulphur, Haire, and Salt :⁹
 And with the Christal humour of the spring,
 Purge hence the guilt, and kill this quarrelling.
 Wo't thou not smile, or tell me what's amisse?
 Have I been cold to hug thee, too remisse,
 Too temp'rate in embracing? Tell me, ha's desire
 To thee-ward dy'd i'th'embers, and no fire
 Left in this rak't-up Ash-heap, as a mark
 To testifie the glowing of a spark?
 Have I divorc't thee onely to combine
 In hot Adult'ry with another Wine?

⁹ Folk-lore.

True, I confesse I left thee, and appeale
 'Twas done by me, more to confirme my zeale,
 And double my affection on thee ; as doe those,
 Whose love growes more enflam'd, by being Foes.
 But to forsake thee ever, co'd there be
 A thought of such like possibilitie?
 When thou thy selfe dar'st say, thy Iles shall lack Grapes, before Herrick leaves Canarie Sack.
 Thou mak'st me ayrie, active to be born,
 Like Iphyclus,⁹ upon the tops of Corn.
 Thou mak'st me nimble, as the wingèd howers,
 To dance and caper on the heads of flowers,
 And ride the Sun-beams. Can there be a thing
 Under the heavenly Isis,¹ that can bring
 More love unto my life, or can present
 My Genius with a fuller blandishment?
 Illustrious Idoll ! co'd th' Egyptians seek Help from the Garlick, Onyon, and the Leek,
 And pay no vowes to thee ? who wast their best
 God, and far more transcendent then the rest ?
 Had Cassius, that weak Water-drinker,² known
 Thee in thy Vine, or had but tasted one

⁹ So Virgil of Camilla.

¹ The Moon. H.

² Cassius Iatrosophista, or Cassius Felix ?

Small Chalice of thy frantick liquor ; He
 As the wise Cato had approv'd of thee.
 Had not *Joves*³ son, that brave Tyrinthian Swain,
 (Invited to the Thesbian banquet) ta'ne
 Full goblets of thy gen'rous blood ; his spright
 Ne'r had kept heat for fifty Maids that night.
 Come, come and kisse me ; Love and lust commends
 Thee, and thy beauties ; kisse, we will be friends
 Too strong for Fate to break us : Look upon
 Me, with that full pride of complexion,
 As Queenes, meet Queenes ; or come thou unto me,
 As Cleopatra came to Anthonie ;
 When her high carriage did at once present
 To the Triumvir, Love and Wonderment.
 Swell up my nerves with spirit ; let my blood
 Run through my veines, like to a hasty flood.
 Fill each part full of fire, active to doe
 What thy commanding soule shall put it to.
 And till I turne Apostate to thy love,
 Which here I vow to serve, doe not remove Thy Fiers from me ; but Apollo's curse
 Blast these-like actions, or a thing that's worse ;

³ Hercules. H.

When these Circumstants⁴ shall but live to see
 The time that I prevaricate⁵ from thee.
 Call me The sonne of Beere, and then confine
 Me to the Tap, the Tost, the Turfe⁶; Let Wine
 Ne'r shine upon me; May my Numbers all
 Run to a sudden Death, and Funerall.
 And last, when thee (deare Spouse) I disavow,
 Ne'r may Prophetique Daphne crown my Brow.

Impossibilities to his friend.

MY faithful friend, if you can see
 The Fruit to grow up, or the Tree :
 If you can see the colour come
 Into the blushing Peare, or Plum :
 If you can see the water grow
 To cakes of Ice, or flakes of Snow :
 If you can see, that drop of raine
 Lost in the wild sea, once againe :
 If you can see, how Dreams do creep
 Into the Brain by easie sleep :
 Then there is hope that you may see
 Her love me once, who now hates me.

⁴ = surroundings, environings. ⁵ = play fast and loose or betray.

⁶ = peat-fire?

Upon Luggs. Epig.

LUGGS by the Condemnation of the Bench,
 Was lately whipt for lying with a Wench.
 Thus Paines and Pleasures turne by turne succeed :
He smarts at last, who do's not first take heed.

Upon Gubbs. Epig.

GUBBS calls his children *Kitlings*⁷: and wo'd bound
 (Some say) for joy, to see those Kitlings drown'd.

To live merrily, and to trust to Good Verses.

NOW is the time for mirth,
 Nor cheek, or tongue be dumbe :
 For with the flowrie earth,
 The golden pomp is come.

The golden Pomp is come ;
 For now each tree do's weare
 (Made of her Pap⁸ and Gum)
 Rich beads of Amber here.

⁷ = kittens.

⁸ sap.

Now raignes the Rose, and now
 Th' Arabian Dew besmeares
 My uncontrollèd brow,
 And my retortèd⁹ haieres.

Homer, this Health to thee,
 In Sack of such a kind,
 That it wo'd make thee see,
 Though thou wert ne'r so blind.

Next, Virgil, Ile call forth,
 To pledge this second Health
 In Wine, whose each cup's worth
 An Indian Common-wealth.

A Goblet next Ile drink
 To Ovid; and suppose,
 Made he the pledge, he'd think
 The world had all one Nose.¹

Then this immense² cup
 Of Aromatike wine,

⁹ = thrown back.

¹ A play on the Poet's name of 'Naso,' and referring also to that amorous disposition which was supposed to be indicated by a long nose.

² = measureless.

Catullus, I quaffe up
To that Terce^s Muse of thine.

Wild I am now with heat ;
O Bacchus ! coole thy Raies !
Or frantick I shall eate
Thy Thyrse, and bite the Bayes.

Round, round, the roof do's run ;
And being ravisht thus,
Come, I will drink a Tun
To my Propertius.

Now, to Tibullus, next,
This flood I drink to thee :
But stay ; I see a Text,
That this presents to me.

Behold, Tibullus lies
Here burnt, whose smal return
Of ashes, scarce suffice
To fill a little Urne.

Trust to good Verses then ;
They onely will aspire,
When Pyramids, as men,
Are lost, i'th'funerall fire.

And when all Bodies meet
 In Lethe to be drown'd ;
 Then onely Numbers sweet,
 With endless life are crown'd.

Faire dayes : or, Dawnes deceitfull.

FAIRE was the Dawne ; and but e'ne now the Skies
 Shew'd like to Creame, enspir'd⁴ with Strawberries :

But on a sudden, all was chang'd and gone
 That smil'd in that first-sweet complexion.
 Then Thunder-claps and Lightning did conspire
 To teare the world, or set it all on fire.
 What trust to things below, whenas we see,
 As Men, the Heavens have their Hypocrisie ?

*Lips Tonguelesse.*⁵

FOR my part I never care
 For those lips, that tongue-ty'd are :

⁴ = breathed upon. See Glossarial Index s. v.

⁵ This little jeu-d'esprit is possibly grounded on the following lines:

Si linguam clauso tenes in ore,
 Fructus projicies amoris omnes :
 Verbosâ gaudet Venus loquelâ.

Catullus. Carm. 52. N.

Tell-tales I wo'd have them be
 Of my Mistresse, and of me.
 Let them prattle how that I
 Sometimes freeze, and sometimes frie :
 Let them tell how she doth move
 Fore or backward in her love :
 Let them speak by gentle tones,
 One and th'others passions :
 How we watch, and seldome sleep ;
 How by Willowes we doe weep :
 How by stealth we meet, and then
 Kisse, and sigh, so part agen.
 This the lips we will permit
 For to tell, not publish it.

To the Fever, not to trouble Julia.

TH'AST dar'd too farre ; but Furie now forbear
 To give the least disturbance to her haire :
 But lesse presume to lay a Plait upon
 Her skins most smooth, and cleare expansion.
 'Tis like a Lawnie-Firmament as yet
 Quite dispossesst of either fray, or fret,
 Come thou not neere that Filmne so finely spred,
 Where no one piëce is yet unlevellèd.

This if thou dost, woe to thee Furie, woe,
 Ile send such Frost, such Haile, such Sleet, and Snow,
 Such fears, quakes, Palsies, and such Heates as shall Dead thee to th' most, if not destroy thee all.
 And thou a thousand thousand times shalt be
 More shak't thy selfe, then she is scorch't by thee.

To Violets.

1. WELCOME, Maids of Honour,
 You doe bring
 In the Spring ;
 And wait upon her.
2. She has Virgins many,
 Fresh and faire ;
 Yet you are
 More sweet then any. [than]
3. Y'are the Maiden Posies,
 And so grac't,
 To be plac't,
 'Fore Damask Roses.
4. Yet though thus respected,
 By and by
 Ye doe lie,
 Poore Girles, neglected.

Upon Bunce. Epig.

MONEY thou ow'st me ; Prethee fix a day
 For payment promis'd, though thou never pay :
 Let it be Doomes-day ; nay, take longer scope ;
 Pay when th'art honest ; let me have some hope.

To Carnations. A Song.

1. STAY while ye will, or goe ;
 And leave no scent behind ye :
 Yet trust me, I shall know
 The place, where I may find ye :
2. Within my Lucia's cheek,
 (Whose Livery ye weare)
 Play ye at Hide or Seek,
 I'm sure to find ye there.

*To the Virgins, to make much of Time.*⁶

1. GATHER ye Rose-buds while ye may,
 Old Time is still a-flying :
 And this same flower that smiles to day,
 To morrow will be dying.

⁶ See Memorial-Introduction on this.

2. The glorious Lamp of Heaven, the Sun,
The higher he's a-getting ;
The sooner will his Race be run,
And neerer he's to Setting.
3. That Age is best, which is the first,
When Youth and Blood are warmer ;
But being spent, the worse, and worst
Times, still succeed the former.
4. Then be not coy, but use your time ;
And while ye may, goe marry :
For having lost but once your prime,
You may for ever tarry.

Safety to look to ones selfe.

FOR my neighbour Ile not know,
Whether high he builds or no :
Onely this Ile look upon,
Firm be my foundation.
Sound, or unsound, let it be ;
'Tis the lot ordain'd for me.
He who to the ground do's fall,
Has not whence to sink at all.

To his Friend, on the untuneable Times.

PLAY I co'd once ; but (gentle friend) you see
 My Harp hung up, here on the Willow tree.
 Sing I co'd once ; and bravely too enspire,
 (With luscious Numbers) my melodious Lyre.
 Draw I co'd once (although not stocks or stones,
Amphion-like) men made of flesh and bones,
 Whether I wo'd ; but (ah!) I know not how,
 I feele in me, this transmutation now.
 Griefe, (my deare friend) has first my Harp unstrung ;
 Wither'd my hand, and palsie-struck my tongue.

His Poetrie his Pillar.

1. ONLY a little more
 I have to write,
 Then Ile give o're,
 And bid the world Good-night.
2. 'Tis but a flying minute,
 That I must stay,
 Or linger in it ;
 And then I must away.

3. O time that cut'st down all!
 And scarce leav'st here
 Memoriall
 Of any men that were.
4. How many lye forgot
 In Vaults beneath?
 And piece-meale rot
 Without a fame in death?
5. Behold this living stone,
 I reare for me,
 Ne'r to be thrown
 Downe, envious Time by thee.
6. Pillars let some set up,
 (If so they please)
 Here is my hope,
 And my Pyramides.⁷

Safety on the Shore.

WHAT though the sea be calme? Trust to the shore :

Ships have been drown'd, where late they danc't before.

⁷ Note the pronunciation to rhyme with 'please'—pyr-am-i-des.
 Like statua, apostata, it had not yet been perfectly Anglicised.

*A Pastorall upon the Birth of Prince Charles, Presented to the King, and Set by
Mr. Nic : Laniere.*⁸

The Speakers, Mirtillo, Amintas, and Amarillis.

Amin. GOOD day, Mirtillo. Mirt. And to you
no lesse :

And all faire Signs lead on our Shepardesse.

Amar. With all white luck to you. Mirt. But say, what news

Stirs in our Sheep-walk? Amin. None, save that my Ewes,

My Weathers, Lambes, and wanton Kids are well,
Smooth, faire, and fat ; none better I can tell :

Or that this day Menalchas keeps a feast

For his Sheep-shearers. Mir. True, these are the least.

But, dear Amintas, and, sweet Amarillis,

Rest but a while here, by this bank of Lillies.

⁸ This was afterwards Charles II: born 1630: Nicholas Laniere, painter, engraver and musician, was born in Italy in 1568. He came early in life to England. One of his chief compositions was a Masque performed on the marriage of the Earl of Somerset with the Countess of Essex. His own portrait, by himself, is in the Music-School at Oxford. He died in November, 1646. This it will be seen is another early poem. See Memorial-Introduction.

And lend a gentle eare to one report

The Country has. Amint. From whence? Amar.

From whence? Mir. The Court.

Three dayes before the Shutting in of May,

(With whitest Wool⁹ be ever crown'd that day!)

To all our joy, a sweet-fac't child was borne,

More tender then the childhood of the Morne. [than

Chor. Pan pipe to him, and bleats of lambs and sheep,

Let Lullaby the pretty Prince asleep !

Mirt. And that his birth sho'd be more singular,

At Noone of Day, was seene a Silver Star,

Bright as the Wise-men's Torch, which guided them

To God's sweet Babe, when borne at Bethlehem ;¹

While Golden Angels (some have told to me)

Sung out his Birth with Heav'nly Minstralsie.

Amint. O rare ! But is't a trespasse if we three Sho'd wend along his Baby-ship to see?

Mir. Not so, not so. Chor. But if it chance to prove

At most a fault, 'tis but a fault of love.

Amar. But, deare Mirtillo, I have heard it told,

Those learned men brought Incense, Myrrhe, and Gold,

From Countries far, with store of Spices, (sweet)

And laid them downe for Offerings at his feet.²

⁹ See Glossarial Index s. v. ¹ See Memorial-Introduction on this.

² St. Matthew, ii. 11.

Mirt. 'Tis true indeed ; and each of us will bring Unto our smiling, and our blooming King,
A neat, though not so great an Offering.

Amar. A Garland for my Gift shall be
Of flowers, ne'r suckt by th' theeving Bee :
And all most sweet ; yet all lesse sweet then he. [than

Amint. And I will beare along with you
Leaves dropping downe the honyed dew,
With oaten pipes, as sweet, as new.

Mirt. And I a Sheep-hook will bestow,
To have his little King-ship know,
As he is Prince, he's Shepherd too.

Chor. Come let's away, and quickly let's be drest,
And quickly give, The swiftest Grace is best.
And when before him we have laid our treasures,
We'll blesse the Babe, Then back to Countrie pleasures.

To the Lark.

GOOD speed, for I this day
Betimes my Mattens³ say :
Because I doe
Begin to woee :
Sweet singing Lark,
Be thou the Clark,

³ = matins.

And know thy when
To say, Amen.
And if I prove Blest in my love ;
Then thou shalt be
High-Priest to me,
At my returne,
To Incense burne ;
And so to solemnize
Love's, and my Sacrifice.

The Bubble. A Song.

TO my revenge, and to her desp'rate feares,
Flie, thou made Bubble of my sighs, and tears.
In the wild aire, when thou hast rowl'd about,
And (like a blasting Planet) found her out ;
Stoop, mount, passe by to take her eye, then glare
Like to a dreadfull Comet in the Aire :
Next, when thou dost perceive her fixèd sight,
For thy revenge to be most opposite ;
Then like a Globe, or Ball of Wild-fire, flie,
And break thy self in shivers on her eye.

A Meditation for his Mistress.

1. YOU are a Tulip seen to day,
But (Dearest) of so short a stay ;
That where you grew, scarce man can say.
2. You are a lovely July-flower,
Yet one rude wind, or ruffling shower,
Will force you hence, (and in an hour.)
3. You are a sparkling Rose i'th'bud,
Yet lost, ere that chast flesh and blood
Can shew where you or grew, or stood.
4. You are a full-spread faire-set Vine,
And can with Tendrills love intwine,
Yet dry'd, ere you distill your Wine.
5. You are like Balme inclosèd (well)
In Amber, or some Chrystall shell,
Yet lost ere you transfuse your smell.
6. You are a dainty Violet,
Yet wither'd, ere you can be set
Within the Virgins Coronet.
7. You are the Queen all flowers among,
But die you must (faire Maid) ere long,
As He, the maker of this Song.

The bleeding hand : or, The sprig of Eglantine given to a maid.

FROM this bleeding hand of mine,
Take this sprig of Eglantine.
Which (though sweet unto your smell)
Yet the fretfull bryar will tell,
He who plucks the sweets shall prove
Many thorns to be in Love.

Lyrick for Legacies.

GOLD I've none, for use or show,
Neither Silver to bestow
At my death ; but thus much know,
That each Lyrick here shall be
Of my love a Legacie,
Left to all posterity.
Gentle friends, then doe but please,
To accept such coynes as these ;
As my last Remembrances.

*A Dirge upon the Death of the Right Valiant
Lord, Bernard Stuart.*⁴

1. HENCE, hence, profane ; soft silence let us have ;
 While we this *Trentall*⁵ sing about thy Grave.
 Had Wolves or Tigers seen but thee,
 They wo'd have shew'd civility ;⁶
 And, in compassion of thy yeeres,
 Washt those thy purple wounds with tears.
 But since th'art slaine ; and in thy fall,
 The drooping Kingdome suffers all.

Chor. This we will doe ; we'll daily come
 And offer Tears upon thy Tomb :
 And if that they will not suffice,
 Thou shalt have soules for sacrifice.

⁴ Robert Heath, in his "Clarastella" (1650), has a poem in celebration of this Royalist Worthy ("Elegies" p. 8). This was Bernard Stuart, fourth son of Esme, 3rd Duke of Lennox. He was commander of the King's troop of guards in the Civil Wars, and was killed at Rowton Heath, near Chester, in 1645.

⁵ Originally the Romish office for the dead, consisting of thirty masses rehearsed for thirty days after the death of the person. Hence, a dirge, but here used for a funeral song or lamentation.

⁶ = civilization.

Sleepe in thy peace, while we with spice perfume thee,
And *Cedar*⁷ wash thee, that no times consume thee.

2. Live, live thou dost, and shalt ; for why ?

Soules doe not with their bodies die :

Ignoble off-springs, they may fall

Into the flames of Funerall :

Whenas the chosen seed shall spring

Fresh, and for ever flourishing.

Cho. And times to come shall, weeping, read thy glory,

Lesse in these Marble stones, then in thy story. [than

To Perenna, a Mistresse.

DEARE Perenna, prethee come,

And with *Smallage*⁸ dresse my Tomb :

Adde a Cypresse-sprig thereto,

With a teare ; and so Adieu.

Great boast, small rost.

OF Flanks and Chines of Beefe doth Gorrell boast

He has at home ; but who tasts boil'd or rost ?

Look in his Brine-tub, and you shall find there

Two stiffe-blew-Pigs-feet, and a sow's cleft eare.

⁷ See Glossarial Index s. v.

⁸ Herb, as before.

Upon a Bleare-ey'd woman.

WITHER'D with yeeres, and bed-rid Mumma
 lyes ;
 Dry-rosted all, but raw yet in her eyes.

The Fairie Temple : or, Oberon's Chappell.
Dedicated to Mr. John Merrifield,
*Counsellor at Law.*⁹

RARE Temples thou hast seen, I know,
 And rich for in and outward show :
 Survey this Chappell, built, alone,
 Without or Lime, or Wood, or Stone :
 Then say, if one th'ast seene more fine
 Then this, the Fairies once, now Thine. [than

The Temple.

A WAY enchac't with glasse & beads
 There is, that to the Chappel leads :
 Whose structure (for his holy rest)
 Is here the *Halcion's*¹ curious nest :
 Into the which who looks shall see
 His Temple of Idolatry :

⁹ Nothing seems to be now known of Merrifield.' It is just possible that—as throughout the poem—the name was an invented one, 'Merry Field.'

¹ Kingfisher.

Where he of God-heads has such store,
 As Rome's Pantheon had not more.
 His house of *Rimmon*² this he calls,
 Girt with small bones, instead of walls.
 First, in a Neech,³ more black then jet, [than His Idol-Cricket there is set :
 Then in a Polisht Ovall by
 There stands his Idol-Beetle-flie :
 Next in an Arch, akin to this,
 His *Idol-Canker*⁴ seated is :
 Then in a Round, is plac't by these,
 His golden god, Cantharides.
 So that where ere ye look, ye see,
 No Capitoll, no *Cornish*⁵ free,
 Or Freeze, from this fine Fripperie.
 Now this the Fairies wo'd have known,
 Theirs is a mixt Religion.
 And some have heard the Elves it call
 Part Pagan, part Papisticall.
 If unto me all Tongues were granted,
 I co'd not speak the Saints here painted.
 Saint Tit,⁶ Saint Nit,⁷ Saint Is,⁸ Saint Itis,⁹
 Who 'gainst Mabs-state plac't here right is.

² 2 Kings, v. 18.³ = niche.⁴ = worm.⁵ = cornice : still pronounced 'cornish' in Devon.⁶ St. Titus.⁷ St. Neot.⁸ St. Idus.⁹ St. Ida.

Saint Will o' th Wispe (of no great bignes)
 But alias call'd here Fatuus ignis.
 Saint Frip,¹ Saint Trip,² Saint Fill,³ S. Fillie,⁴
 Neither those other-Saint-ships will I
 Here goe about for to recite
 Their number (almost) infinite,
 Which one by one here set downe are
 In this most curious Calendar.
 First, at the entrance of the gate,
 A little-Puppet-Priest doth wait,
 Who squeaks to all the commers there,
Favour your tongues,⁵ who enter here.
Pure hands bring hither, without staine.
 A second pules, Hence, hence, profane.
 Hard by, i'th'shell of halfe a nut,
 The Holy-water there is put :
 A little brush of Squirrils haire,
 (Compos'd of odde, not even paires)
 Stands in the Platter, or close by,
 To purge the Fairie Family.

¹ St. Fridian or St. Fridolin. ² St. Trypho. ³ St. Felan. ⁴ St. Felix. Whilst I have given these Romish saints' names, I am not sure but Herrick would have laughed loudly at my pains, and told me that he merely gave such names as Fairy saints might have had. Certes St. Will o' th' Wispe looks like this.

⁵ = Favete linguis, &c. Horace, Od. iii. 1, 2.

Neere to the Altar stands the Priest,
 There off'ring up the Holy-Grist :⁶
 Ducking in Mood, and perfect Tense,
 With (much-good-do't him) reverence.
 The Altar is not here foure-square,
 Nor in a forme Triangular ;
 Nor made of glasse, or wood, or stone,
 But of a little Transverce bone ;
 Which boyes, and Bruckel'd ⁷ children call
 (Playing for Points and Pins) Cockall.⁸
 Whose Linen-Drapery is a thin
 Subtile and ductile Codlin's ⁹ skin ;
 Which o're the board is smoothly spred,
 With little Seale-work Damaskèd.
 The Fringe that circumbinds ¹ it too,
 Is Spangle-work of trembling dew,
 Which, gently gleaming, makes a show,
 Like Frost-work glitt'ring on the Snow.

⁶ = holy grain. The reference is to the offering of the Host.

⁷ = begrimed, wet and dirty. Whence is it derived? Nares s. v. suggests 'breched'; but it is a very unsavoury etymology, albeit not far out here.

⁸ = the huckle or pastern-bone of the sheep, used for a game played from classic times.

⁹ = codling : apple so called.

¹ = binds it round.

Upon this fetuous ² board doth stand
 Something for Shew-bread, and at hand
 (Just in the middle of the Altar)
 Upon an end, the Fairie-Psalter,
 Grac't with the Trout-flies curious wings,
 Which serve for watchèd ³ Ribbanings.
 Now, we must know, the Elves are led Right by the Rubrick, which they read.
 And if Report of them be true,
 They have their Text for what they doe ;
 I⁴, and their Book of Canons too.
 And, as Sir Thomas Parson ⁵ tells,
 They have their Book of Articles :
 And if that Fairie Knight not lies,
 They have their Book of Homilies :
 And other Scriptures, that designe
 A short, but righteous discipline.
 The Bason stands the board upon
 To take the Free-Oblation :

² = fetise, well-made, or neat, elegant.

³ = watched, dark blue.

⁴ = Ay. So in next page, l. 22.

⁵ This might be put as a general name for a clergyman ('parson'), 'Sir' being the olden designation of a priest. But the following line, "that Fairie knight," looks as if some real person were meant. Who?

A little Pin-dust ; which they hold
 More precious, then we prize our gold : . [than Which charity they give to many Poore of the Parish, (if there's any).
 Upon the ends of these neat Railes
 (Hatcht,⁶ with the Silver-light of snails,)
 The Elves, in formall manner, fix
 Two pure, and holy Candlesticks :
 In either which a small tall bent ⁷
 Burns for the Altars ornament.
 For sanctity, they have, to these,
 Their curious Copes and Surplices
 Of cleanest Cobweb, hanging by
 In their Religious Vesterie.⁸
 They have their Ash-pans, & their Brooms
 To purge the Chappel and the rooms :
 Their many mumbling Masse-priests here,
 And many a dapper Chorister.
 There ush'ring Vergers, here likewise,
 Their Canons, and their Chaunteries :
 Of Cloyster-Monks they have enow,
 I, and their Abby-Lubbers ⁹ too :

⁶ = engraved: "This sword, silver'd and hatcht": Chapman
 (Bailey s. v.)

⁷ = blade of coarse grass or rush.

⁸ = vestry or church-room.

⁹ = lazy monks.

And if their Legend doe not lye,
 They much affect the Papacie :
 And since the last is dead, there's hope,
*Elve Boniface shall next be Pope.*¹⁰
 They have their Cups and Chalices ;
 Their Pardons and Indulgences :
 Their Beads of Nits,¹ Bels, Books, & Wax
Candles (forsooth) and other knacks :
 Their Holy Oyle, their Fasting-Spittle ;
 Their sacred Salt here, (not a little.)
 Dry chips, old shoes, rags, grease, & bones ;
 Beside their Fumigations,
 To drive the Devill from the Cod-piece²
 Of the Fryar, (of work an odde-piece.)
 Many a trifle too, and trinket,
 And for what use, scarce man wo'd think it.
 Next, then, upon the Chanters side
 An Apples-core is hung up dry'd,
 With ratling Kirnils, which is rung
 To call to Morn, and Even-Song.

¹⁰ Is this a reference to some recent Papal election, of which rumours were circulating?

¹ =nuts in Devonshire, as in the local proverb "So many nits [nuts], so many pits [graves]," which seems to point to the indigestible, and so deathly, nature of nuts taken in over-quantity.

² See Glossarial Index s. v.

The Saint, to which the most he prays
 And offers Incense Nights and dayes,
 The Lady of the *Lobster*³ is,
 Whose foot-pace he doth stroak and kisse ;
 And, humbly, chives⁴ of Saffron brings,
 For his most cheerfull offerings.
 When, after these, h'as paid his vows,
 He lowly to the Altar bows :
 And then he dons the Silk-worms shed,⁵
 (Like a *Turks Turbant*⁶ on his head),
 And reverently departeth thence,
 Hid in a cloud of Frankincense :
 And by the glow-worms light wel guided,
 Goes to the Feast that's now provided.

*To Mistresse Katherine Bradshaw, the lovely, that crowned him with Laurel.*⁷

MY Muse in Meads has spent her many houres,
 Sitting, and sorting severall sorts of flowers,

³ Who?

⁴ = chip or shiver, and in a plant is the thread-like style and stigma of the flower. Saffron is that part of the crocus. ⁵ Cocoon.

⁶ Italian and Spanish turbante—linen head-dress wreathed = turban.

⁷ Impossible to identify. The Bradshaws were very numerous at this period. No doubt a Devonshire Beauty.

To make for others garlands : and to set
 On many a head here, many a Coronet :
 But, amongst All encircled here, not one
 Gave her a day of Coronation ;
 Till you (sweet Mistresse) came and enterwove
 A Laurel for her, (ever young as love),
 You first of all crown'd her ; she must of due,
 Render for that, a crowne of life to you.

*The Plaudite, or end of life.*⁸

IF after rude and boystrous seas,
 My wearyed Pinnace here finds ease :
 If so it be I've gain'd the shore
 With safety of a faithful Ore :
 If having run my Barque on ground,
 Ye see the agèd Vessell crown'd :
 What's to be done? but on the Sands
 Ye dance, and sing, and now clap hands.
 The first Act's doubtfull, (but we say)
 It is the last commends the Play.

⁸ These lines have an evident reference to the Phaselus of Catullus, or fifth Carmen. N. Very slight indeed, if any such reference.

To the most vertuous Mistresse Pot, who many times entertained him.⁹

WHEN I through all my many Poems look,
And see your selfe to beautifie my Book ;
Me thinks that onely lustre doth appeare
A Light ful-filling all the Region here.
Guild still with flames this Firmament, and be
A Lamp Eternall to my Poetrie.
Which if it now, or shall hereafter shine,
'Twas by your splendour (Lady), not by mine.
The Oile was yours ; and that I owe for yet :
He payes the halfe, who do's confesse the Debt.

To Musique, to becalme his Fever.

1. CHARM me asleep, and melt me so
With thy Delicious Numbers ;
That being ravisht, hence I goe
Away in easie slumbers.
Ease my sick head,
And make my bed,

⁹ Probably another character-name.

Thou Power that canst sever
 From me this ill :
 And quickly still :
 Though thou not kill
 My Fever.

2. Thou sweetly canst convert the same
 From a consuming fire,
 Into a gentle-licking flame,
 And make it thus expire.
 Then make me weep
 My paines asleep ;
 And give me such reposes,
 That I, poore I,
 May think, thereby,
 I live and die
 'Mongst Roses.

3. Fall on me like a silent dew,
 Or like those Maiden shows,
 Which, by the peepe of day, doe strew
 A Baptime¹⁰ o're the flowers.
 Melt, melt my paines,
 With thy soft straines ;

¹⁰ = baptism, as before. See Glossarial Index s. v.

That having ease me given,
 With full delight,
 I leave this light ;
 And take my flight
 For Heaven.

Upon a Gentlewoman with a sweet Voice.

SO long you did not sing, or touch your Lute,
 We knew 'twas Flesh and Blood, that there sate mute.

But when your Playing, and your Voice came in,
 'Twas no more you then, but a Cherubin.

*Upon Cupid.*¹

AS lately I a Garland bound,
 'Mongst Roses, I there Cupid found :
 I took him, put him in my cup,
 And drunk with Wine, I drank him up.
 Hence then it is, that my poore brest
 Co'd never since find any rest.

¹ Imitation of the Pseudo-Anacreon, No. 59 (5 in Bergk's Lyrical Poets.)

Upon Julia's breasts.

DISPLAY thy breasts, my Julia, there let me
 Behold that circummortall² purity :
 Betweene whose glories, there my lips Ile lay,
 Ravisht, in that faire Via Lactea.

Best to be merry.

FOOLES are they, who never know
 How the times away doe goe :
 But for us, who wisely see
 Where the bounds of black Death be :
 Let's live merrily, and thus Gratifie the Genius.³

The Changes to Corinna.

BE not proud, but now encline
 Your soft eare to Discipline.
 You have changes in your life,
 Sometimes peace, and sometimes strife :
 You have ebbes of face and flowes,
 As your health or comes, or goes ;

² = more than mortal. (See Glossarial Index under circum.)
 Perhaps a reference to the "glory" of purity that surrounds (the head of) saints. See "glories" in l. 3.

³ Used in the Roman sense for guardian spirit or personal Lar

You have hopes, and doubts, and feares
 Numberlesse, as are your haire.
 You have Pulses that doe beat
 High, and passions lesse of heat.⁴
 You are young, but must be old,
 And, to these, ye must be told,
 Time, ere long, will come and plow
 Loathèd Furrowes in your brow :
 And the dimnesse of your eye
 Will no other thing imply,
 But you must die
 As well as I.

No Lock against Letcherie.

BARRE close as you can, and bolt fast too your doore,
 To keep out the Letcher, and keep in the whore :
 Yet, quickly you'l see by the turne of a pin,
 The Whore to come out, or the Letcher come in.

Neglect.

ART quickens Nature ; Care will make a face :
Neglected beauty perisheth apace.

⁴ = passions wanting in heat, i. e., depressing passions.

Upon himselfe.

MOP-EY'D⁵ I am, as some have said,
 Because I've liv'd so long a maid :
 But grant that I sho'd wedded be,
 Sho'd I a jot the better see?
 No, I sho'd think, that Marriage might,
 Rather then mend, put out the light. [than

Upon a Physitian.

THOU cam'st to cure me (Doctor) of my cold,
 And caught'st thy selfe the more by twenty fold:
 Prethee goe home ; and for thy credit be
 First cur'd thy selfe ; then come and cure me.

Upon Sudds a Laundresse.

SUDDS Launderers Bands in pisse ; and starches them
 Both with her Husband's, and her own tough fleame.

To the Rose. Song.

1. GOE, happy Rose, and enterwove
 With other Flowers, bind my Love.
 Tell her too, she must not be,
 Longer flowing, longer free,
 That so oft has fetter'd me.

⁵ = short-sighted or dim-sighted.

2. Say (if she's fretfull) I have bands
Of Pearle, and Gold, to bind her hands :
 Tell her, if she struggle still,
 I have Mirtle rods, (at will)
 For to tame, though not to kill.
3. Take thou my blessing, thus, and goe,
And tell her this, but doe not so,
 Lest a handsome anger flye,
 Like a Lightning, from her eye,
 And burn thee up, as well as I.

Upon Guesse. Epig.

GUESSE cuts his shooes, and limping, goes about
To have men think he's troubled with the Gout :
But 'tis no Gout (beleeve it) but hard Beere,
Whose acrimonious humour bites him [t]here.

To his Booke.

THOU art a plant sprung up to wither never,
But like a Laurell, to grow green for ever.

Upon a painted Gentlewoman.

MEN say y'are faire ; and faire ye are, 'tis true ;
But (Hark !) we praise the Painter now, not you.

Upon a crooked Maid.

CROOKED you are, but that dislikes not me ;
 So you be straight, where Virgins straight sho'd be.

Draw Gloves.⁶

AT Draw-Gloves we'l play,
 And prethee, let's lay
 A wager, and let it be this ;
 Who first to the Summe
 Of twenty shall come,
 Shall have for his winning a kisse.

To Musick, to becalme a sweet-sick-youth.

CHARMS, that call down the moon from out her sphere,
 On this sick youth work your enchantments here :
 Bind up his senses with your numbers, so,
 As to entrance his paine, or cure his woe.
 Fall gently, gently, and a while him keep Lost in the civill Wildernesse of sleep :⁷
 That done, then let him, dispossesst of paine,
 Like to a slumbring Bride, awake againe.

⁶ An old English sport or game. Cf. Strutt s. v.

⁷ Cf. Maud :

“Hast given false death her hand, and stol'n away
 To dreamful wastes, where footless fancies dwell.”

*To the High and Noble Prince, GEORGE,
Duke, Marquesse, and Earle of Buckingham.*⁸

NEVER my Book's perfection did appeare,
Til I had got the name of VILLARS here.
Now 'tis so full, that when therein I look,
I see a Cloud of Glory fills my Book.
Here stand it stil to dignifie our Muse,
Your sober Hand-maid ; who doth wisely chuse,
Your Name to be a Laureat-Wreathe to Hir,
Who doth both love and feare you Honour'd Sir.

His Recantation.

LOVE, I recant,
And pardon crave,
That lately I offended,
But 'twas,
Alas,
To make a brave,⁹
But no disdaine intended.

No more Ile vaunt,
For now I see,
Thou onely hast the power,

⁸ The Buckingham of History.

⁹ = bravado.

To find,
 And bind
 A heart that's free,
 And slave¹ it in an houre.

The comming of good luck.

SO Good-luck came, and on my roofe did light,
 Like noyse-lesse Snow; or as the dew of night:
 Not all at once, but gently, as the trees
 Are, by the Sun-beams, tickel'd by degrees.

The Present: or, The Bag of the Bee.

FLY to my Mistresse, pretty pilfring Bee,
 And say, thou bring'st this Hony-bag from me:
 When on her lip, thou hast thy sweet dew plac't,
 Mark, if her tongue, but slily, steale a taste.
 If so, we live; if not, with mournfull humme,
 Tole forth my death; next, to my buryall come.

On Love.

LOVE bade me aske a gift,
 And I no more did move,²

¹ = put it in bondage—as enslave; and so Shakespeare.

² = ask.

But this, that I might shift
 Still with my clothes, my Love :
 That favour granted was ;
 Since which, though I love many,
 Yet so it comes to passe,
 That long I love not any.

The Hock-cart, or Harvest home :
To the Right Honourable,
Mildmay, Earle of Westmorland.³

COME, Sons of Summer, by whose toile,
 We are the Lords of Wine and Oile :
 By whose tough labours, and rough hands,
 We rip up first, then reap our lands.
 Crown'd with the eares of corne, now come,
 And, to the Pipe, sing Harvest home.
 Come forth, my Lord, and see the Cart
 Drest up with all the Country Art.
 See, here a Maukin,⁴ there a sheet,
 As spotlesse pure, as it is sweet :

THRU YOU WE
 ENRICH OUR LIVING

³ See former note on this poet-noble, and Memorial-Introduction.

⁴ =maulkin : cloth usually wetted and attached to a pole to clean out a baker's oven-floor. In Devon, a cloth or clout generally.

The Horses, Mares, and frisking Fillies,
 (Clad, all, in Linnen, white as Lillies.)
 The Harvest Swaines, and Wenches bound
 For joy, to see the *Hock-cart*⁵ crown'd.
 About the Cart, heare, how the Rout
 Of Rurall Younglings raise the shout ;
 Pressing before, some coming after,
 Those with a shout, and these with laughter.
 Some blesse the Cart ; some kisse the sheaves ;
 Some prank⁶ them up with Oaken leaves :
 Some crosse the Fill-horse ;⁷ some with great
Devotion, stroak the home-borne wheat :
 While other Rusticks, lesse attent
 To Prayers, then to Merriment, [than Run after with their breeches rent.

Well, on, brave boyes, to your Lords Hearth,
 Glitt'ring with fire ; where, for your mirth,
 Ye shall see first the large and cheefe
 Foundation of your Feast, Fat Beefe :
 With Upper Stories, Mutton, Veale
 And Bacon, (which makes full the meale)
 With sev'rall dishes standing by,
 As here a Custard, there a Pie,

⁵ See Glossarial Index s. v.

⁶ = adorn.

⁷ = the shaft or fill horse.

Food
+ the worse of her.

And here all-tempting Frumentie.⁷

And for to make the merry cheere,

If smirking⁸ Wine be wanting here,

There's that, which drowns all care, stout Beere :

- Which freely drink to your Lords health, -

remember why you are here.

- Then to the Plough, (the Common-wealth)

Next to your Flailes, your Fanes,⁹ your Fatts ;¹

Then to the Maids with Wheaten-Hats :

- To the rough Sickle, and crookt Sythe,

Drink, frolick, boyes, till all be blythe.

Feed, and grow fat ; and as ye eat,

Be mindfull, that the lab'ring Neat² -

= men identical with beasts.

- (As you) may have their fill of meat.

And know, besides, ye must revoke

The patient Oxe unto the Yoke,

And all goe back unto the Plough

And Harrow, (though they'r hang'd up now.)

And, you must know, your Lords word's true,

Feed him ye must, whose food fils you.

And that this pleasure is like raine,

⁷ =hulled wheat boiled in milk and variously seasoned.

⁸ We say 'winking' =sparkling.

⁹ =fanners or fans, for winnowing : or perchance 'vanes' to mark the wind = weather-cocks. I add the alternative because it is used provincially in both senses. ¹ =vats. ² =oxen.

Not sent ye for to drowne your paine,
But for to make it spring againe.

The Perfume.

TO-MORROW, Julia, I betimes must rise,
 For some small fault, to offer sacrifice :
 The Altar's ready ; Fire to consume
 The fat ; breathe thou, and there's the rich perfume.

Upon her Voice.

LET but thy voice engender with the string,
 And Angels will be borne, while thou dost sing.

Not to love.

HE that will not love, must be
 My Scholar, and learn this of me :
 There be in Love as many feares,
 As the Summers Corne has eares :
 Sighs, and sobs, and sorrowes more
 Then the sand, that makes the shore : [than Freezing cold, and fire heats,
 Fainting swoones, and deadly sweats ;
 Now an Ague, then a Fever,
 Both tormenting Lovers ever.

Wods't thou know, besides all these,
 How hard a woman 'tis to please?
 How crosse, how sullen, and how soone
 She shifts and changes like the Moone.
 How false, how hollow she's in heart;
 And how she is her owne least part :³
 How high she's priz'd, and worth but small;
 Little thou'lt love, or not at all.

To Musick. A Song.

MUSICK, thou Queen of Heaven, Care-charming spel,
 That strik'st a stilnesse into hell :
 Thou that tam'st Tygers, and fierce storms (that rise)
 With thy soule-melting Lullabies :
 Fall down, down, down, from those thy chiming spheres,
 To charme our soules, as thou enchant'st our eares.

To the Western wind.

1. SWEET Western Wind, whose luck it is,
 (Made rivall with the aire)
 To give Perenna's lip a kisse,
 And fan her wanton haire.

³ Meaning = very little herself, but chiefly and more usually somebody or something else: or perhaps more correctly "for every passion something, and for no passion truly anything," as says Rosalind in As You Like It.

2. Bring me but one, Ile promise thee,
 Instead of common showers,
 Thy wings shall be embalm'd by me,
 And all beset with flowers.

Upon the death of his Sparrow.

An Elegie.

WHY doe not all fresh maids appeare
 To work Love's Sampler⁴ onely here,
 Where spring-time smiles throughout the yeare?
 Are not here Rose-buds, Pinks, all flowers,
 Nature begets by th' Sun and showers,
 Met in one Hearce-cloth,⁵ to ore-spreed
 The body of the under-dead?
Phill,⁶ the late dead, the late dead Deare,
 O! may no eye distill a Teare
 For you once lost, who weep not here!

⁴ See Glossarial Index s. v. ⁵ = hearse-cloth (at funerals).

⁶ The use of 'Phil' for the 'sparrow' by Sir Philip Sidney, has led to ludicrous misunderstanding of his "Astrophel and Stella." Whence did Phil originate? Probably from their note, which was represented in English by 'phip, phip.' So in Skelton's elegy on Philip Sparrow:

"And when I sayd Phyp Phip
 Then he wold leape and skip."

See Lyly's Mother Bumbie.

Had Lesbia (too-too-kind) but known
 This Sparrow, she had scorn'd her own :
 And for this dead which under-lies,
 Wept out her heart, as well as eyes.
 But endlesse Peace, sit here, and keep
 My Phill, the time he has to sleep,
 And thousand Virgins come and weep,
 To make these flowrie Carpets show
 Fresh, as their blood ; and ever grow,
 Till passengers shall spend their doome,
 Not Virgil's Gnat had such a Tomb.⁷

To Primroses fill'd with morning dew.

1. WHY doe ye weep, sweet Babes ? can Tears
 Speak griefe in you,
 Who were but borne
 Just as the modest Morne
 Teem'd ⁸ her refreshing dew ?
 Alas, you have not known that shower,
 That marres a flower ;
 Nor felt th'unkind
 Breath of a blasting wind ;
 Nor are ye worne with yeares ;

⁷ Spurious : but Spenser translated it.

⁸ = poured out.

Or warpt, as we,
 Who think it strange to see,
 Such pretty flowers, (like to Orphans young,)
 To speak by Teares, before ye have a Tongue.

2. Speak, whim'ring Younglings, and make known
 The reason, why
 Ye droop, and weep ;
 Is it for want of sleep?
 Or childish Lullabie?
 Or that ye have not seen as yet
 The Violet?
 Or brought a kisse
 From that Sweet-heart, to this?
 No, no, this sorrow shown
 By your teares shed,
 Wo'd have this Lecture read,
 That things of greatest, so of meanest worth,
 Conceiv'd with grief are, and with teares brought forth.

END OF VOL. I.

JUN 26 1971

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY
